Following are some of the new laws made by the last legislature. Forbidding Magistrates from receiving any benefit from a native court, with a penalty of $50 to $200 fine or a 10 to 40 day jail sentence. There is an act providing for compulsory reading of the Bible in the public schools. Failure to fall on the part of the teacher to carry out the provisions of this law will be grounds for dismissal. Agricultural acts including one imposing constructive notice on a landlord that his tenant is a member of the co-operative association. Another measure requiring a loose leaf tobacco sales house to post notice of the real names of owners of tobacco for whom they sell. Another fixing 75 pounds as the measure for a bushel of corn.

During his absence in New York, attending the Democratic convention, Governor Fields left the running of our state to Acting Governor Perry, who promptly took advantage of the opportunity to create, ordain or appoint a goodly number of official military "heroes." Among those he sought to honor was A. L. Noe. But Mr. Noe is a man of old-fashioned habits and conceptions. He acknowledged the courtesy, but in his reply to the Acting Governor took occasion to say what must be in the hearts of multitudes of upstanding American citizens. He wrote:

"I believe the conferring of military honors on those who have rendered no military service is cheapening the heroism and hard-won distinction of our service men, whom we should honor forever."

Your attention is directed to the Sheriff's settlement on another page of this issue. This completes the 1923 settlement and shows all the tax collected by the Sheriff and to whom it was paid. Receipts are on file in the county clerk's office for all money paid out by the Sheriff. Boone county taxpayers should carefully read the settlement and if it should be found that any part of the county money has been received by any one not entitled to it, that fact should be reported to your Fiscal Court.

The State Primary election will be held next Saturday, August 2. The democrats and republicans will each nominate a candidate for U. S. Senator. There are two candidates on each of the tickets. There has not been much interest aroused as yet, and we are of the opinion that there will be a very light vote polled. None of the four candidates for the office has made a canvass and not many of the voters are aware that this election will be held, and care the less, judging from their conversation.

The Democrats who go to the polls next Saturday will find the names of Hon. A. O. Stanley and Hon. J. J. Hovey on the ballot as candidates for United States Senator. Both of the gentlemen are well known to the Democrats of Boone county. The Republicans also have on their ballot Hon. F. M. Sackett and Judge Bethum, two men who are well known in political circles. Very little interest is being taken in this county and a very light vote will be polled.

A general vaccination against small-pox has been ordered by the County Health Board in Grant county. There is no improvement in the small pox situation in Grant county and the health officers fear that the situation may become serious, and are doing all in their power to prevent the spread of that dreaded disease.

Some people who sold their liberty bonds when they were about 15 points below par, are probably convinced that there is no chance for a poor man in this country.

Not many people will be able to get into the Hall of Fame, but 100,000 or more can now frame their diplomas and hang them on the parlor wall.

Defeat of the Bond Issue Will Bring Higher Taxes on Real Estate.

There is one phase of the bond issue for $75,000,000 which has not been emphasized as it should be, which should be clearly understood by every voter.

Under the law which has been and is now in force, and will continue to be in force if the bond issue is defeated, every cent of tax collected on gasoline and every dollar collected for motor licenses must be used for the maintenance or construction of roads.

The last legislature imposed a tax of three cents a gallon on gasoline. There is no probability, we do not believe there is a possibility, of this being reduced, nor do we believe that there is a possibility of a reduction in the fees for motor licenses.

Under the bond bill, which has been declared constitutional by the court of appeals, the aggregate of the tax on gasoline, the fees for the motor licenses and 3.45 cents from the general fund may be used, and will be used, for the payment of interest and the retirement of the $75,000,000 bonds authorized under that bill.

Under the provisions of that bill $50,000,000 or two-thirds of the bonds, will be used for the construction of roads, and the surplus of revenues from those sources over and above the requirements of interest and sinking fund for the maintenance of the roads.

Under the provisions of that bill $25,000,000 or one-third of the bonds, will be used for the construction of new buildings and the procuring of new equipment for the University of Kentucky; for the rehabilitation of the penal, corrective and eleemosynary institutions; for the extension of the educational system of the state, including the erection of primary and high schools; for the buildings and equipment for the normal schools; for the extension of the colored normal and industrial institute at Frankfort, and for the erection of a similar institute in the southwestern part of the state; for a geographic and topographic survey of the state; for the inauguration of a warfare against tuberculosis; for new buildings at the institute for the blind and the institute for the deaf.

This $75,000,000 will be paid for out of the revenues furnished by the gasoline tax, the license fees for motor cars and the 3.45 cents from the general fund. There will not be required a dollar of additional taxes to be placed on real estate for any of those purposes specified in the bond bill.

If, however, the bond bill fails to be approved the aggregate of revenues which come from the tax on gasoline and licenses on motor cars will be devoted exclusively to the maintenance and construction of good roads, and it will be therefore imperative necessary for the state to levy additional taxes to accomplish the objects specified in the bond bill, or else to permit the present shameful conditions to continue to exist.

We have no doubt that the people of Kentucky will quickly demand that the conditions that now exist in the Eastern Kentucky Hospital for the Insane, the schools of reform and the penitentiary at Frankfort, shall be improved. Nor have we doubt that they will demand that the University of Kentucky be given sufficient money to furnish the opportunity to the youth of Kentucky to obtain an education.

Under the bond issue these objects can be secured without an increase in taxation. If the bond issue is defeated and all the revenues from the tax on gasoline and motor licenses be devoted to the maintenance and construction of good roads, it will be necessary to increase the taxes on real estate.

We urge all our readers to study the present law and the bill authorizing the bond issue, assure themselves as to the accuracy of the statements we make, and give full consideration to the alternatives. If the bond issue is approved by the people of the state the objects provided for in it will be obtained without an increase in taxes. If it is defeated it will be essential for the state to increase the direct taxation on real estate.—Lexington Herald.

MUSCULAR WORK

One of the reasons most frequently given by young men for leaving their country homes is that farming and other country jobs are "too hard work." There is a great fear in these days of any job that calls for real muscle.

Some people will work a growing boy harder than his unformed muscles are fit to bear. But if a fellow has a good physique, muscular work that calls for real muscle is developing to the human body. The fellow who plays college foot ball have to do muscular work of a hard kind, but they come out healthy young giants. The country boy's job can equally be the means of building up a robust constitution that will wear far longer than the city man can expect that his will.

Most useful kind of "pitcher's hat" now is to see which can pitch the most hay.

TRAGEDY IN THE WHITE HOUSE

It is a strange turn of fate that the White House, which was the center of a great national tragedy less than a year ago, again becomes the home of grief to the president.

Such an event suggests that the greatest honors which the nation can give are no protection against the ordinary sorrows of the human lot. All must suffer from the great misfortunes of mankind, and success in the competitions of the world is very frequently accompanied by great personal calamities that darken the lives of those who seemed to have all that earth and their country could bestow.

It is one fine aspect of our political life, that bitter as the differences of opinion may be, and fiercely as statesmen misceivene and attack each other, yet when trouble comes, our people rise unanimously to extend the hand of sympathy. For a moment the asperities of conflict are forgotten.

It was a fine and gracious act for the Democratic convention to forget its broils and send a message of sympathy to the president, and later to adjourn out of respect to the chief executive's grief. Such a friendly testimonial of feeling offered under such circumstances counts a lot in misfortune, as it reveals to strikers people that after all the conflicts and struggles of the world do not go very deep into the hearts of the people.

It will be the hope of the nation that the president and his wife will be sustained in this hour by a high power. Their strong characters will lead them to bear themselves well under affliction. They have given to the world a noble boy of great promise. He has been called away to another life, and one must believe that in some future state this thwarted existence will have its ample chance to express itself and perform its mission.

KENTUCKY CATTLE BEING TESTED

According to records from the office of W. F. Biles, Federal Section of the Bureau of Animal Industry, Kentucky has made a splendid showing with regard to the number of cattle that have been tested for tuberculosis in the past four years. In 1920 when this work was started, 606 lots of cattle were tested, with a total number of 11,576. The number of reactors was 305 or about 2 1/2 per cent. Realizing the importance of this work and what it meant to the health of the people of the State, the Extension Division of the College of Agriculture planned an educational campaign in connection with this work. In this campaign an effort was made to educate the people as to the value of having this work carried on and how the work was handled. Motion pictures, lectures and stereotypical slides were used in these campaigns in the various counties to create interest on the part of the people to the necessity of having cows of the county tuberculosis tested. Dr. T. P. Polk, Veterinarian in Charge of the Division of the College of Agriculture was in charge of this educational work. The Live-stock Sanitary Board, Bureau of Animal Industry, and the U. S. Department of Agriculture all cooperating on this project.

As a result of this work in 1921, the number of lots of cattle had increased from 606 to 1794 and the total number of individuals tested was 37,705 with the number of reactors being 71,757 and a percentage of reactors was steadily increased until in 1923, 10,536 lots of cattle were tested, the total number of individuals tested being 71,797 and a percentage of reactors 1.7 per cent. In 1923 the work was carried on in 10 counties, in 1924 this work is being carried on in 13 counties so far this year. Six counties being tested and released, for as soon as the cattle have been tested the county is released from the list.

About all some city folks are willing to do for the country districts, is to present them with a lot of dust blown from their speeding automobiles into the fields along the road.

The college students would find a summer spent on the farms of Boone county would be a wonderful thing for their foot ball game next fall.

DOGS ARE TRAINED TO GUIDE THE BLIND

Experts Find Female More Reliable Than the Male.

Potsdam, Germany.—In this historic city, where once Frederick the Great, lover of animals, erected burial mounds for his favorite greyhounds directly outside Sans Souci castle, there has been established a national training school for a type of dog conspicuous for the Red Cross insignia carried on the head—these guide dogs for blind soldiers.

Infinite patience must be exercised by the two trainers in charge to prepare the dogs for their task. Those selected are almost invariably female shepherds. It has been found that female dogs are the only dependable ones. Males are apt to forget their duties when they see a good chance for a fight. With the female the maternal instinct, the feeling of caring affectionately for the blind master, is uppermost.

Whip is never applied. Ruecker and Wechering, the two trainers of the Potsdam kennel, put the dogs through a rigid course of training in which, however, the whip is never applied. The dog must learn to walk slowly, to obey the master's every word, to fetch things for him when desired, not only to avoid the holes and protrusions and ditches dangerous to itself, but also to pull the master over far enough for him to avoid danger.

Supposing, for instance, there is a projecting mailbox. It is no hindrance to the dog, but the animal must be taught that its master should be so led as to avoid running into it. These dogs must also learn to gauge the speed of traffic so as to indicate to their master whether it is safe to cross the street.

When the time has come for the dog to pass its final examination the trainer harnesses the dog and bids it lead its teacher, whose eyes are tied for the purpose, through Potsdam. The trainer can then tell whether the dog has mastered the technique leading.

Psychology is Great Factor. Next the prospective master is sent for. All blind persons who desire a guide dog must take up residence in the training school for a period of six weeks, so that master and dog may get used to each other. Not always is the dog first selected for a particular blind man the proper one for that person. Psychological factors play a great role in this matter. During the six weeks' trial period, the shepherd dog remains at the prospective master's side day and night.

Few persons perhaps realize that the task for a dog of acting as guide to a blind man is a nerve-racking one. The Potsdam trainers figure that no guide dog lasts longer than four or five years. After that it is a nervous wreck. There have been numerous cases on record of such dogs going crazy from actual nervousness.

"... life's titful fever."—Macbeth.

Thoreau built himself a little cabin out by Walden pond and there lived the simplest sort of existence for more than a year; because, he said, "I wished to live deliberately, to front only the essential facts of life, and see if I could not learn what it had to teach, and not when I came to die, discover that I had not lived."

He obeyed Epictetus' injunction, "Cease to make yourselves slaves, first of things, and then upon their account, of the men who have the power either to bestow or take them away"—he had in his house no furniture that was not essential to his needs; he lived on the simplest foods, and he supplied practically all his needs from his own garden. In this manner he secured a lucid interval in "life's titful fever," and learned that "When we are unburied and wise, we perceive that only great and worthy things have any permanent and absolute existence."

A generation ago the stress of humanity secured a momentary lucid interval in life's titful fever once each week. The automobile, the movies, the radio and a general relaxation of the blue laws have changed that. Sunday is now as filled and hurried as any other day of the week.

Nowadays few of us secure even the slightest lucid interval—we never at all get away from the needs and duties and responsibilities of everyday existence. Yet these are things without permanent existence—things such as those that interest us during the delirium of fever, things that are real for the moment only.

The savage who sits on the bank and fishes or who ranges the woods in search of game has a lifetime in which to evolve a theory of life; but his civilized brother is so busy getting to the office on time, reading the papers, dressing conventionally, seeing all the shows, inventing labor-saving devices, and the like, that he never has time to think of life until time for death. Then he cries with Peer Gynt:

So unspeakably poor, then, a soul can be. Back to nothingness, into the gray of the mist. Thou beautiful earth, be not angry with me. That I trampled thy grasses to no avail. Thou beautiful sun, thou hast squandered away. Thy glory of light in an empty hut. There was no one within it, to hear and warm. The answer they tell me, was never at home.

Porter House

In ante-Volstead days the "porter house," where porter and other malt liquors were sold, was quite a place for social gatherings. To offset competition, the proprietor of a certain New York "porter house" made his place a favorite by serving choice beef steaks, cut from behind the best ribs. This particular cut soon came to be known exclusively as "porter-house steak."

RULES FOR INCREASING WEIGHT DURING VACATION

Underweight has been classed by child specialists as a physical defect. Seven per cent is allowed as normal underweight but it is thought by those who are interested in keeping children well that every growing child should come up to his normal weight. It is better for the child if he can be a few pounds overweight. In studying many thousands of children over the United States it has been found that the average underweight among school children is from 20 to 33 per cent. In Kentucky the percentage among rural school children is much higher. In a study recently made in one of the counties it was found that among the 1,000 children examined in the schools that 55 per cent were more than 7 per cent underweight. Parents should consider this matter seriously and endeavor to have their children come up to normal weight during the vacation period.

The following simple rules were sent to the parents of all school children who were 7 per cent underweight. Where these rules have been followed the children have gained steadily.

1. Regularity in eating and resting. Meals should not be more than four and a half hours apart.
2. Eat no candy, ice cream, fruits, etc., between meals.
3. Give sweets at the end of the meal in small amounts.
4. Drink one glass of milk at each meal.
5. Do not drink tea or coffee or eat fried foods at any time.
6. Eat a cooked cereal, a green vegetable and some fruit at every meal. Drink a glass of milk with crackers at 3 p. m.
7. Drink at least four glasses of water each day.
8. Have a rest period of one hour each day.
9. Have a regular bowel movement each day.
10. Sleep 10 hours each night with the windows open.

If your child has a physical defect have this corrected so he will be free to gain.

THE MIRROR AND CIVILIZATION.

If anyone should ask you what invention or discovery has done the most for this old world of ours, and you replied, "The steam engine," or "The telegraph," you would be mistaken. They have done much for the world, but greater things still have been accomplished by—the mirror.

Don't pass this by in derision. Open the roof of the city's houses and peer in; you will see mirrors in the homes of the cultured, but you will find none in the houses of the vulgar.

There is something the matter with the man who doesn't want to see how he looks. You have only to glance at his face to know what it is.

The blood-shot eye and bloated lip that a man sees in the morning after a night's carouse do more for the cause of temperance than any amount of legislation. For if that man heeds what he sees he will do differently, but if he insists on dissipation he will finally grow to hate the mirror which tells him the ugly truth—he will avoid it, he will not look at it!

America's women are the most beautiful on the face of the globe. Do you know why?

It is because the price of glass. Every woman can have a mirror on her dressing table, and most of them have a mirror in their handbags. Don't laugh at the radiant feminine creature who pretends to look in the chop window, but is in reality using the pane to see how she looks. That's what her so pretty.

The mirror is the bulwark of civilization. Without it we would sit wearing rings in our noses.

The man who sees himself as others see him has begun to grow.

Love at first sight occasionally endures all right, but lovers should be certain that their sight will not fail.

FATE AS A LIFE COMPANION

"I have learned to accept my fate as my life companion."

There are many ways of accepting one's fate. Most of us, however, give it small welcome and rail at it. We see and know others who have so much more. We are targets for all trickery. At least we think so.

And thus viewing the matter, we accept fate as our life enemy. Things are as we hold them to be. If I am inimicable to fate, fate is my enemy, and will remain that until I change my attitude. If I would have fate for my friend, I must be friendly to fate.

But here is a new thought. Fate shall be my life companion. We shall go along together, and it shall be some part of my business to make the journey pleasant for fate. Whether or not fate returns the compliment, we shall not quarrel. There is no time in this life for quibbles.

"And it shall stay thorn of my flesh and not become thorn of my mind."

How many of you can see the greatness of such a resolve. How many have made it! And kept it!

Why not make it now? Why not resolve from this day, there shall be no further usurpation of the mind by matters belonging to the flesh? Have you ever thought much about this tyranny of matter over mind?

Have you ever realized, in any measure how possible it is to keep the affairs of life properly pigeon-holed?

It would not seem so, for the majority persists in making every little ache and pain and distress a matter of the mind.

It is thought over and talked over and gone over again and again, until it assumes abnormal proportions.

It is no longer a mere thorn, but a spear, a fiery dart that inflicts constant and terrible pain.

And all because you made the mistake of transplanting it from the soil where it belonged to a place far too rich for it.

But even in this there is a lesson worth learning. You have seen what this richer soil does with the thorns.

Why not transplant in it the FLOWERS of the flesh, instead?

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

Whereas, It has pleased Almighty God in His infinite wisdom to remove from our midst our sister Agnes Tanner Walton, who departed this life June 14th, 1924, after twenty-eight long months of patient suffering.

Resolved, That in the death of sister Walton our church and community has lost a good woman and kind neighbor, and her devoted husband, relatives and friends have suffered a loss that can never be repaired.

Resolved, That we extend our heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved husband and commend him for comfort to him who never forsakes those who put their trust in Him.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the Boone County Recorder for publication, a copy sent to the husband and another spread on the record of Pt. Pleasant Christian church.

Recognizing that a warless world cannot be brought about by wishing, the Federal Council of Churches has issued a call for "practical action" an appeal to churchmen to insist on Congress adopting constructive international policies, an appeal which through local congregations, reaches more than 200,000 church members, who are asked to express their convictions by their votes.

Ezra Meeker

Ezra Meeker, noted pioneer, ninety-four years old, announced that he intended to file petitions as a candidate for representative from the Forty-seventh district in the state legislature of Washington. His purpose in seeking a seat was to support the Naches Pass highway project and oppose attempts to put through an application to build a state highway through Chinook pass.

Ezra Meeker was among the first few hundred to cross the continent by ox team, and was actually the last.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

Every year death reaps a rich harvest in our vineyard, and there are few homes among us where the silent reaper has no t saddened the hearthstone and left a vacant chair.

Again we are called upon to perform the last sad rites for a brother.

Whereas, the Supreme Chancellor of the Universe has seen fit in his infinite wisdom to call from our earthly lodge to that celestial lodge on high, our brother, W. B. Ryle, on June twelfth one thousand nine hundred and twenty-four, therefore,

Be it resolved, That we extend to the bereaved family our sympathy in their sorrow and commend them to God, who careth for all.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to his brothers, a copy sent to the Boone County Recorder for publication and a copy spread on our minutes.

The Sheriff has this money deposited to his credit as Sheriff in the Banks of Boone County, subject to the order of this Court. The books in his office show accurately the financial transactions in each department and the debit and credit items therein balanced to a cent. The bonds which have been redeemed by the county and the interest coupons which have matured and been paid are filed with this settlement; they should be destroyed. The bonded debt of the County has been reduced from $300,000 to $109,500 and the County has on hand now sufficient funds to call in and retire one fourth of said outstanding bonded indebtedness.

The suit by the Banks to test the right of the County to levy a tax on their property for local purposes has prevented the Sheriff from collecting and reporting any tax for County purposes against property in this county assessed at $556,535. If this litigation is finally decided in favor of the County, the County and School Funds will be benefited by the tax on this property, and if it should be decided against the County no loss of the revenue for the year 1923 will be sustained for the reason that that assessment has not been considered in estimating the revenues for the various funds reported in this settlement. All of which is respectfully submitted.

137 Average Million Income

London.—Income tax payers in Great Britain and northern Ireland whose incomes for the year 1922-23 amounted to more than $300,000 each numbered 137, according to figures made public by the treasury. The total income of the 137 averaged nearly $1,000,000 each.

The pituitary gland lies in a bony cavity at the base of the brain and performs functions of the brain. Its disorders are regarded as the cause of such human abnormalities as those of the circus giants. Doctor Abel is endeavoring to isolate the absolutely pure principle of the pituitary organ so that its effects can be studied with exactness. He was the first to do this, according to the university, in the case of epinephrine (adrenalin), the product of the adrenal glands.

A Simple Audio Frequency Amplifier Circuit.

Three small fixed plate condensers are inserted in the circuit in the 6, 7 and 8 positions shown, and should be about .0003 mfd. each. It is advisable for the dielectric of these condensers to be of an insulating property of a high order, otherwise the amplifier is likely to be "noisy."

Negative charge. This instrument will be found to produce quite excellent results, providing care be taken in the selection of resistances, although it cannot be said that the amplification so obtained is equal to that of an intertube transformer arrangement. It will be necessary to regulate the filaments' current carefully in order to obtain the best results, and the best condition of sensitiveness will make itself apparent when a tap of the first tube results in a microphonic effect in the telephones.

It must be remembered when using the 180-degree type of variocoupler that it may be necessary to reverse the connections to the rotor. When the proper connections are obtained and the rotor is turned parallel to the stator winding, a terrific screech should be heard in the phones. In other words, the best point of tuning is arrived at with the rotor at about right angles to the stator.—New York Herald.

Inside Out

(By Peter Keegan)

Special Correspondent of the RECORDER

With no outstanding events to engage its interest, Washington has been all excited about the disappearance—again of President Coolidge's cat. The cat, who is well known to those who visit the White House regularly, strayed away several months ago and was brought back after the news of his disappearance had been broadcasted along the eastern seaboard by radio. He immediately became a personage and his photograph appeared in all the papers, while cartoonists used him as the subject for their pictures. Now Tige has gone again, and the President says that as far as he is concerned, the cat can stay away, in view of the fact that he does not appreciate living in the Executive Mansion.

Brigadier General Frank T. Hines, Director of the United States Veterans Bureau, is willing to forgive and forget. Thomas L. Deaver, a young ex-soldier who thought that he was not getting a square deal from the Government in the matter of compensation, beat up on the Director. Hines was laid up for two weeks, but now announces that no charges will be filed against Deaver and that the young man's case will be given prompt and thorough attention by bureau officials.

Startling statements to the effect that at least a thousand aliens are smuggled into the United States each day of the year has aroused Department of Labor officials to more strenuous efforts to stop this brand of bootlegging. Special officers are to be stationed along the Mexican and Canadian borders, augmented by air patrols, to head off the aliens as they come sneaking in. Lack of sufficient agents has been the chief cause of the failure of the Labor Department to stop this illegal immigration into the United States.

Senator Jim Watson, of Indiana, has come back to Washington with the estimate that President Coolidge will not fall to have a plurality in the electoral college after the November election. As a member of the Republican Senatorial Campaign Committee, Watson gathered his information in the course of the work of the committee in helping Senators keep their seats on Capitol Hill. The Indiana Senator figures that Coolidge's plurality will be around twenty votes with Senator LaFollette in second place and John W. Davis, third. If, says Watson, Coolidge does not win out in the electoral college, he thinks Charles W. Bryan, of Nebraska, the Democratic Vice-presidential nominee, will be the next President.

The past few weeks have been marked by more intensive American participation in European affairs. Both Secretary of State Hughes and Secretary of the Treasury Mellon have been in London in conference with Prime Ministers of France, England and Italy, while Ambassador Kellogg has taken a prominent part in the allied conference, which is working out a scheme to put the Dawes reparations plan into operation. Two speeches have been made in London by Hughes on politics and economic problems and his promise of American aid in the restoration of Europe has received the hearty and official O. K. of President Coolidge.

Senator LaFollette's Presidential campaign is booming along now, following the selection of Senator Burton K. Wheeler as his running mate and the naming of the committee which will have direct charge of the drive for votes from members of both old parties. It has now been determined that the LaFollette campaign will not be limited to the agricultural states of the Midwest, but will be waged from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

Democratic headquarters here are in charge of Clement L. Shaver, of West Virginia, the "original" Davis man, who is slated to succeed Cordell Hull of Tennessee as Chairman of the National Committee. Hull is still chairman officially, but he has stepped back to let Shaver take up the reins.

Funeral services were conducted Monday, August 4th, at St. Paul's church, Florence at 9:30 a. m. in interment at St. Mary's cemetery. He is survived by his widow and several children. Mr. O'Hara has many friends in Boone county who are grieved to hear of his death. He was a farmer and a good citizen. His widow and children have the sympathy of all in their bereavement.

FARM FACTS

Make arrangements to sow cover crops in order to prevent soil erosion this winter.

Early cut tobacco ground makes a good seed bed for alfalfa.

Watch the silo to make sure that the hoops do not become loosened so that a high wind will blow it down.

In the month of August is a good time to remove bushes from the fence rows.

August and September are good months to make repairs on cattle barns.

A good investment to provide a cool, shady place where the cows can go during the middle of the day.

Treat sheep for stomach worms now.

Produce quality products. The market likes them.

Now is the time to put out celery plants. Cover them in the middle of the day to protect them from the heat.

Watch the bugs on the late potatoes, as they may offer a sorry entire crop.

HOW TO MEET HOT WEATHER

Many people worry a lot about hot weather, and are much prostrated by it. They may spend a lot of money to go to places where they will avoid the heat. This is a pleasant thing to do, but the majority of people can not afford to do that. They must remain at home most of the time, and grapple with hot weather somehow.

The following would seem a good common-sense philosophy. The human body has a certain power of adjusting itself to temperature extremes. If people obey the laws of health, and are careful to take the requisite amount of sleep, exercise, etc., they are likely to acquire physical vigor so they can adjust themselves more easily to such extremes, and the elements in the body that perform this adjustment ought to operate more surely and readily. Many people who complain bitterly of the heat, have no reason for fault-finding, as they have never given any thought or attention to the maintenance of their health, which would enable them to meet these extremes without suffering.

THERE'S A REASON

Some farmers can work twelve hours a day on a piece of land and make a bare living.

Other farmers can work on the same piece of land ten hours a day and make a living and profit besides.

Some men can take a business enterprise and make a fortune, while others who go seriously into debt.

Other men can take the same enterprise, with all its handicaps, and make it profitable.

There's a reason for the difference. The successful man studies conditions and analyzes suggestions and makes improvements as rapidly as it is possible for him to do so. His returns are in proportion to the activity of his head.

The failure is slow to change. He doesn't take any stock in new fangled notions. What was good enough for his father is good enough for him. And that is all he gets.

When put to practical use, brains become a valuable asset. When merely carried around in a skull they are a liability.

GOOD INVESTMENT FOR FARMERS

A steady, reliable source of profit to be used in helping retire the mortgage hanging over the farmer, to pay running expenses and to improve the bank account is found in the dairy cow. The cow represents this source of profit when properly handled, according to E. M. Prewitt, College of Agriculture. The income from the cow is regular, not like some other sources of income where the farmer receives a pay check once a year, or certain crops where a pay check may not come once a year. Five to ten good cows can be handled without extra labor, and these cows will bring a good, steady income if properly managed.

T. J. McNeal, formerly of Boone County, but who for several years has made his home with his son at Carlisle, Pa., accompanied by his son and wife, and Mrs. Bradshaw and daughter, of Ludlow, were Burlington visitors last Wednesday afternoon. Mr. McNeal has passed his eightieth milestone through life's journey, but does not look to be over sixty. While in town he called at the Recorder's office and mentioned that he might keep posted as to what is going on back in his "Old Kentucky Home".

The August term of the Boone Circuit Court will begin August 11, 1924, with Hon. Sidney Gaines, Judge, presiding. The Commonwealth will be represented by Hon. John J. Howe, and B. H. Riley, County Attorney. The criminal docket contains forty cases, very few are for the violation of the liquor laws. On the common law docket twenty-five continued and twelve appearance cases will be called. The Continued Equity docket contains forty continued and nine appearance cases. On the first day of the term Judge Gaines will impanel a grand jury who will investigate all violations of the criminal laws in the county. The term of the court is for two weeks, but it is expected that all that are for hearing will be disposed of within the first week.

Left Behind

Senator A. O. Stanley renominated in last Saturday's primary election by 20,000, defeating John Junior Howe, Carrollton. Stanley's majority is expected to exceed 20,000 when final count is made.

Fred M. Sappert, of Louisville, wins the Republican nomination over Judge Bethurum by 25,000.

BOONE COUNTY'S VOTE

GRIM REAPER

CALLS GEO. ESPENSCHIDE WHO DIES AT JEWISH HOSPITAL, CINCINNATI.

After having combated the effects of a serious operation for several days, Geo. Espenschied passed away last Saturday afternoon about 2:40 p. m. at the Jewish hospital in Cincinnati.

Mr. Espenschied had not been in the best of health for several years and on Sunday July 20th, when he took seriously ill, it was decided to remove him to a hospital for an operation. He was taken to the Jewish hospital on Monday and an operation immediately performed which revealed a cancer of the stomach.

The patient then developed pneumonia, from the effects of the operation, against which he put up a gallant fight, but was unable to recover.

The deceased leaves a wife, formerly Eunice Sullivan, daughter of Kibb Sullivan, and one daughter, as well as a large number of friends, which he had cultivated in this community.

The remains were brought to Burlington for interment in the Odd-Fellows cemetery on Tuesday afternoon at 4:00 p. m.

CIVIC PRIDE

A man driving through town a few days ago in an automobile tossed a newspaper from his car into the street.

A housewife opened a can of vegetables and the empty can found its way into the alley.

A young man and woman wandered aimlessly down the street engrossed in themselves and the candy they were eating and the box was dropped on the sidewalk.

A farmer's horse lost a shoe in the street and a passerby, afraid of a puncture, picked it up and threw it into a vacant lot.

A convivial spirit in a secluded spot up the alley swallowed his last drink and dropped the bottle where he stood.

And so it goes on from day to day, year to year, and has been going on for many years.

A discarded article thrown down here, another there, something somewhere else, but always something that adds to the rubbish which clogs up the streets and alleys, and makes the landscape less attractive.

It is pure thoughtlessness—nothing else. But the continued practice of this sort of habits on the part of a majority of the people would soon make a deserted junk heap out of any community.

Stop and think before you do anything that will detract from the attractive and cleanly appearance of your town.

SPECIAL COMMISSIONER'S SALE.

Hubert Conner, as special commissioner in the case of Hicks, et al vs. Newmarch et al, sold last Monday at the court house door, a house and lot in Hebron, which formerly belonged to Ada Newmarch, deceased widow of R. W. Rouse, also deceased.

Under construction of the will of R. W. Rouse, embodied in a judgment recently rendered by J. M. Lansing, special judge, the proceeds of this sale will go to the Lutheran church at Hebron, the same to remain a perpetual endowment to said church.

M. L. Crutcher, who now lives on the property, was the purchaser at a price of $3,200.

A transcript of the record in this case is now being prepared in the Circuit Clerk's office, preparatory to an appeal to the Court of Appeals, which will be taken by the plaintiff.

TO THE WANDERERS

Many of our people are taking trips around the country. They can do something for their home town while away.

The loyal one town man keeps his eyes open to see what other communities of the same character are doing. If he sees others setting out trees and laying out parks and play grounds and improving their streets and sidewalks, he comes home and tells them they would better do the same thing.

Also he does not forget to say good words for his town, his county, and his state. Chance remarks of this kind dropped here and there have a great deal to do with building up a community. The statesman has acquired a marvelous growth largely by the enthusiasm of their people, who always keep boosting for the home locality.

LOCAL HAPPENINGS

TIRES STOLEN

Wm. Collins, of Florence, left his Ford coupe sitting on the street beside his father-in-law, W. H. Goodridge's home one night last week and the next morning when he awoke he found the machine resting completely on its wheels, minus tires and rims. The spare tire, which was locked on the truck, was not disturbed, but the switch key was left in the machine, and why the thieves did not drive away the whole outfit, which could have been done much more easily and quickly, is a mystery.

The tires were Silvertown cords, and all new.

The Executive Board of the Farmers Mutual Fire Insurance Co., of Boone county, held a meeting at their office in Burlington, last Saturday afternoon. The meeting was held on Saturday instead of Monday (county court day) on account of the absence of Mr. R. B. Huey, the Secretary, who left Sunday with several other Burlington citizens for a month's trip through the Canadian Rockies and California.

Hayden White, colored, who moved to Cincinnati from this neighborhood about one year ago, died at his home in that city, last Thursday, aged about 65 years. The remains were brought to Burlington Sunday and buried in the cemetery near town. He is survived by his wife and several children.

The quarterly meeting of the W. M. U. of North Bend Association will be held in the Bellevue Baptist church Thursday August 14th, at 10 o'clock. Mrs. L. L. Roberts, State W. M. U. President, will be the speaker.

Mrs. McCauley and children, and Mrs. Fryman and children, after a week's stay with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Hickman, left for their homes last Thursday, at Harlan and Cynthia, Ky.

Many folks who complain of the difficulties of these times, are the grandsons of those who used to get along with talow candles and stage-coaches and have a grand old time too.

Fact that a man does not neglect to get his dog licensed, does not prove that he will be able to remember the date when the primaries are held for the coming elections.

J. M. Eddins sold, one day last week to Mrs. Margaret Weisman, of Cincinnati, the Add Robbins farm of 62 acres on Gunpowder creek. Price $1417.

While oratory is a great help in getting elected to office, it does not help a great deal to run the country's business more economically.

So many women are getting business positions, that there may be nothing left for many fellows but to marry a good money-earner.

It is asserted that America needs men who can see visions, but the people seem to feel more in need of provisions.

RED CROSS NEWS.

As a result of requests from several Central Division States, Red Cross representatives are visiting summer sessions of State Normal schools to present the work of the Junior Red Cross.

Mr. James T. Nicholson, Director Junior Red Cross Washington Division, has been appointed Assistant Manager.

Replies to the Junior cartons sent last Christmas are still coming to National Headquarters. Some are not addressed to particular schools because addresses have been lost by the children who received them.

A GOOD SPORT

It is said that Calvin Coolidge died a martyr to the Young America idea of being a "good sport."

With a blister on his heel caused by playing tennis, he stuck it out until he became delirious with fever. Then it was too late. The septic infection had spread through his system and he did not have the endurance to throw it off.

Everybody admires a boy with courage, with "nerve" and Spartan-like endurance, but a man's life through a nation that it is weak to admit suffering, is no part of courage.

This is a fact that every American boy should learn. Health comes foremost in the life of every youth, for without it, he is handicapped in the struggles that come with manhood.

Health is impossible without good care of the body.

Young Coolidge is not to be blamed for the course he pursued. He acted in accordance with the customs among boys.

It is a foolish idea that must be corrected by parents, because it may cost the life of many a fine specimen of American youth.

The funeral services were conducted by Pastor Royer last Saturday at Hopeful and his popularity as a neighbor was demonstrated by the large crowd that gathered to pay the last tribute of respect to him.

After a very appropriate service at the church the remains were buried by those of his wife in the Hopeful cemetery. The family have the sympathy of the entire community in their bereavement.

PREPARING FOR SCHOOL DURING THE SUMMER

The school slogan in many communities of Kentucky is "Make the school fit for the child." Splendid schools have been erected, efficient teachers employed and every opportunity along educational lines is given the children.

The school authorities in some of these communities feel that something more should be done for the child in preparing him for school life. A movement has recently been started by school Superintendents, Mothers' Clubs and Parent Teacher Associations to have a physical examination of all children BEFORE they enter school. Notes are sent home to parents thru school children urging that the little children under six years of age be taken to the family doctor for an examination, and, if the child has any defect needing correction, that this be attended to during the summer months. By so doing the child will be in good condition when he enters school in the fall and will not lose time from school through toothache, tonsillitis and other illness. It is hoped that the pre-school children be vaccinated and given the toxin and anti-toxin vaccine for diphtheria this summer.

In many localities there are held regularly child health conferences for pre-school children. At these conferences the children are weighed and measured, a complete physical examination is made and the mother advised as to the methods of keeping her child well or bringing him up to normal. These conferences are free. The doctors of the community give their services to the little children and the county health nurse assists in advising the mother. It is hoped that mothers with children who are to enter school next fall will avail themselves of the advantages of such conferences by taking their children to the conference during the summer months.

It should be the privilege as well as the duty of every mother to send her child to school physically fit; her slogan should be "Make the child fit for the school."

THE "PITTSBURG PLUS" SCHEME

The "Pittsburg Plus" system of price making employed by the United States Steel Company is only another technical invention of astute attorneys to circumvent the purpose and intent of law—and yet not become criminally liable. Under this system, prices on rolled steel sold, say, in Chicago, are fixed according to the price in the Pittsburgh district, plus the freight rate from the Pittsburgh plant to the point of consumption. This means that builders and others throughout the Middle West—are forced to pay for their structural steel manufactured or instance, in Gary, a price which gives the Gary mill a normal profit and, in addition, gives it cost of transportation from Pittsburgh, which has not been expended.

After five years the Federal Trade Commission found against the system under nine counts. These included the charges that it is contrary to the public interest, that it is a price-fixing scheme, that it is not based on the laws of supply and demand, that it is made possible by the dominant position occupied in the steel industry by the United States Steel Corporation, that it destroys competitors, and that it increases prices. It also called prominent attention to the fact that the great public interest in the case had been evidenced by the action of thirty-two states in forming an association known as the Associated States Opposing Pittsburg Plus. It is claimed that the abolition of the system is of vast moment to the Middle West and to consumers throughout the country, but the Supreme Court will probably have the last say.

GOING TO COLLEGE

Most boys and girls who were graduated from high school last spring have decided by this time whether they will continue their education by going to some liberal arts college or technical school.

It is a critical time in the life of every young person—the period when they realize for the first time that there are problems outside of school books, and the decision they reach now will have a very great influence on their life.

What the high school graduate does this summer determines what kind of a citizen he will be—whether he decides to go to college, enter a trade or just drift along without trying to get additional training to make himself more capable, his life purposeless.

Giving a boy or girl four years of education means to many parents considerable of a sacrifice and the loss of the companionship and help of their children, but in most cases, if that sacrifice is made now, the four years will be richer for both parents and children in every way.

Thousands upon thousands of high school graduates are lost to further education because not enough interest is taken in them and in their future.

President Coolidge recently said that the foundation of modern government is laid upon a sufficiently trained and enlightened intelligence, and that the real creative ability that develops the country is supplied by the genius of the people and not by the government.

How closely education is connected with the cultivation of the national genius is shown by the fact that one person in every four in the United States is directly concerned with education, either as teacher, student or administrator.

Aside from the personal benefit obtained, every young man and woman should seek knowledge so as to be better able to function as citizens of the United States.

Ignorance is an economic and moral waste and education is the only means of breaking the power of evil and liberating the spirit of truth.

LEADERS AND FOLLOWERS

The remark has frequently been made, particularly when Congress was voting and disputing last spring, and when the Democratic convention was stalled by stormy controversies, that there is a great lack of leadership. It is almost disheartening to find that the great leaders to come forward and take the place of the men of the past, who it is sometimes said have left no successors.

The question might well be raised, however, whether if great leaders were to arise, would the people recognize them as such?

It is happening all the time that people of insight are offering wise and splendid suggestions, which if believed would lead the country out of its difficulties. Yet these ideas are often turned down with great haste, while multitudes of the people who, after self-constituted leaders who have little of the gift which the country demands.

The first thing to do to secure good leadership, is for the people to recognize them when they appear. Many who have been capable of leadership have been relegated to back seats. There can not be leaders unless there are followers who are willing to go where the leaders suggest.

The leaders are to a large extent the reflection of the life of the people. If the people are not worthy of having the able and wise leaders, the latter will not appear, because they are not recognized. It is a superficial view to insist that the great men have all disappeared, and that we have no worthy successors of those who have led the country in the past.

The great men of the past were denounced in their own day as heartless. If we attack our public men now, there will be plenty of leaders when the people are ready to be led.

Every form of life exists for a definite purpose. It has its function in creation. The cutworm simply does what he is intended to do. He is a destroyer, pure and simple. For he levels a whole row of vegetation before he gets through, though one bean stalk would find him throughout his entire lifetime.

Nature sends destroyers like the cutworm to keep us constantly fighting a war for living.

Science doesn't want us to have too easy a time. If we had we'd get lazy—wouldn't you?—and the toll that we pay for our laziness and our lack of character makes human progress.

No muscular strength without exercise. No wisdom or knowledge without hard thought. No strength of character without temptations and obstacles.

Life is full of enticements, pests, goads, and seemingly unnecessary annoyances. But that's because life is so big and so full of things that we can't see and don't know what a symphony is to the athlete.

Since history commenced the world has been blessed with cutworms—designated "fools" or "cranks," "mugwumps," "radicals," etc., but they have produced results. It is to them that the world owes much of its advances. Just run your eye down the long list of this history and you will be surprised. What the next generation will produce in this line is difficult to conjecture—but the threshold is crowded with candidates, and there's room for many more. Nobody expects the next purpose of life until he goes through and conquers it.

The "favorite sons" win much of their attention at the political convention, which may be all right so long as they don't get to chasing after the favorite daughters.

The people whose time is too valuable to make small economies, are frequently too costly help for any one to employ.

FIVE SOURCES OF PROFIT

We find in the dairy cow five different sources of profit, the milk or cream sold, the skin milk, the manure, the calf and the cow itself.

Placing the estimate very conservatively, at least 300 pounds of butter fat per year should be produced by each cow. We find that the average yearly price of butter fat is 40 cents per pound. This is an income of $120 per cow during the year. The second source of profit is the skim milk.

From cows producing 300 pounds of butter fat there will be approximately 600 gallons of skim milk, worth 3½ cents per gallon, would give an additional profit of $21.00. At the present value of manure it can be figured to be worth from a fertilizer standpoint, containing nitrogen, phosphorus and potash at least $2.50 per ton. The average cow, so that this 12 tons of manure yearly, will produce should be worth $30. In addition, the owner has the calves which under ordinary conditions will be half male and half female. For heifers should be worth from $25 to $40, thus it will be seen that $15 per year can be added in value of the calves. The last source of income is the cow herself. She is good for 10 to 15 years.

In summarizing the value of cows, placing it conservatively according to Mr. Brewitt, each cow should bring a gross return of more than $175. In a herd of 10 cows this would mean $1,750. This income can be secured from a herd of cows that have been selected with care and received good treatment, including careful feeding and care.

It is to be hoped that President Coolidge is not so busy about politics that he will let the potato bugs eat up the White House garden.

Clocks throughout the country are to be automatically set by radio. The ancient and obsolete telegraph system is evidently doomed.

Anyway all these people who are being run over by autos should be so thoroughly flattened out that they could slip through a crowd easily.

One reason why some motorists worship God in nature Sundays rather than at church, may be that Nature passes no contribution box.

CARELESSNESS AND FIRES

Four-fifths of the fires each year are man-made. All of them might be prevented by the ordinary exercise of care.

Just now it is especially imperative that every precaution be taken to avoid starting fires, because the dry season of the year is here and the danger of heavy loss is increased manifold.

Careless campers are the worst offenders. Fires left burning in the woods or lighted cigar and cigarette stubs tossed into the brush last season burned more timberland than was cut by all sawmills in the country during the whole year.

More forests are burned each year than are regrown and millions of dollars of property loss are the direct result of careless campers.

Fires in rural sections are much more hazardous because of the lack of fire fighting facilities, and campers and picnickers should be especially cautious with fire.

When farmers permit the use of their land for camping and picnic parties, it is nothing more than right that those enjoying the farmer's hospitality should take every precaution to avoid destroying his property.

"The evil that men do lives after them;
The good is oft interred with their bones."

—Julius Caesar.

It seems to us that good should be stronger than evil; just as light is stronger than darkness. Yet it is true, as Antony here points out, that the evil men do seems to outlast the good they do.

We all know that if we put a sound apple in the center of a barrel of rotten apples, the sound one will not make the rotten ones sound; but will itself become rotten. We know also that if we put a rotten apple in the center of a barrel of sound apples, it will soon spread rot to all the apples in the barrel. It is usually the same with schools and communities; one evil child or evil person will soon spread evil throughout the school or community, whereas one good child or good person will ordinarily have little effect on either.

A man may do a thousand and one good deeds and a single evil deed, if so, his community will give more weight to the one evil deed than to his thousand good deeds.

Long ago the Bible pointed out that the sins of the father should be visited upon his children to the third and fourth generations. Medical science has proved that this is true of the disease of the father, for certain diseases are inherited to the third and fourth generations, weakening all the descendants of the diseased ancestor.

What is true of disease is no doubt true of many other evils, and Maeterlinck spoke truly when he said: "There is not a gesture, a thought, a sin, a tear, an atom of acquired consciousness that is lost in the depths of the earth; and at the most insignificant of our acts, our ancestors arise, not in their tombs, where they move not, but in ourselves, where they always live."

Two things save the situation from pessimism: we struggle toward good, and not all good that a man does is interred with his bones.

Human beings do much that is evil; but they try to be good, just as a plant tries always to get to the light and away from the darkness. What progress the race has made has been due to the good that has been done with the bones of the doers. A Nazarene carpenter and a Hindu prince, for example, did good that has rushed inspiration for countless millions since their time. And although one good man in a community has little influence, a group of good men can save any situation, as witness the fact that Sodom and Gomorrah would have been saved had there been but ten good men in the combined cities.

Sleeveless Knicker Suit Is Ideal for Sportswoman

We were not all in favor of knicker suits some years ago. However, that is ancient history, today the knicker suit is the ideal garb of the sportswoman. Every detail is planned for comfort with the style element accented. For midsummer the sleeveless kinds are liked best of all. Of course in this age when accessory counts so much in costumeing one exercises a discriminating taste in matter of blouse, tie, hosier and other details. The strictly tailored and mannish outfits are preferred. The picture illustrates the point. The knitted four-in-hand tie is considered very smart. The narrow patent leather belt is the finishing touch.

This and That.

Produce quality products. The market likes them.

Lots of people think the third party always will be that.

White lies are the kind you tell about your home town.

Poverty is not a crime, but many people regard it as such.

Keep in touch with the world if you don't want to be touched.

Everybody loves the man who does not butt in where he doesn't belong.

The jingle of silver is a pleasant sound that draws out the voice of truth.

It is far better to be somebody in a small town than nobody in a big town.

Folks who have the idea the road to success is a boulevard never gets any place.

Although boots are out of date, there seems to be a big demand for boot legs.

Too many hold-up and not enough hold-on men, is one of the troubles of the present.

Anyway, a campaign without a Bryan in it just wouldn't be a campaign, that's all.

The man you saw with the long beard is just back from the New York convention.

Brilliance won't get a person much of anywhere unless there is honesty combined with it.

You can judge a man's standing by whether he dodges taxes, automobiles or subpoenas.

What most communities need is not new money flowing in but less old money flowing out.

Europe ought to be able to pay some of its war debts after the summer tourist season is over.

In estimating men, don't forget that it's the green driver who toots his horn on the slightest pretext.

Nature is a great balance wheel. Europe has all the wars and we have all of the automobiles and telephones.

It is still declared that woman's place is in the home, but that was before she learned to drive an automobile.

We don't like to be curious, but wonder what the girls talk about when they are having their hair bobbed?

The politicians who are mending their fences should be reminded that it takes more than a hammer to do that job.

How a public official can save his money and reputation at the same time is one of the pressing problems of the day.

If everybody would keep as busy as the average dollar bill, we would not have anything to worry about in this country.

Flattery doesn't fool one class of men and you can't make it strong enough to fit the other kind's good opinion of himself.

New York city has been on a day-light saving basis, but it has, not been discovered that the Democratic convention saved much of it.

"Whither are we drifting," inquire the alarmists. Well, just now we are drifting to the point where we will have to lay in our winter's supply of coal.

More than 300 million pairs of shoes were manufactured in the U. S. in 1923, but we did not suppose enough people walked to wear out that many.

A motion picture camera has been invented that can make 5,000 exposures a second, which is almost as fast as a senate investigating committee can work.

Six hundred school boys wearing policemen's badges, very effectively care for the sixty Chicago playgrounds and property, and have more influence than the regular force.

Infected Dairy Herd Is Slaughtered

Great trench filled with the carcasses of dairy cattle owned by Jack McMahon of California, which were found to be infected with plague and were ordered killed by the United States bureau of animal husbandry. McMahon, who had worked forty years to build up his dairy business, will be paid for the cattle by the state and federal governments.

GREAT CAMPAIGN FUNDS

Estimates of the campaign funds to be subscribed for the three larger political parties range from $10,000,000 to $15,000,000, and the expenditures of candidates for the Senate and House will total some millions more.

No one denies that money may justifiably be expended for legitimate election purposes, but every man knows that a large proportion of all these funds go to a horde of professional vote influencers who are supposed to be able to control the Farmer vote, the Labor vote, the Irish-American vote, the Jewish vote or the Negro vote and this is one reason why only men of means are nominated. They must be prepared to pay the assessment of the "big" committee as well as the county committee and then some. Disguise it as you may, it is simply "bribe."

No man makes any considerable contribution to a political party (or to two political parties as has been shown) unless he expects value received in kind. And unless the goods are delivered you can't get him a second time.

Anything that tends to divert the mind of the voter from the real merits of the issue—the good of the public service—is in the direction of dishonest and incompetent government. The political vision of the average man is none too clear at best, and when it is clouded by corrupt considerations total blindness is the result, and the parties responsible for it are but "pulling the shanty down over their own heads."

While the example is set in high places it is very doubtful whether any considerable number of votes will be changed by the deluge of printed matter, the advertising of rival claims, or the people's suffrage, or the ballihood of the spellbinders on the stump or by radio. The point is the system reeks with rottenness that extends into the legislative halls.

THE COUNTY AGENT

There was a time when the county agricultural agent was not regarded as essential. In that day, farmers looked upon him with suspicion, because of his new-fangled ideas. Many thought he was going to try to tell them something different about farm work, when they were following the practices handed down from generations.

Gradually the attitude of the farmer changed until he began to view the county agent as an integral part of the farm program, a necessary asset in intelligent agriculture development. There is one danger in the situation, however. The tendency exists to take up too much of the county agent's time with organizations promoting production, marketing, or social activities among the farmers.

This is not the real duty of the county agent, and the purpose of establishing this agency in rural communities was to be defeated if farmers lose sight of the larger field for the county agent.

He is essentially a teacher and his work is educational in character. He is a public official, representing the state college of agriculture and the United States department of agriculture.

His duties lie along extension lines, rather than in organizing, executive work, and the sooner farmers appreciate this fact, just that much sooner will they realize greater benefits, because relieved from tedious organization work, the county agent will be enabled to distribute more useful information in all fields of farm work, which is his real function.

WEEDS IS WEEDS

"Pigs is pigs" is an old expressive phrase full of meaning. Pigs are just plain pigs, and nothing more can be made of them.

By the same token, "weeds is weeds." They are unsightly, injurious and useless.

They grow faster and are more hardy than useful vegetation and their only purpose on earth is to torment man.

Some people exterminate them as they should an enemy. Others permit them to grow unhindered and allow them to damage ornamental plants, garden truck and farm products, and offset the effect of beautiful shrubbery and neatly kept lawns.

If people who permit weeds to grow on their premises do not have enough pride to keep them out, there is a law which compels the property owner to act. Refusing to, the authorities will cut the weeds and charge the expense up in taxes.

The law has long since recognized that weeds are a nuisance because they are unsightly and a breeder of disease, and people who persist in permitting them to flourish will have to abide by the consequences.

WORMS IN CHILDREN

In our grandmothers' time each spring all children were given a course of worm medicine. Today we hear so little about worms in children and many think as the mother did who recently said when told her little child had worms, "Why, I am sure he cannot have worms—worms have gone out of style long ago."

But children do have worms more often than the mother realizes. Children who are allowed to crawl over a dirty floor or in a dirty yard may carry infected material from their hands to their mouths and thus cause worms. If you suspect that your child has worms take him to your doctor before giving him worm medicine. The State Board of Health will send you a container in which you can send a specimen to be examined at the laboratory without any cost to you. This is an absolutely sure method of knowing if the child has worms, then he can be treated accordingly.

There are three types of worms found in children, the round worms, pin worms and tape worms. The children in the mountain counties sometimes have hookworms. Tape worms are seldom seen in Kentucky. Pin worms and round worms are only found. The pin worm causes local irritation and nervousness, the round worm, which resembles the common earth worm, occurs most often in children from 2 to 10 years and is found more frequently in country children than in city children.

The symptoms of worms are: nervousness, coated tongue, grinding the teeth at night, restlessness, colic, constipation or diarrhoea and convulsions. The child usually is pale and has a pinched look around the nose and mouth. The small child often has an enlarged abdomen. Children with hookworms are malnourished, pale, underweight and underweight and are tired all the time because the hookworm, which fastens itself to the intestinal wall drains the body of blood.

THE "ACCOMMODATING" MAN

If you were to ask a large number of people why they go to certain stores to trade, you would find that in many cases they habitually did business with certain people whom they liked because they were so "accommodating," as the old fashioned expression used to be.

By that they meant that these people would go to a lot of special trouble and effort, to please their customers. Salesmanship is not simply handing stuff over the counter and rattling off a line of talk about it.

In past years many people have taken business jobs without becoming willing to make such extra effort. If they were asked to do something that would call for some extra time and thought, they would say it could not be done. But competition has become so earnest that ambitious people are realizing that if they are to win out, they must not spare pains or effort. There is no place where that business ideal is realized more fully or exemplified than in the stores of Boone county.

THE BATTLE WITH PESTS

Probably more people in Boone county would enjoy the pleasures of garden work if it was not for the incessant battle with insect pests. It makes even a seasoned gardener feel sick when he sees his fine fruits and flowers ruined by the dirty little bugs that swoop down on his tender plants without warning and fatten on the results of his labor. Nature seems to fight the unfriendly force when it permits these outdoor pleasures to thrive on their desirable work.

Yet there is an antidote for every pest and a way of beating every one of them, if one will but study the garden books. Man is a pretty weak kind of creature, if he allows himself to be baffled by a measly little bug.

If the American people would protect their feathered friends would take care of the difficult and disagreeable task of keeping down the pests, and gardening would become somewhat more poetic than it is at this time.

WEARY OF TITLES

The Colony of South Australia has intimated to Great Britain that knight-hoods and similar honors, conferred by the Crown, are no longer wanted. By this decision South Australia follows the example of Canada, which Dominion took similar action five years ago. In fact, it is not too much to say that all the self-governing nations within the British Commonwealth other than India have had enough of "titles" and wish to assert that simple equality before the law which, under the Constitution, is guaranteed to citizens of the United States. Even in Britain, the people are, to use a colloquial phrase, "fed up" with a perfect plethora of ribbands, stars, medals, garters and honorary alphabets, scattered like confetti whenever the King has a birthday or a new year opens. The ennobled of Great Britain today number 12,000 and would be easy to fill Madison Square Garden twice over.

Recent disclosures indicate that these titles have often been sold at a price by gentlemen with a "pull" and more than one court case is now pending on the subject.

American money and ambition has contributed in no small degree to the degradation and destruction of this ancient and honorable custom originally designed as a reward of honor.

This is a country of vast spaces and diverse populations, and the demands of these various interests conflict to some extent. It takes a very broad-minded government to shape out a line of policy that will be just to all.

In the past the cities and the big manufacturing and commercial industries have been very close to the government. Their representatives have had the ear of Congress and the executive, and their theories were the basis on which our system of finance and business were built up.

Even if these people meant to be fair, they were biased by their own experiences and by lack of knowledge of the difficulties existing in other conditions. The agricultural classes were remote from the seat of government, and for many years were not adequately represented in its councils and plans.

As a consequence a system of tariff rates has grown up that favors the manufacturing interests rather than the farmer. The cost of industrial production is so arranged by deals between the manufacturing and transportation employers and the workers, that mechanics employed in the city industries have large pay and short hours and the country people pay the bills. Freight rates are so arranged that bulky farm products pay a disproportionate share of the total revenue required.

What is needed to right wrongs like these, is to put more men in position of power and responsibility who are familiar with the needs and just claims of the rural districts. This does not mean that the official boards must necessarily be filled with "farmers." But it does mean that there ought to be a good proportion of men in all the official positions who are thoroughly familiar with the economic situation in the rural districts, and who will strive to it that the rural industries get just as good consideration as the city industries get.

THE PENALTIES OF OFFICE

Public men of today who are often the victims of mendacious or thoughtless criticism may take comfort in the thought that they are not the first to suffer from this particular penalty of office holding. In a letter written by President George Washington in 1795 he said:

"Nor did I believe until lately that it was within the bounds of probability, hardly within those of possibility, that every act of my administration would be tortured and the grossest and most insidious misrepresentations of them be made by giving one side only of a subject and that, too, in such exaggerated and indecent terms as could scarcely be applied to a Nero, to a notorious defaulter or even to a common pick-pocket."

The Father of his Country over-stated the fact when he ventured the judgment that "every act" of his administration was "tortured" in this manner.

History does not bear out the truth of that assertion, but there is no doubt that Washington, like all his successors, was often credited with motives he was far from entertaining and charged with acts of which he was not guilty. That seems to be the penalty of men in high positions the world over.

In America, however, it flourishes with exceptional vitality, for here the liberty of the press and the proneness of the people to express their opinions in public and private place no limit upon the criticism of officials.

There is no doubt that they get more than they deserve, just as our conspicuously successful business men receive far more of censure than is due them.

A bright light attracts all the aspects of the night, and in like manner a high office invites everybody to bump against it and vent their spleen upon its unhappy incumbent. This evil should be modified by a more temperate discussion of public men and affairs than is now customary with the press of the country and by a suspension of judgment in individual cases, until the real facts shall appear, when there is a tendency to condemn without established grounds of condemnation.

The public service would be vastly improved by a reform of this kind, for it would induce a higher grade of citizenship to enter it than is now apparent, notwithstanding the average office holder of today is a good type of citizen. Candor is a good thing, but kindness and charity are better.

Henry Ford has turned his attention to airplanes, and an aviation field for experimentation has been provided at Dearborn, Mich. Who is the man who dares to predict that airplanes will soon be as common as Ford autos. Mr. Ford declares they will soon be turned out by the millions. In the future the wheels of the world will be replaced by wings. American and English bankers at the London conference insist that the German loan of $200,000,000 must be guaranteed by France and Belgium who have been secured by the Versailles treaty. The success of the Dawes plan for putting Germany on its feet hinges on this point, and France flatly refuses to yield.

BASE BALL

Hebron trimmed Petersburg last Saturday very decisively by a score of 8-4. York was in the box for Hebron and was plenty good to win, which in reality is what most teams play for. McCarty started in the box for Petersburg but was knocked out of the box and relieved by Ruth.

Sprague's hitting was the feature of the game.

Hits: Petersburg 9; Hebron 15.

Struck out by McCarty 1; by Ruth 6; by York 8.

Two base hits—H. Acra, Riley.

Three base hits—Sprague.

Home Runs L. Goodridge, Sprague

Burlington extended their doubly wonderful record another week last Saturday at Bellevue. Doubly wonderful means that they have not won a single game in the league and have not yet been shut out by their opponents.

Joe Brady was in the box and added another scalp to his belt, toying with his opponents at will.

Wilson, in the box for Burlington, also pitched a nice game, fanning the slugger Black, twice in succession which is hard for any pitcher to do. Final score 7-3.

Hits off Wilson 12; off Brady 8.

Struck out by Wilson 9; by Brady 7.

Bases on balls by Wilson 3; by Brady 2.

Two base hits—Black, Cook, C. Kelly, Smith.

Three base hits—W. Ryle.

Fixed Inductance Set Easy to Make Outfit Is Good on Distance Work, Selective, Simple to Operate.

By MILTON G. FLEW
The circuit to be described in this article is of the standard regenerative type, employing a fixed coupler. It is submitted principally because it does not radiate radio energy. It is simple to tune and does not squeal or howl above 200 meters. Below that point it can be made to howl, but as it was designed as a local receiver, this howling should be easy to avoid. With a 75-foot aerial the circuit proved to be good on distance work and very selective, with no body capacity.

At home, in northern New Jersey, the author used this circuit with a short indoor aerial—about 30 feet of bell wire—and was able to receive all the local stations with good volume, as well as KDKA and WIP. The local stations came in fairly well without any aerial at all. The set was installed in the home of a novice who was able to pick up three Chicago stations, one in Cincinnati, one in Atlanta, Ga., and Philadelphia. All of these, with the exception of Atlanta, gave splendid tone and volume on the 20 m. per sec.

A list of necessary parts (which should not cost more than $20 or $25) follows:

- 1 composition tube, 3 inches in diameter and about 8 inches long.
- 1 lb. double silk No. 22 wire.
- 1 good variable condenser .00025 mfd.

- 1 good grid condenser.
- 1 good variable grid leak.
- 1 tube socket.
- 1 rheostat—preferably vernier.
- 1 standard variometer—preferably molded.

- 1 .002 mfd phone condenser.
- 1 B battery.
- 1 A battery.
- 1 pair phones.
- 1 tube (WD 11, WD 12 or UV 200).

First wind the 60-turn secondary direct on the composition tube. Tape this coil with adhesive tape and wind over the tape the 15-turn primary in the same direction as the secondary. In following the diagram the movable plates of the condenser should be connected to the plus filament. Otherwise the diagram speaks for itself.

Diagram to Be Followed.

The buying of good parts cannot be too greatly emphasized. This is most important.

The tuning of this set is controlled entirely with the condenser. The range of which can be charted for the various stations. After a station is picked up the tone and volume is regulated with the variometer and detector rheostat. If the point of maximum regeneration is passed the voice or music becomes husky—the set does not spill or squeal.

The author realizes that there is nothing new about this circuit, but he is heartily in favor of the campaign against "squealers" and, certainly, the set above described will meet with the approval of the most exacting in this respect. Then, too, it is simple to make, good on distance work, selective, cheap enough for any pocketbook and as easy to operate as any set could be.

Best Position of Horn Is Determined by Trial

It is always a good idea to experiment with the position of a loud speaker. Quite frequently the arrangement of adjoining rooms in a house has the effect of producing annoying echoes, and the horn must be tried in several places before satisfactory acoustics are obtained.

If the loud speaker is too near the ceiling, as when placed on a piano, the sound waves will be deflected downward on the listener's head, and speech or music will sound decidedly unnatural. Similarly, if it is put on the floor, the sound will hit upward.

Music will always sound better if the horn is kept well away from where the listeners sit. A jazz band will never sound clear if the talker is put on a dining-room table. If power amplifiers are employed, the radio fan cannot expect pleasant reception any more than he can expect a drum to sound pleasant if he sits right next to it.

TICKETS CUT BY STATE FAIR TO DRAW BIGGER CROWDS

Tourist Camp Makes It Possible For Week's Outing In Louisville at Little Expense.

Marking the close of nearly a quarter century of active service to the farmers of Kentucky, the Kentucky State Fair which opens September 8 this year is making it possible for the out-of-the-state residents to come to Louisville for a week's outing and entertainment at but little more cost than staying at home.

Secretary James E. Fahey announces that not only have the season tickets been reduced to $2 but that they will admit the purchasers to the fireworks, hippodrome, and race track.

Every bank in the State has been asked to co-operate in making this an even greater fair than any previous year and to that end will have season tickets on sale. Heretofore tickets which were $2.00 were not good for the fireworks and were on sale only in Louisville.

Exhibits of Every Kind

Everybody with any product to exhibit is invited to get into touch with Mr. James E. Fahey, the Secretary, Louisville, Ky., at once.

From the daintiest of lace handkerchiefs, to the most cumbersome appearing piece of farm machinery, the exhibits this year will cover the widest scope in the twenty-three years that the State has endeavored to better the condition of the farmer.

In the women's department will be shown the work of children as well as those who have outlived the allotted three score and ten years. One entire section is devoted to the product of women past sixty-five years of age, the exhibits being limited to knitted and crocheted articles, hand embroidery, quilting and tatting.

The section for children will show the work of girls younger than thirteen, while yet another division will be for the work of girls between the ages of thirteen and eighteen.

The great attraction at the Kentucky fair that has drawn to Louisville sportsmen from all parts of the United States and Canada, is the $10,000 International saddle horse stake. This attraction is in four sections, the first for stallions the opening night of the fair; the second section, Tuesday night for mares; the third section Wednesday night for geldings, and the fourth, which is the finale, Saturday night. In the fourth section, the three winners Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights compete for the crown of world champion.

A record crowd is expected to see the big horse show this year, as the tourist camp established at the State Fair Grounds makes it possible for thousands of Kentuckians to come by automobile with their families and remain for the entire week within the fair grounds at little cost.

Entertainment and Education
Entertainment interspersed with education is the goal of Secretary Fahey in planning for the displays in the Merchants and Manufacturers Building. One of the new features will be a radio show and several radio manufacturers already have arranged to put in instructive and novel exhibits such as vehicles moving by power transmitted by radio and the discharging of small charges of explosives by the mysterious waves.

Practically every industry and plant in Louisville will be represented in the 200 booths in the big $300,000 building while nearly will be seen the new of Louisville brought here from Canada and their young calf. Next to the M. & M. Building is the Kentucky Log House which was the moose last year of 240,000 visitors who saw the original belongings of many of America's greatest pioneers.

New Barns Are Built
Northwest of the Livestock pavilion, the visitors will be greeted by the sight of freshly painted, new barns where some of the bluest of blue blooded cattle and sheep in America will be housed.

Further on will be the farm machinery exhibit. Visitors to the Kentucky fair of a decade ago would stare in amazement could they see the array of labor saving appliances, lighting systems for farm homes and barns, electric churning, silos and machinery never dreamed of ten years ago.

For amusement, nothing has been left undone. Each night, just prior to the horse show, will be staged a number of huge hippodrome acts in the Livestock Pavilion. These acts are the most thrilling, obtainable and are followed by the horse show. Although the big sections of the International saddle horse stake consumes the first three nights, the champion three-gallop saddle horse show will be the attraction. Thursday and Friday night will be shown Welsh ponies and amateur riders.

Each afternoon there will be races and at night fireworks.

Special Correspondent of the RECORDER

LAST WEEK MARKED the formal opening of the political campaigns, with the Republican and Democratic candidates delivering their acceptance speeches—Coolidge in Washington and Davis at Clarksville. Having become a candidate without the formality of a nominating convention there will be no notification for LaFollette. Next week the Republican and Democratic vice-presidential candidates will fire their opening guns—Bryan at Lincoln, Neb., on August 18, and Davies the next day at Evanson, Ill. Then the barriers will be down at last and the battle will be on.

E. J. HENNING, the Assistant Secretary of Labor, has been known for a long time as a man much interested in the American presidential campaign as the voters in this country. In Berlin, says Henning, everyone thinks that LaFollette is going to be elected, while London is equally certain that Davis will be chosen to succeed Coolidge in the White House.

SECRETARY OF STATE Hughes gets back to Washington this week from Europe, where in an unofficial capacity, he has put in some good looks for the Dawes reparations plan. Hughes believes that the Dawes plan will be put into operation, thus establishing a basis for a large American loan to Germany and the general reconstruction of Europe.

SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY Mellon will remain longer in Europe, not planning to return before September 1. He has advised his friends here that most of his time is being taken up with social duties, but that he has had several interesting conferences with European statesmen in the course of his visits to London, Paris, Berlin and other political and economic centers.

AMONG THE QUESTIONS which Mellon will take up on his return here is the re-opening of negotiations with France, Italy and other nations for the payment of their war debts to the United States. Agitation is again being made, both in Europe and America, for the cancellation of these debts, running into the billions, but the government is determined to collect the last cent. When Mellon gets back he will send new invitations to the debtor governments, suggesting that they lose no more time in making arrangements for payment.

THE MAYFLOWER, famous as the presidential yacht, has fallen up on hard times. Two members of the yacht's crew were arrested, and charged with beating up a crippled war veteran and robbing him of all the money he had. A few days later, while the MAYFLOWER was in dock at Norfolk, Va., undergoing repairs, several of the crew were arrested for having a bottle of gin in their possession. They were given a stiff fine, which John Coolidge, the President's son, who was aboard at the time, helped to pay. It is understood that the President plans a rigid investigation of the activities of the crew with a view to making some radical changes in the personnel.

THE CAPITOL is getting the most thorough cleaning this summer that it has undergone for a decade. An army of experts are at work throughout the massive building, cleaning grease and dust from the mosaic floors and valuable paintings, re-varnishing desks and furniture, and putting the whole place in tip-top shape for the new session of Congress in December. Extensive repairs are also being made in many parts of the building.

THE AMBITIOUS Government rum sleuth who raided the apartment of Chief Justice Taft's niece in New York city did not last long. Protestors against the raid came with such force to the Internal Revenue and Prohibition Bureaus that the agent was finally suspended and the liquor returned. No charge of any improper activities have been made in connection with the case, but friends of the agent plan to ask for an inquiry in Congress the next time that appropriations for prohibition enforcement are under consideration.

When you pay cash in the stores you help the money merchant to pay cash for his stuff, which makes it less expensive to do business.

BOONE COUNTY WINNERS

Burlington, Ky., August 11, 1924

To the Editors of the Recorder: Please allow me to hand you a corrected list of the winners of the champion Jersey cows of Boone Co: Miss Frances Lucille Rice on Nobles' Bright Beauty No. A. 473051 Jr., 3 year old Class A. A. Test 437.29 pounds butter fat.

Miss Jeannetta Lea Kite on Afriston's Noble Pet No. 483358, Jr., 3 year old Class A. A. Test 511.17 lbs., butter fat.

Mr. Thos. W. Rice on Priceless Christine 2nd, No. 445201, Sr., 3 year old Class A. A. 33989 lbs., butter fat.

O. C. Hafer on Volunteer's Bessie Leoni No. 429018, Sr., 4 year old. Test 567.78 lbs., butter fat Class A. A.

O. C. Hafer on Pogis' Leoni Gold No. 336391 Jr., 7 year old, Test 611.79 lbs., butter fat, Class A. A.

They won five out of fourteen, or a little more than one-third of the Championships of the State.

This is a record that the Jersey Breeders of Boone County ought to be proud of.

When you take in consideration that only a few cows in a small number of herds were tested.

(There are as many or more good herds in the county that ought to make credible records.)

These are cow made records as the Jersey breeders and winners, who had very little experience, and under ordinary farm care.

The first two heifers, those owned by Miss Rice and Miss Kite are Club Heifers.

So far there have been some four or five of the Club Heifers tested. All have qualified for Register of Merit.

Yours Truly,
W. G. KITE.

TO POOL MEMBERS.

In this issue is published a notice to members of the Burley Tobacco Growers Co-operative Association, which should be given a careful reading by every member of the Association.

If you are a member of the Burley Tobacco Association it is your duty to exercise your right of membership by helping select the delegates to be voted for at the next year's annual meeting of the association. Wake up and look after this matter now, do not come around grumbling about who is elected after it is too late to vote.

If you do not know anything about this election of officers get busy and learn and then take part and you will serve your country and look after your own interests better. A meeting will be held, attend it, ballots will be sent out get yours and vote for the men of your choice. No man does his duty who does less.

"SEEING LIFE."

A keen desire is often expressed by young people to "see life." They frequently look at it as a part of their education, and feel that their experiences are unsatisfactory unless they are learned to "know life." But many of them in this quest get into very undesirable relations. It is necessary that people should start out on this pursuit, they are apt to think that it is necessary for them to associate with persons of loose character, as the only way to know what is going on in the world.

In such excursions they learn nothing that adds to their wisdom, while they are apt to suffer deterioration from people whose ideas of life are all wrong. Such people have false notions on such subjects as love and duty and honest work and faithful industry. It is almost impossible for people to associate with them, in an effort to see life, and not get some of these decadent points of view.

The true way to see life is for people to go in for some kind of honest work that will bring them in contact with a lot of people. Then they should be democratic and friendly in their associations, without seeking the companionship of undesirable associates. mingling with many types of people will give them a knowledge of what is going on in the world.

If a person wants to see more of life than he can get in such ways, let him take a job and help with some kind of philanthropic work. That will give him plenty of glimpses of the seamy side of life. He will see it really is, with all the glitter rubbed off, and with the consequences of wrong acts clearly revealed. There isn't much fun in seeing life after the paint and tinsel have been removed.

MUCH INTEREST IN POULTRY IN GRANT COUNTY

According to H. F. McKinney, County Agent, two model poultry houses were constructed in July and at least 12 more will be constructed during the fall, as there is considerable interest in poultry work in that county.

CIRCUIT COURT.

No trials by jury were had at the August term of the Boone Circuit Court. The grand jury returned 32 indictments and examined 55 witnesses. The Jewett automobile confiscated by the Sheriff was ordered sold by the Sheriff.

A number of indictments were returned against Boone county citizens for being drunk in public places. All the indictments were for misdemeanors.

Judge Dedman, of Cynthia, was present Thursday to try the case of the Commonwealth against Gaines, but the case had been continued.

Circuit Court adjourned Thursday morning.

DR. EDGAR DEWITT JONES

FORMER BOONE COUNTY PASTOR OCCUPIES PULPITS IN BURLINGTON AND WALTON.

While spending his vacation in Burlington with his mother-in-law, Mrs. Eunice Willis, Dr. Edgar DeWitt Jones, now of the Central Christian church of Detroit, consented to preach last Tuesday evening in the Methodist church at Burlington. Although the meeting was a short notice affair, the church was amply filled, and all were repaid for their coming with a splendid sermon.

On Sunday Bro. Jones, was the guest of C. Scott Chambers, his old friend of former years, and occupied the pulpit at Walton Christian church, both morning and evening. His morning text was "I have set my feet in a large room," which was delivered by Bro. Jones in his incomparable manner, then in the evening he gave a lecture on his experiences in Ireland, being a graphic and characteristic description of the speakers' life of the political, social and religious life of the Irish people. Bro. Jones was sent over to Ireland by a syndicate of newspapers last summer for the sole purpose of investigating conditions in the Emerald Isle and reproducing his impressions for the various newspapers.

Dr. Edgar DeWitt Jones is now one of the foremost ministers of the nation and is recognized as such, and though some of our Boone county people may not know it, he delivered his first sermon in the Bullittsville Christian church in 1900, his second in Petersburg, third in Florence and so on.

Dr. Jones' graphic description of the turbulent New York Convention which he witnessed, appeared in Henry Ford's paper, the Dearborn Independent.

A BOONE COUNTY BOY

The following was taken from Inst Saturday's Cincinnati Enquirer: "Westchester, Ky., August 15.—A new plan whereby students in country schools are to be given a mid-winter vacation, with correspondingly shorter summer vacations, is to be inaugurated in Clark county schools this winter.

Prof. Paris Akin, Superintendent of county schools, in announcing this instruction, declares that in his opinion it will increase attendance materially and insure the country student a good education.

"The greatest trouble in rural districts is that in winter, when snow and ice are upon the ground, the student often finds it impossible to get to school," Prof. Akin said. "Under the new plan, schools will be closed during the worst winter months."

Another feature pointed out was that the teachers, who ordinarily pass their vacations attending summer schools, now may take advantage of the midwinter vacation and attend normal school then.

The Clark county schools under the new plan opened August 4 and will continue in session five months, closing December 19. March 16th another school term will start and will run until June 5th.

Prof. Akin is a son of Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Akin, of Woolper creek, near Peter'sburg.

Nearly 50,000 children, about half of them girls, are now in more than 600 organized summer camps in the United States. In all the camps, probably without exception, special attention is paid to physical growth and "character building," with manual instruction in attractive forms. Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, and similar organizations are prominent in this field.

A famous man's most difficult job is living up to his reputation.

TWO AUTOS WRECKED.

Sherman Reeves was arrested by Deputy Sheriff Utz, Sunday afternoon for driving an automobile while intoxicated. Reeves was driving a Ford down the Limaburg hill at a high rate of speed and ran into the machine driven by a Mr. Smith of Covington. The collision caused the machine driven by Reeves to turn over and tore a front wheel off of the other machine and also damaged the fenders and top, both machines were badly wrecked. Reeves was brought to Burlington and put in jail in default of bond, the trial will be held next Saturday morning. Reeves was under the influence of liquor at the time he was committed to jail. None of the occupants of the machine were injured.

NORTHERN KY. ASSOCIATION HOLDS MEETING AT BURLINGTON.

Last Saturday afternoon the B. Y. P. U. Association of Northern Kentucky held its monthly meeting at the Baptist church in Burlington. This is an association of several counties, and there were delegates present from Bellevue, (Campbell county) all the Covington churches, East Bend, Burlington and others. Rev. O. J. Steger, of Latonia, delivered the principal address, his subject being "Mountain Climbing," which subject he handled in an attractive manner.

Special music was rendered in the form of quartets and duets from some of the visiting delegations. Bellevue (Campbell county) won the Banners in the Senior A & B while Burlington won in both Intermediate and Junior, and these banners will be held by each school until taken from them by another in competition.

There were about 150 delegates present, as well as a number of visitors.

TASTEFUL TOWNS

The old timers who settled the country towns were splendid workers and citizens, but sometimes they lacked taste. They often built their homes in a huddled way, sometimes they removed all trees from the business center, and failed to reserve any land for parks and play grounds.

But the country town can remedy such defects much more easily than large places can. There are always vacant spaces that can be set aside as parks, and planted with trees and shrubs. All trees can be set out along the streets without much expense. It pays to do all these things as they make a town more attractive, and people form an affection for a community where taste and beauty are considered.

LOST HIS HAT—GOT WET

On Monday last week, about the noon hour, several of the older citizens were sitting on the bench in front of the Boone County Depository, discussing the problem as to just how long it would be before it would rain. Some predicted it would rain inside of two hours while others said it would not rain before morning. One old timer who had been a close observer of the signs and clouds for nearly eighty years, after taking a survey of the sky and surrounding country, said, "if it rains before Thursday I will buy any one of you a $5 hat." As it was near the dinner hour they all departed for their respective homes. The old timer not being as fleet of foot as the others, although he did not have to go more than two blocks, liked to have driven before he reached his domicile, being caught in a down-pouring shower about ten minutes. Since that the octogenarian has not made his appearance on the streets, but it is the supposition of some that he has gone to get the hat, or that he is waiting for his clothes to dry out before he ventures out again. The sudden shower was a great surprise to the whole bunch.

THE DECLINE OF GAMBLING

Some observers of the ways of the sports declare that gambling does not flourish on the big scale it used to. This may not mean that the former gambling element have become more virtuous. But it may mean that young men are making a whole to see that to make good, they must acquire excellence in some business or profession, and can not expect to make much by playing for money.

People with a crooked tendency probably find they can make money quicker in other ways. Some are doing it in the bootleg business. Many have gone to selling worthless securities to people who lack judgment. Some have become dangerous criminals, and are terrorizing big cities by their hold-ups and burglaries.

But it is some gain if the lure of the gambling game does not tempt young men as former. It was often a kind of mental disease, having gotten into a man's mind, seemed to destroy his power for legitimate achievement.

LOCAL HAPPENINGS

At a meeting of the State Central Committee held at Louisville, Thursday, August 14th, Judge Samuel M. Wilson, of Lexington, was elected as the leader of the Democratic Campaign in Kentucky this fall. Following immediately upon his election he appointed Mrs. H. K. Bourne, of Newcastle, as the leader of the women's organization.

Judge Wilson is a prominent and efficient Central Kentucky attorney and is peculiarly adapted to the position, as he is one of the original John W. Davis men in Kentucky. He stamped the State from end to end and from side to side four years ago for Gov. Cox, and his efforts were deemed by State leaders as being largely responsible for the Cox majority in this state.

Mrs. Bourne, who was the leader of the women last fall, is regarded as being very ably fitted for the position on account of the vast majority of approximately 50,000 she assisted in piling up for Gov. Fields.

The following was taken from last week's issue of the Falmouth Outlook:

Falmouth went to Berry Sunday afternoon and administered a beautiful coat of calcimine to the champions in the Licking Valley League. The score was 5 to 0. "Cannon-Ball" York was on the hill for Falmouth and started out eighteen men. In the first inning Berry got one hit and two men on bases, but after that York put on more smoke, and the Berry boys performed just like an electric fan in a molasses factory.

York and Zimmer, who did the catching act, are both from the good old county of Boone, which could furnish the Falmouth club with many more ball players if she desired them.

The tax books of Boone county are now in the hands of the Sheriff for collection of the 1924 county and state taxes. When in town call at his office if you desire to settle; also you may stop at the Tax Commissioner's office and give in your list for next year's taxes, and then if you so desire, you may go into the County Clerk's office just across the hall and secure a license that will grant you the privilege of hunting this fall and winter. It is said rabbits and quail are plentiful.

There is a reduced acreage in the White River district this year, and the condition at this time is very unfavorable for an average crop. The crop was set out late with small plants which have suffered very badly from want of rain and other causes. For some reason the plants have grown very uneven, and this condition prevails in every county in the district. Some tobacco was cut in the Blue Grass section last week to get ahead of the wild fire, but in these cases the plants were small and will not produce one-half crop.

Thomas Cowen, of Memphis, Tennessee is visiting his sisters, Mrs. Laura Martin and Pink Cowen, and niece, Miss Nell Martin. It has been about thirty-five years since Tom left Burlington, but he manages to make his yearly visit to the town of his birth, although there are very few left that he associated with in his younger days, but father time seems to have dealt kindly with him, as he looks hale and hearty, and seems to be in the best of health.

Of 63 cities of more than 1,000,000 population reporting to Mr. J. M. Glass, director of junior high schools in Pennsylvania, 34 have junior high schools in operation; 16 others have them in process of organization or are planning to organize such schools; 10 report no junior high schools; and only 3 report their decision not to adopt them.

Edward Maurer, wife and children of Louisville, spent the past week visiting his kinspeople near Burlington and at Grant. This is Ed's first visit to Boone county since he moved to Louisville from Pittsburg two years ago. He never fails to make an office visit when in this section, and we are always glad to meet him.

During the twelve months of 1923 the County Clerk issued 1380 auto passenger licenses in Boone county. Up to August 23, 1924, there had been issued by the Clerk 1460 licenses, an increase of sixty autos in the county over the year 1923. This does not include the licenses issued to truck owners.

Last Saturday evening about six o'clock a young couple claiming they were from Greensburg, Ind., applied at the County Clerk's office for a marriage license, but on account of their ages were refused a license. Very much disappointed, they left town headed toward Covington. They gave their ages at 20.

Clarence Shannon, of North Landing, Indiana, was arrested last Saturday by the Game Warden for having gotten into a wing net, and he paid a fine of $20 and costs. He was tried by the County Judge.

England is determined to lead the world in air ship construction. It is argued that the old-style battle ship will soon be fit only for coast patrol, or police duty, and the Admiralty has signed contracts for two new airships very much larger than any ever before made. These new ships will not be ready for first trials for three years.

A Ford-for-Senator boom has been started in Michigan without Mr. Ford's knowledge or consent, by opponents of Senator James Couzens. His name will go on the ballot unless he says "no." It will give Mr. Ford an opportunity to contribute to campaign expenses, without the law, and stimulate additional interest in the Republican primary which has thus far attracted other aspirants. Mr. Ford has said "no."

The new gearless electric locomotive built for the Chicago Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway by the General Electric Company, and which has a continuous rated output of 3200 horse power, is to be placed in service immediately on the stretch of electrified track between Othello and Seattle, Washington, is it is announced. The engine weighs 265 tons, is 76 feet in length, and is equipped with 12 motors.

Professor Carl Kaufmann will soon publish a book which will contain many surprising assertions regarding the discovery of America, supported by what seems to be facts. He claims that there were Chinese in America who pushed as far south as New Mexico, long before the "discovery" of the United States by Columbus. But even this bit of history does not tell us where the Indians came from—or when they came.

The president and secretary of the National Civil Service Reform League have asked President Coolidge to require that the Postmaster General refrain from soliciting or acting upon political recommendations in regard to appointments which according to law have been removed from all political manipulation and that the President order the appointment, in case of fourth-class postmasters and rural carriers at least, of to candidate standing highest in the Civil Service Commission examinations.

WHEAT ONE OF THE BEST COVER CROPS

It is becoming a common practice in the State of Kentucky for the farmer to sow some cover crop in the fall to prevent serious washing during the winter in the fields without crops. Rye, barley, winter oats and wheat are the principal cover crops used. All of these have advantages and disadvantages, but in many sections of the State wheat will be found to be one of the best crops to use for this purpose.

The cost of seeding wheat is usually about the same as for rye and wheat can be used to an advantage more than rye because it does all that rye will do and in most seasons will furnish a grain crop besides. When seeding wheat for cover crop or for grain care should be taken to make sure that it is not sown until after the danger of the Hessian fly has passed. When it is used as a cover crop it can be plowed under in the spring or it makes an ideal nurse crop for grasses, especially clover that will be seeded to wheat in the spring, and when allowed to mature grain will usually produce more than enough to pay the labor of seeding, harvesting, threshing, as well as the original seed.

Since the rye has a tendency to bleed and thereby produce little grain wheat has a tendency to do so. U. S. wheat has a distinctive advantage in many sections of the State and will be used more and more as a cover crop, according to J. W. Jones, of the College of Agriculture.

RELIEVING CITY CONGESTION.

Many families who previously had felt that they must live close to their work in congested cities, are now able to live a considerable distance out in the country or in the suburbs, and they use a little automobile to get to and from work. Many of them a few years ago scarcely dreamed of having a car.

But if there are several wage earners in a family, the combined cost of running the machine is not large for each one, and several families may combine to operate the car that takes them to and from work.

The enormous number of cars now being bought on time suggests how largely cars are being used to transport workmen to their places of employment. As the situation now is, if a family have been living in crowded quarters and paying an unreasonably high rent, there is quite a chance that they can benefit themselves by moving to the outskirts of their city, and buying an inexpensive car.

A movement that tends to draw people out from congested districts, and give them more space and air in suburban and country neighborhoods, must be generally beneficial to the community. It is an unsatisfactory condition when people are huddled together in crowded tenements, while only a short distance away are broad open spaces where their children can play freely and safely, where they can maintain gardens, raise poultry, etc.

Many of these folks who have been living in cramped quarters will take a very different view of life if they get out where they have room to turn around in, and plenty of pure air to breathe.

A QUICK "PICK-UP."

Everybody likes an automobile with a "pick-up," and everyone will take his business depressions the same way.

The rapid recovery that American business is making from the latest dive into the depths is the marvel of the economists.

The majority of them just naturally could not see how the country could "come out of it" until after the election.

But now the most of them are joining the "I told you so" chorus, because people are showing increasing confidence and optimism.

"You can't keep the United States down very long," says a well known business doctor, "but this phrase expresses nothing new."

The swing of the pendulum from the high tide of prosperity to the low tide of depression and back again is becoming shorter and shorter, because people are gradually learning that over-expansion always has its reaction.

They also know that it is to their own best interests to attempt to bring about a better adjustment of all their activities to their needs, to the end that so-called hard times will be forever removed from the horizon.

The manner in which farming is recovering is the most encouraging sign. Now and then you will hear the pessimist exclaim, "It can't last." But optimism and confidence in the future is bringing it back and it will remain if faith predominates. Good business methods prevail and farmers and all other business men remember that over-doing anything will react unfavorably.

At a mass meeting of tobacco growers, Owen county held at the court house on July 29th, attended by 500 growers, a resolution advocating a cut out of the 1925 crop was passed with only one opposing vote.

The resolutions contain a request that all counties send delegates to Lexington on Tuesday, August 20, to organize the cut out movement.

NOTICE TO MEMBERS OF BURLEY TOBACCO GROWERS' CO-OPERATIVE ASSOCIATION:

TO OUR MEMBERS:

Mass meetings of all members of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association will be held at the court house in the county seat of each county in the Burley district on for the purpose of nominating delegates to the district conventions of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association, which will select directors for the Association for the coming year. These mass meetings will nominate twice as many delegates as the county in which they are held may be entitled to in the convention.

For each million pounds of tobacco of the 1923 crop delivered to the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association, each county shall be entitled to one delegate in said district convention, and in case any county did not deliver as much as a million pounds of tobacco of the 1923 crop to the Association, then such county shall elect one delegate and said delegate shall have that fraction of one vote that the amount of tobacco delivered in 1923 is of one million pounds.

Each member of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association will receive by mail a ballot containing the names of the persons nominated for delegate at the mass meetings referred to and this ballot shall be voted at an election.

between the hours of 8 o'clock a. m. and 4 o'clock p. m. The ballot must be voted in person or by mail, but not otherwise and it must reach the election officers between the hours of election. Ballots should NOT be sent to the Association offices, as only those ballots which are presented to the election officers, either through delivery by mail or personally by the growers, can be counted.

Said mass meetings August 30th will be called to order by a member designated by the President of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association and will select their own officers. Besides nominating candidates for delegate, they will select three competent members to conduct the election to be held September 13 and will certify, through the chairman and secretary, the names of both the candidates for delegate and the members selected to conduct the election to the Secretary of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association.

Delegates chosen at the election September 13 will meet in each district in that county which delivered the largest amount of tobacco of the 1923 crop to the association on and will proceed to elect a director for such district to serve for the ensuing year. The name of such director shall be certified to the President of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association by the chairman and secretary of such convention.

Besides the ballots mailed to each member of the Association the election officers in each county shall be provided with ballots to the number of ten (10) per cent of the membership of such county, but each grower is hereby urged not to lose or misplace the ballot mailed to him but to mark and vote that ballot, either in person or by mail, at the election September 13.

WORKERS

Critics of men in the public eye may condemn their unmerited, but they generally come around to the same terminal every time—that the men in question are great workers.

The history of the lives of all outstanding men reveals their devotion to work. They become masters of their job first by work and then become masters of men.

When you think of oil, you think of Rockefeller. When you think of the telephone, you immediately think of Bell. When you think of the automobile, you immediately think of Ford, and when you think of electricity, the name of Edison comes to your lips.

The electrical wizard is the greatest living exponent of work. It is said of him that he once instructed his secretary to notify a man only when he had an appointment, that he should come at twelve o'clock. It was twenty minutes to twelve when the telephone message was received.

The man asking an audience replied that he could not reach Edison's office by noon and the secretary informed him that the appointment was for midnight. Mr. Edison's caller found him listening to some music on the piano. At five minutes before twelve he dismissed the pianist and sat down to lunch with his caller to transact the business at hand.

It is said that Edison has gone two or three days at a time without changing his clothes or going home, even though his home is but a short distance from the laboratory.

This prodigious industry is rare in men, but even in a lesser degree, it is a very important part of achieving results.

No man can master his own business or profession without work. It is only by work that he can study his business and become skilled in it, and not until he is a student and is skilled, can he become a master of himself and his undertaking in life. Leaders of men are always workers else they would not be leaders.

THE TRICKS OF TRADE

Some people claim that the war introduced a good deal of deception into the arts of production. They feel that the idea of substitution gained a firm hold at that time, when producers were encouraged to use inferior material in a time of shortage. Now it is claimed, many of them keep on using such poor stuff.

The merchants of Boone county do not approve of tricky ways. They make nothing but trouble for the retail dealer, if by some chance, or because the public demands a cheap article, they have to deal in inferior quality stuff, a long succession of complaints is sure to follow. Our merchants do not believe in inferior stuff made to look like good, nor in deceiving trade names. If they had their way, they would have goods labeled and marked for just what they are, so that every person would know precisely what he is buying. In so far as they know, they are glad to tell just what is in goods.

MEALS FOR TWO

Where there are but two in the family for which to provide meals unless there are guests there are many things which must be denied them as they represent too much in leftovers. However, there are enough to keep a variety, even for two.

The spring chicken is just about the right size for two when it first comes into the market and chops and small steaks may be bought in any market. Fish is another dish for the small family, when one may buy a fillet of any of the larger trout or lake fish, and the smaller ones are of suitable size to serve whole.

Vegetables may be cooked and served in any quantity, small or large; omelets are good for the small family; soufflés may be prepared in any size and puddings of various kinds and small pies may be prepared.

A larger chicken need not be an extravagance, for it may be served in various ways without becoming monotonous. Use the back with the neck and wing tips for stew with dumplings. Save the breast or part of it for chicken salad, or slice it and serve it cold. The giblets, if cooked slowly covered with cold water, may be chopped and added to the gravy or served in a rich cream sauce on buttered toast.

Part of the chicken after parboiling may be fried, such as the second joints, wings and drumsticks. If the meat seems too scanty add a cupful of fresh cooked mushrooms. There may be found in the fields all summer. All left over may be used as minced chicken on toast and the bones and edible parts will make a nice dish of soup, adding cream and a beaten egg.

Salads are easy to prepare in small quantities and one need never lack for variety.

Breakfast Mackerel.—Soak a salt mackerel over night; if fresh place in a pan and cover with this cream. Bake until thoroughly cooked. Serve with hot buttered toast.

"All the dull, deep pain, and constant anguish of patience!"

—Evangeline.

Peaceful patience is for the old or the philosophical. For the rest of humanity, patience is, indeed, a matter of constant anguish, a waiting for the hope deferred that "maketh the heart sick." So true is this that Thoreau, looking around at his acquaintances, expressed the belief that "The mass of men lead lives of quiet desperation. What is called resignation is confirmed desperation."

Patience has merits, but no pleasures. There is no doubt that whatever we greatly desire will come to us if we have the patience to wait for it long enough; but it takes age or great philosophy to lead us to say with Burroughs:

Serene, I fold my hands and wait,
Nor care for wind nor tide nor sea;
I rave no more against time or fate,
For lo! my own shall come to me.

The stars come nightly to the sky;
The tidal wave unto the sea;
Not time, nor space, nor deep, nor high,
Can keep my own away from me.

Most of us want what we want when we want it. When we are patient, it is because our only choice is between patience and impatience.

We speak much of the patience of Job, but little of the anguish of that patience—the anguish that led him to curse the day of his birth, crying out, "Let the day perish wherein I was born"; the anguish expressed in his speech, "When I lie down, I say, 'When shall I arise, and the night be gone?' and I am full of tossings to and fro until the morning of the day."

One of the great causes of misunderstanding between the old and the young is due to the fact that the old can be serenely patient and the young cannot. It was Holmes who told the tale of the farmer who refused to plant an apple orchard because the trees matured so slowly he might not reap the benefits of his toil. The farmer's father refused for the same reason; but the old grandfather planted the orchard and lived to drink cider made from its apples. It takes much of the "dull, deep pain, and constant anguish of patience" to bridge the gap between the impatient young man and the patient grandfather.

Season Tickets $2—Wonders Program for Young and Old.

A special appeal to attract the farmers of Kentucky to the State Fair which will be held the week of September 8th to 13th, is being made this year through the inauguration of the sale of $2.00 season tickets at every Bank in Kentucky, the establishment of one of the finest and most modern tourist camps at the fair grounds and a program of wide scope to entertain young and old.

These season tickets, which formerly sold at a higher price, will be accepted this year for admittance to the automobile gate, general admission gate, horse show, race track, fireworks or hippodrome.

Heretofore, season tickets have only been sold in Louisville and withdrawn Saturday before the opening of the Fair, which prevented many visitors from reaping the benefits of them.

To Hold Radio Show.
In the Merchants & Manufacturers Building a number of new exhibits will be shown among these a radio show which is expected to attract many spectators. At this show will be shown the possibilities of the radio wave in war uses and in peace time pursuits. One manufacturer has signified that his exhibit will show the control of movable objects by radio, the running and stopping of an electrical toy by the mystical wave and the exploding of a small charge of explosive by radio.

An addition to the State Fair Zoo are three buffalo, a pair brought from Canada this Spring and their calf recently born here.

International Horse Show.
Horses from the United States, Canada and England, this year will compete in the ring for the International Championship and $10,000 purse for the champion five-gaited saddle horse.

This great event, which has won world recognition as the most important horse show in this country, is in four parts: stables, stallions and geldings competing the first three nights of the Fair and the final night, the horses that won first, second, third and fourth prizes, meeting for the grand prize.

Baby Show Contest.
Kentucky again is in the spotlight when the baby health contest opens the week prior to the opening of the Fair. In this State the first perfect baby in America was discovered two years ago in the baby health contest.

The Kentucky State Fair uses the same standard of grading the babies as is used in other States, but the best previous record until 1922 was 98.2 per cent—then came the 100 per cent baby.

Persons wishing to enter their children may communicate with State Fair headquarters and Entry Blanks will be furnished.

Due to the high number of entrants in this department of the Fair, all Louisville babies are examined during the week previous to the opening of the Fair, while babies from other places are examined at the Fair grounds.

The baby health department this year is under the direction of Mrs. Stuart Smith, entries closing August 28th.

DIAMONDS AT HOME

Many people have heard and scores of others have read "Aces of Diamonds" a lecture delivered thousands of times by Russell H. Conwell.

It is founded upon the incident of the restless man who dreamed of riches in a land afar off; who sold his farm and searched the world for riches, only to die a lonely, unaided pauper in a far-away land.

The children of the man who bought his farm, while playing in the garden one day, found pretty stones, which their father discovered were diamonds, and there were actually "aces of diamonds"—fabulous wealth—on the farm the first man had sold and abandoned in order to search for riches he imagined existed elsewhere.

But the man who couldn't see his "aces of diamonds" was typically human. The grass in our neighbor's yard is always greener; his flowers bloom more beautifully he seems to get along so much easier than we; a sum, he has all the good luck and we have all of the misfortune.

Isn't it about time that we begin to search for our "aces of diamonds"? Take stock of our many advantages, make the most of them and discount our disadvantages and he will do better.

Neighboring communities have things we haven't. But we return have priceless possessions that they do not have.

The buyer of the farm with "aces of diamonds" did not leave the gems in the ground. One discovered, he mined them, of course, and sold them on his discovery.

Every community possesses its "aces of diamonds." The progress of each depends upon the ingenuity of the people in discovering them, mining them and selling them.

ALFALFA CAN BE SOWN NOW.

Perhaps the most favorable time for the summer seeding of alfalfa is from August 10 to September 1. If sown earlier weeds may give trouble, while if sown later the plants may not make so efficient root growth to prevent heaving out during the winter. However, in most seasons alfalfa sown by September 1 will winter successfully according to the Agronomy Department of the College of Agriculture.

Success in summer seeding necessitates very carefully preparing the seed bed. The soil should be well pulverized and firm. It should contain sufficient moisture to insure prompt germination of the seed and the rapid growth of the young plants. After the seed bed is prepared, but before the seed is sown, the surface should be stirred lightly with a harrow whenever it becomes crusted or weeds appear. Deep stirring which tends to loosen up the soil should be avoided.

Time of Seeding

Favorable moisture conditions are very essential for the success of summer seeding of alfalfa. Even when the soil contains considerable moisture the surface may be quite dry and to get the seed in moist soil they must be covered deeper than is desirable. The use of a heavy roller before seeding will bring the moisture closer to the surface and permit shallower covering of the seed. This is preferable to deep seeding as a hard beating rain may pack the ground so hard that a poor stand will be secured. The most favorable conditions for seeing obtained after a rain—and it usually pays to wait as long as it is safe in an effort to secure this condition.

Method of Seeding

The use of a clover-seed drill will give the best distribution of seed and unless the seed bed is loose, the most uniform covering of the seed.

If the seed is sown broadcast a more even stand can be secured by sowing half seed one direction and the other half in cross direction. A smoother or drag harrow is the best instrument for covering the seed that has been broadcast. The use of a roller, especially a smooth one, seeding is not advisable unless the ground is very dry, as it is likely to produce a thick crust following a rain.

Rate of Seeding

The rate of seeding generally practiced in Kentucky is from 10 to 15 pounds per acre. Under favorable conditions a good stand can be obtained by sowing less seed, but rarely ever pays to economize on seed, for a thick stand of plants is great help in keeping down weeds. Inoculation must be used for satisfactory results with alfalfa.

The young men who under-ate to observe Sleep Week in business hours need not be surprised if they are laid off for permanent rest.

BRYAN'S DIAGNOSIS

AND REMEDIES

Governor Charles W. Bran, when accepting the Democratic nomination for the Vice Presidency, listed the following Republican policies as "responsible for the failure of agriculture."

Reduction of the surtax rates, and thus shifting the burden of taxation to the farmer.

The adoption of a high tariff, thus raising prices for articles bought by the farmer.

The deflation policy which resulted in withdrawal of farm loans.

Republicans measures designed to aid the farmer were insufficient. The high tariff on farm products failed to raise the price of farm products, determined in foreign markets. All it has accomplished "is to add to the farmer's knowledge of the working of the protective tariff."

Governor Bryan declared the Democratic party has proved itself the friend of the farmer. He listed the following measures gained by the Democratic platform for farm relief:

Lower tariff rates of the Federal Reserve System.

Lower rail and water freight rates.

Development of deep waterways from the Great Lakes to the Atlantic Ocean.

Development of water power to provide cheap fertilizer and power.

Better and more uniform warehouse laws.

Legislation to aid co-operative marketing facilities.

An expert corporation to sell surplus farm produce.

Revision of the tax laws, away from the Mellon plan.

"CAVEAT EMPTOR"—LET THE POULTRYMAN BEWARE

So far as is known by any of the scientists of the United States Department of Agriculture who have been testing the claims of certain manufacturers of lice, mite, and blue bug preparations, there is no preparation made that can be fed to poultry in the food or drinking water that will kill external pests or parasites. There are being advertised and continuously offered to the poultrymen numerous misbranded preparations for use in this way by manufacturers who are either entirely ignorant of the physiology of a chicken or grossly unscrupulous. These preparations are sold for the most part directly to consumers by parcel post.

Most of the products so advertised are composed of various combinations of such chemicals as sulphur, charcoal, calcium, sulphide, capsicum, sodium carbonate, naphthalene, sand, nux vomica, calcium polymorphide, and other ingredients. The Insecticide and Fungicide Board has recently made tests of a number of these mixtures and reports that in no single instance has one been found to give the effects claimed for it. The board further states that it is of the opinion that it is unlikely that any substance will be found which will control or kill external parasites of chickens when fed in the feed or drinking water.

Tests have not been made of all of the substances advertised against all of the insects named, but it is believed that sufficient evidence has been obtained to prove the extreme unlikelihood of the method of controlling external pests by internal administration of an insecticide.

EIGHT SPEECHES TO BE MADE BY GOVERNOR FIELDS

Governor W. J. Fields completed arrangements for beginning his speaking tour in the interest of the $75,000,000 bond issue. Besides an address at Camp Knox, Ky., next Thursday, at a gathering of National Guard units in the Fifth Army Corps and an international visit at the Ewing Fair Friday, the dates are: August 21, Pulaski county fair; 28, Williamson, W. Va., afternoon, and Pikeville, night; 29, afternoon, Louisville; night Blaine; September 1, Carlisle.

The total amount of state funds on deposit in state depositories, as shown by Treasurer E. B. Dishman's books, less unpaid checks, is $5,837,428.83, at close of business on July 31. T. Scott Mays, State Inspector and Examiner, said today in a report to Governor W. J. Fields.

"The total amount on deposit as reported by the depositories, at close of business July 31, 1924, is $5,837,428.83; the difference of $11,551.65 is credited items at various depositories, which items have not been covered into the Treasury," Mr. Mays declared.

LIBRARIES ARE IMPROVING

Kentucky Secretary Finds—Books Well Cared For, She Says

Frankfort, Ky., August 17.—Almost without exception, libraries have reported progress and improvement. Miss Fannie C. Rawson, Secretary of the Kentucky Library Commission, finds.

"The traveling libraries make a total of 780 stations in 119 counties of the state," she says. "When a library is returned the books are gone over carefully to see that no pages are missing, all torn places are mended, and cleaning is done when necessary. When possible recasing is done in the office, but if the books need to be rebound they are prepared for the bindery."

"Most of our libraries keep an accurate record of book loans and by actual count the maximum circulation for a library has been 950, or 19 issues to a book."

CARE OF THE SKIN

The skin is far more than a mere covering for the body. It is a vast organ of sensation and also the heat regulator of the body, radiating the bodily heat when the weather is hot and conserving it when the weather is cold. In hot weather its millions of tiny sweat glands pour out their droplets of moisture which cool the surface of the body as they evaporate; when exposed to cold they contract and prevent the escape of the heat. The skin is also an indispensable organ of excretion, discharging a great amount of waste material through the glands. If it is prevented from performing this function to any considerable degree, as when a large part of the skin is burned, the body cannot live. Further, the activity of the capillary circulation depends in no small degree upon the condition of the skin. For all these reasons, therefore, it is important to keep the skin clean and active.

Soap and water are the important agents of cleanliness, practically available to all. As far as the child is concerned, nothing else is required. Powder should be used only in minute quantities and only upon opposing surfaces, such as between the buttocks or in the armpits. Powder, creams, and ointments clog the pores of the skin and thus destroy some part of the value of the bath. Even soap rubbed directly upon the skin without being first dissolved to a lather in warm water does the same thing, and for this reason it must be thoroughly well rinsed out at the close of the bath.

Ointments and applications are sometimes necessary in the cure of relief of various troubles, but when the skin is healthy and clean, the less foreign matter rubbed into it the better.

After bathing the baby rinse the skin thoroughly of all soap then wrap him in a soft warm towel and lay him on the table to dry him. Do not rub the skin but pat it with moist towel until dry being especially careful to dry the creases and folds. The above is taken from a Children's Bureau Bulletin.

The payment of millions of dollars in back compensation to disabled veterans of the World War hinges upon the outcome of a controversy between the National Rehabilitation Committee of The American Legion and the U. S. Veterans' Bureau.

The Legion Committee, through its chairman, Watson E. Miller, has taken decided issue with Director Hines against his preliminary instructions to the field offices that payment of retroactive compensation to those persons whose cases have been presumptively connected with service under section 200 of the World War Veterans' act of 1924, may not be made for any period prior to the date of the passage and approval of the act, June 7, 1924.

The preliminary ruling of the bureau does not affect any of those claims which have been connected with service by historical facts, where in under the provisions of section 210 of the act compensation may be paid retroactively for one year prior to the filing of claim, the amount depending upon the physical condition of the claimant during that period. It is the Legion's announced purpose to place upon this same statute those claims which have now been connected with service through the operation of the "presumptive" clause in the new act.

In disagreement with Director Hines' interpretation of the act, Mr. Miller declared, "It seems to me that we have here the proposition in section 200 of the law clearly recognizing that a claimant who is presumptive connected shall be presumed to have acquired his disability in such service between April 6, 1917 and July 2, 1921. In this phrasing there is a definite suggestion of retroactivity in that the time a man acquired his disability is placed back within a period now some years remote. Granting that the ex-service person acquired his disability during some period prior to the enactment of the World War Veterans' act of 1924, would you inform me wherein that act provides that he shall not be compensated during that disability, providing a claim has been filed? I recognize that the disability must be of compensable degree and that no compensation shall be payable for any period more than one year prior to the date of claim, as provided in section 210 of the act. This is a question of when the disabled man acquired his right. Section 200 states this clearly as being between the dates of April 6, 1917, and July 2, 1921. Compensation then should be payable subject only to the limitations of section 210."

Mr. Miller stated, that the fact that definite ruling on the retroactivity clause of the act has been withheld since the passage of the act more than two months ago, seems to indicate that the Legion's point will be won.

That adults engaged in painful occupations are endeavoring to keep pace with social and industrial demands is nowhere more evident than in the city of Detroit. Upward of 13,000 men and women, according to a statement made by W. M. Cullie, United States ambassador to San Francisco.

BASE BALL.

The Hebron Ball Club under the temporary management of John B. Cloud defeated Burlington, score 13 to 5.

There were so many Hebron boys on the Burlington team that it was hard to tell which team was at bat. It required the combined efforts of Hafer, Bullock and Walton as pitchers to pull Hebron through. On the other hand for Burlington Hogan pitched a good game, had he been given good support and had he succeeded in keeping the Hebron team from knocking the ball out of the lot the score could have been closer.

Home runs, Owen Aera 2; E. Aera 1; Earl Aylor 1. Three base hits S. Aera. Two base hits Conner. Strike outs Hogan 10; Hafer 4; Bullock 7 in three innings, Walton 0. The high spots of the game were hitting by Owen-Aera and a one-hand catch of Conner's line drive by Wiley, followed by a perfect throw to first for a double play. There being two men on base and Conner's liner had all the earmarks of a home run.

HEBRON BALL CLUB

Bellevue encountered Petersburg on the latter team's last Saturday afternoon, and while neither team had its full strength at hand to throw into the fray, nevertheless quite an interesting combat was staged. Ruth was in the box for Petersburg and pitched an excellent game, allowing but three hits and fanning ten men. The feature of the game, outside of Ruth's pitching, was a wonderful running catch by Cook for Bellevue. The final score was 3-1 in favor of Petersburg.

Hits off Ruth 3; off Brady 9. Struck out by Ruth 10; by Brady 4. Two Base Hits—Black, Nixon. Three Base Hit—Ruth.

There will be two games of ball at Burlington park next Saturday. First game called at 1:30.

Next Saturday winds up the season's schedule in the Boone County League, although Burlington and Hebron have two postponed games to play after the season is closed. Bellevue and Burlington play a double header, while Hebron and Petersburg play one game.

By virtue of Bellevue's defeat by Petersburg last Saturday there is but a half game difference in these two teams for the leadership, but Petersburg plays the strong Hebron club next Saturday, while Bellevue encounters the practically helpless Burlington team.

Here are the "ifs" and possible results—Bellevue clinches the pennant by defeating Burlington in both games—if, by any miracle Burlington should win one of the games, Petersburg must still win from Hebron in order to tie Bellevue for first.

Then on the other hand if Hebron should trim Petersburg, they must still win both halves of their postponed double-header with Burlington in order to tie Bellevue for second place.

In other words, if Burlington wins both games from Burlington its pennant is clinched, and if Petersburg wins its game from Hebron, second place is clinched—otherwise some interesting developments are yet possible.

FARM BUREAU NOTES.

Members of the Boone County Farm Bureau are going to meet at the Burlington Farm Bureau office Thursday of this week to discuss plans for the county fair, which will be held this fall. The sales manager will be present at the meeting and he and our county agent will go over all the cattle to be entered in the sale on Friday.

At the meeting following the Orchard tour of last week a committee consisting of C. Liston, J. Frank Rouse, J. W. Goodridge, Benj. Kelly, J. Everett Ryle, Sterling Rouse was appointed from this county to promote a fruit show and a three day Orchard school to be put on by the Extension Division of the College of Agriculture. The affair will be for Boone, Kenton and Campbell counties and will be held at Covington.

Mr. Ben E. Niles, Secy. of the Kentucky Horticultural Club has offered his services and the services of the Club to make this show a success.

All Boone county people interested in such a school and fruit show should visit the County Agts. office or his booth at the county fair next week and sign up for it. When Mr. Magill, Fruit Extension man from the University, was here last week he remarked that twenty men or women asking for such a school from each of the three counties would justify holding it in this end of the State.

Members of the Boone County Poultry Association will meet at the Florence Farm Bureau office Friday evening of this week to discuss plans for a Winter Poultry show to be held late this fall. All who are interested are asked to attend this first meeting.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Jeffries have returned to their home in Ludlow after touring through Kentucky and Indiana, and visiting his uncle, Mr. John Jeffries at Hanover.

We hear that Jesse R. Eddins will quit the farm and move to Burlington some time this fall, and will go in partnership with his brother, O. S. Eddins in the garage business.

Ex-Judge Frank M. Tracy and Hon. M. L. Galkin, of Covington, have associated together in the practice of law in Ohio and Kentucky.

Rev. J. B. Arvin, of Owensville, Mo., who has been visiting his brother, J. B. Arvin and family, returned home Monday morning.

Stanley Parsons, one of the Recorder's good friends, of Burlington R. D. 3, was a business visitor to Burlington last Friday.

Morris' Circus will give a free entertainment at the Florence Fair next week, each afternoon at 1:30 and each evening at 7:30.

Robert Barnes entertained a number of friends at his home on the Burlington and Hebron road, last Thursday evening.

Morris' Troupe in circus acts, in the exhibition ring, each afternoon and evening, at Florence Fair next week.

TAX EXEMPT OFFERING INCREASE.

The output of tax-free securities during the first half of 1924 exceeds all previous records, being nearly $750,000,000—three times output for entire year 1918.
The urgent demand of wealth for an avenue of escape from taxation has created a ready market for these securities, encouraging taxing authorities to plunge communities recklessly into debt. "The Bond Buyer of June 28, reviewing the situation says:
"Just about one hundred important offerings of State, municipal and Federal Land Bank bonds which have been offered in the New York market since January 1st aggregate slightly more than $500,000,000 or an average of $5,000,000 per issue.
"Total of all State and municipal financing for six months ending on June 30th is estimated at not less than $600,000,000. If to this we add $95,000,000 Federal Land Bank and numerous Joint Stock Land Bank issues, the aggregate of tax-exempt securities offerings for the six months will come very close to three quarters of a billion."

There will be two games of ball and other athletic events at Hebron Decoration Day. See adv. in this issue of the RECORDER.

GOOD ADVICE FOR FARMERS

In a booklet just published entitled "Safeguarding the Farm Against Fire" the National Board of Fire Underwriters says:

"The farmer, above all others, needs to give special attention to the reduction of fire hazards and the adoption of protective methods. This is true for several reasons. In the first place his house, barn and out-buildings usually are constructed of combustible materials; being more or less isolated, they are peculiarly subject to lightning stroke; kerosene and gasoline are likely to be stored about the premises and used for light and power; the farmer crams his barn with hay, straw and feed aff of which are subject to spontaneous combustion; and last, but by no means least, he is nearly always beyond the reach of organized fire protection.

"Fire precautions ought to be an integral part of the original plan of a farmstead. Its various buildings should be so separated that if a fire occurs in one, the rest will not inevitably be doomed. In common with dwellings everywhere, there are several interior features of rural home construction which, although higher in first cost than ordinary work, carry with them increased safety to life and property. Among these are the employment of fire-resistant roofing material; the provision of two stairways in different parts of the house; the enclosure of stairways, particularly a rear one that enters the kitchen, and the installation of fire-stopping between floors. All these items with the exception of the fire-stopping, are features that can be introduced even in structures long standing."

LEGION NOTES

Competition for the 1925 convention of the American Legion will be keen, it was learned at national headquarters. Several bids have already been received for the honor of entertaining the veterans of the World War. Selection of a convention city will be made at the sixth annual convention, which will be held at St. Paul, Minnesota, in the third week in September.

Louisville, Ky., is planning to put up a stiff battle for the selection, it is said, with the backing of the entire Department of Kentucky. Newark, New Jersey, is also a formidable contender.

San Francisco, Cal., which entertained the convention in 1923, has extended an invitation for 1925, offering the use of its $2,000,000 Exposition Auditorium. San Francisco is the second city in which a national convention of the Legion has been held, to extend a pressing invitation to the veterans to return.

Already one contender for the 1926 convention has appeared. Philadelphia is seeking the convention as a feature of the sesqui-centennial of the signing of the declaration of independence.

Special Correspondent of the RECORDER

CHARLES E. HUGHES, returning from Europe to resume his duties as Secretary of State, found himself this week as the highest ranking Government official in Washington. President Coolidge has gone to the Vermont hills for a 10-day vacation leaving the Secretary of State to hold the fort here. Hughes is confident that peace is now in sight in Europe through the operation of the Dawes reparations plan, this view being based on his conversations with European Statesmen during the past few weeks.

WASHINGTON WAS shaken out of its summer clam by the Republican notification ceremonies, taking on the appearance of the days when Congress is in session, but even at that did not get up the enthusiasm that marked the Democratic notification in Clarksburg. There were no bands or marching crowds and little cheering or general carrying-on. In fact, there was just as much difference between the Republican and Democratic notification ceremonies as there was between the respective conventions of the two parties.

WILHELM CUNO, one time Chancellor of the German Republic, is slated to be the New German Ambassador to the United States. He will succeed Otto Wiedfeldt, who troubles with the Berlin Foreign Office have led to his request for retirement next month.

HAVING LITTLE to keep them busy, the newspaper correspondents are organizing base ball teams to pass the time. The White House reporters call themselves "Cal's Cucumbers." They have already triumphed over the White House photographers and the Treasury correspondents, known as "Andy's Melons." The President and Mrs. Coolidge witnessed their first game, which was played in the ellipse back of the Executive Mansion.

AIR MAIL PLANES are being used by the Department of Agriculture to transport crop reports from the Pacific Coast to Washington three days time being saved in the transcontinental trip. Recently a California murderer kept his appeal before the United States Supreme Court by resorting to the air service to rush the record of his local conviction across the country.

ALL TAX PAYERS, including the Democrats, had to help pay for the thousands of copies of President Coolidge's acceptance speech, which were mailed to newspapers throughout the country. The speech was printed at public expense at the Government Printing Office, as are all addresses of the Presidents. The Printing Office also turned out the Bryan, La Follette, and Walsh speeches, but at the expense of the Democratic National Committee. The Davis speech was printed in New York.

LOS ANGELES is up in arms and has complained bitterly to the War Department because the American round the world fliers are going to end their circumnavigation of the globe at Seattle instead of Clover Field near Los Angeles. The Army Air Service plans to cut off 19 days by stopping at Seattle, where the fliers actually left the United States and cut off into the Pacific. Los Angeles claims, however, that there is no logic in ending the flight at any point except where it started. A compromise may be worked out whereby the fliers will sail over Los Angeles without stopping there.

In this day and age, under the Volstead law, when everything is as dry as a desert, and the only thing a fellow can get to quench his thirst, is a glass of pure water, there is nothing sweeter than sweet things. And what is sweeter than a jug of sweet cider, unless it is the disposition of the giver. One day last week Mr. Claude Greenup, who resides on B. T. Kelly's farm on the Burlington and Waterloo pike, favored the writer with a jug of apple juice pressed from delicious apples from one of the finest orchards in this neck of the woods. Our disposition will not sour as long as this beverage lasts. Thanks, Mr. Greenup. By your charitable act of kindness you have appeased the thirst of the righteous, evolved a state of happiness out of the gloom of despair and have added sweetness to the joy of life.

18,000 PEOPLE IN GREAT GRIFFITH FILM

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION" COVERS ESSENTIAL DETAILS OF CIVIL WAR HISTORY

D. W. Griffith's master production, "The Birth of a Nation," a United Artists release, will be the attraction at the Florence Theatre commencing an engagement of three nights on September 11th.

It will be brought here in exact reproduction of the greatest attraction which in New York recently set a record by playing to more people in two weeks time than had ever before gathered in a play house. This was the massive Capitol Theatre where over 150,000 people witnessed the spectacle in a fortnight.

The most interesting statement regarding "The Birth of a Nation" leaps to superlatives because there is no other form in which it can be written. Simple facts in relationship to its developments sound extravagant until you have seen the production and realized a tithe of its sweep and power.

It covers the essential details of American history ranging through three centuries. Actual battles are shown with tens of thousands of soldiers in the conflict, 18,000 people participated in the telling of the story. Three thousand horses were used to give the cavalry and other thrilling effects of the wild dashes over miles of territory. Cities were built up only to be destroyed by fire. The total cost of the entire production was in the neighborhood of $500,000.

3 HOLSTEIN WINNERS

Three Boone county breeders of Holstein cattle were among those from all parts of the state attending the re-organization meeting of the Kentucky Holstein-Friesian Club at Carrollton on August 6th. The representatives from this county were Cecil Harter, and Hubert Conner of Burlington, and Benj. Paddock, of Hebron. The meeting was held on the farm of R. M. Barker, near Carrollton.

A more active state association of Holstein breeders was planned, having a definite program of work to be done during the coming year.

As a result of the meeting Holstein interests in Kentucky will be developed to a greater degree than ever before under the leadership of a new set of officers and directors. Mr. Barker was elected president; Lindley Henderson, of Shelbyville, vice-president, and W. O. Ashurst, of Georgetown, secretary-treasurer. Following an educational program and a discussion pertaining to work to be done in the state in the development of the Holstein cattle industry a committee was appointed to draft a constitution and by-laws and outline a program of work, which will be submitted at the next meeting of the club to be held in Louisville, September 11th. Stanley Combs, a southern field representative of the Holstein-Friesian Association of America, is assisting the state breeders in their re-organization work.

WILD-EYED DRIVING

"Motorists Kill Three and Injure Two," says a newspaper headline. There's nothing particularly unusual about that. It happens every day in some city or some rural community. Lives are continually being slaughtered at the altar of the god of speed. People are becoming so accustomed to the daily occurrence that they no longer feel the sense of horror that once accompanied such tragedies.

Wilful disregard of laws and safety rules, as well as the rules of common decency, as practiced by a growing number of motorists, is certain to bring into being a flood of "thou shalt not" bills in the legislature.

Though public sentiment seems to be asleep, it will flare up some day, when reckless drivers go the limit, and decent drivers will have to suffer in the reaction when the pendulum swings back.

It would be the part of wisdom to attempt to curb the wild-eyed driving before the many have to suffer for the sins of the few.

ECONOMIZING ON ROADS

In many rural districts high taxation is felt so keenly that there is talk of economizing on road work. It is a very serious matter to let a road go to pieces, and sometimes a few dollars now will save many dollars in a year or two.

It is perhaps true, however, that the large hopes entertained a few years ago of extensive road improvement may have to be adjourned until rural conditions are somewhat improved and the burden of taxation lessened. But a great deal of good work can be done with the less expensive types of construction and repairs. Highway authorities should get all possible information from the government and state highway officials, to become familiar with the most economical ways of making the repairs that should not be let go.

ANNUAL OUTING

OF BURLINGTON BAPTIST SUNDAY SCHOOL HELD AT HARVEST HOME, THURSDAY AUGUST 21.

Last Thursday morning at an early hour the members of the local Baptist Sunday school made their appearance on the streets of Burlington and were soon on their way to the Harvest Home grounds to enjoy their annual picnic. The first half of the day was spent in the usual picnic activities and frolics and at noon the dinner was served, after which all returned to the school ground, where the "hottest" base ball game of the season was staged.

The two contesting aggregations were chosen from the men's class by captains Tolin and Smith. Captain Tolin started on the mound for his team while Rev. Adams of last year's fame, started the game for Smith. Tolin succumbed to the glaring rays of "Old Sol" early in the fight, and Lassing took his place. The two teams went into the ninth with the score 6-6, but Tolin's men pounced upon the firing Adams scoring three runs and winning 9-6. It was a surprise to everyone that Adams lasted nine rounds, for the heat was terrific.

C. L. Gaines, who has been superintendent for several years, was presented with a fine rocking chair.

MAKING DIVORCE EASY

Judge T. O. Hatchcock of the Municipal court of Atlanta, Ga., believes that to make divorce easy, marriage should be made more difficult.

This is a paradox that is difficult to comprehend. In making marriage regulations more strict, the aim is to overcome the divorce evil.

The judge's conclusion is that if hasty marriages were prevented by uniform laws, divorce would be simple because it would require legal separation would have good reasons and the cases would be materially reduced.

"Divorce is a splendid thing," says the judge, "when two people find they can not live together."

There may be cases where divorce is a "splendid thing" but they are few and far between. The meaning of those fateful words "for better or for worse" will have to be understood by the candidates for matrimony before a beginning will be made in the direction of solving the divorce evil.

Laws are not so much the solution as education. It is clearly the province of the parents to prepare their children for marriage. Only when they understand what marriage means, will young men and women be prepared for wedded life.

SCHOOL NOTES.

There will be a two days meeting of the school forces of Boone county in Burlington, Thursday and Friday, Sept. 4th and 5th. On the afternoon of the 5th the Common School Commencement will be held in the Baptist church. All graduates are expected to be present.

All teachers must be present to get teachers' supplies and registers. The text books which are practically all new, will be gone over and the "Course of Study" will be discussed.

A great day for Hebron will be Monday, Sept. 1st on this date the new school house, which is one of the best, if not the best, in the county, will be dedicated, appropriate exercises with some addresses will be had. Also two games of ball will be played and other athletic events will be staged.

It is an all day meet, dinner will be served on the ground. The public is invited, especially to see what our school board is trying to do. Come and see.

J. C. GORDON, Supt.

NATION'S BALANCE WHEEL

The United States, like all other countries, is suffering from two tendencies. There are first the radical elements, which interfere with the processes of industry by demanding more pay for less work, and who add to living costs by policies that restrict production.

Then there are the ultra conservatives, many of whom refuse to recognize the obligations created by wealth.

Between these two elements the country people have the balance of the advantages of meeting people's enterprise by giving them a chance for a fair profit. Yet they realize the dangers created by the sordid abuse of wealth. The common sense of the country people is the principal force that will save the country from the dangers created by these two extremes.

TRAIN KILLS MOTORIST.

FARMER HIT WHEN TRYING TO PUSH CAR FROM TRACK

Vernon French, 33 years old, of Devon, Ky., farmer, was killed instantly when a rack by a Southern Railway freight train Sunday while attempting to push his automobile off the track where it had stalled at the Devon crossing, 16 miles south of Covington. French, accompanied by his three children, was on his way to the Dixie Highway to deliver milk to a truck.

After cranking the car for some time, French noticed the approach of the freight train. He removed two of his children from the car and left the third one in the machine. Then he attempted to push the automobile off the track. French succeeded in getting his automobile clear of the track, but the engine caught him and dragged him several feet.

Members of the train crew removed the body to Walton, Ky., where it was placed in the undertaking establishment of Scott Chambers. The remains were sent to Cincinnati Monday, and funeral services were conducted there Tuesday.

SEEING THE COUNTRY

The American people spend an awful lot of money on their vacation trips, but while some of it is extravagantly used, the travel is beneficial to the people and to the country.

It is a benefit to get out and see other portions of our great and wonderful country. It is so everlasting big, that different sections have little idea of each other until they visit each other. They gain entirely wrong conceptions of the character of the people living in other sections. Many of the political quarrels that have interfered with national unity and progress were due to the lack of intercourse between localities. If people had traveled more and met people from other sections, much narrowness would have been avoided.

When people meet folks from other sections, and learn about conditions in these localities, they become more tolerant in their views. They are not so likely to deny the other section as fair claim in national development.

A BIG COMMUNITY FORCE.

It is interesting in looking over the discussions and reports of social students and civic workers, to see what a large place in community life they give to the local newspaper. If a town has a good newspaper, which is actively helping to promote community projects, as most local newspapers are, it is recognized by civic workers as one of the finest assets that town can have.

Of course it is a pretty hard proposition for a newspaper to take the whole burden of publicity for community enterprises. The minister is not expected to preach for nothing from his pulpit, much as he may love his message. Similarly the newspaper must have its living too. The community organizations, in expecting space for their notices, should take a little share of the cost of such publicity, by paying reasonable charges for notices.

Yet, even at that, the newspapers in every issue give free publicity to the activities of the organizations that are working for the home town. Many of these organizations would go to pieces if they were not constantly helped on by the public interest excited by newspaper notices.

Within the next week or so quite a number of Boone county boys and girls will leave for their school work, either to attend college or teach in various schools over the State and in other states. Nothing could be more welcome to the boys and girls than to have their home paper the Recorder, make them a weekly visit.

On account of the dry weather causing some tobacco to ripen, growers will be forced to cut it to save a total loss.

LOCAL HAPPENINGS

Members of the Boone County Jersey Breeders' Association of Boone county, met at the Farm Bureau headquarters in Burlington, last Thursday evening, and transacted some important business, and also made arrangements for a Jersey sale to be held at the Fair Grounds at Florence some time in September, at which it is proposed to put on sale about forty-five registered Jersey cattle. Mr. Chester Folck, Sales Manager, of Springfield, Ohio, was present at the meeting and aided the members in arranging their plans for this sale. This will afford lovers of the Jersey an opportunity to purchase some fine Jersey stock, for which Boone county is noted. Clubs in other states have held sales of this kind which have been quite successful, why can't Boone county do the same?

Stuart, 14-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Bush, was thrown from a horse last Thursday and badly crippled. Mr. and Mrs. Bush moved to Boone from Scott county several years ago and now live about three miles from Burlington on the Petersburg and Burlington pike. They were planning a return visit to their old home this week, but the accident will cause a postponement of their visit. Dr. Duncan was called and cared for the patient, who is doing nicely under the conditions.

Thirty-three years ago, August 16, 1891, the stock of merchandise belonging to Cropper Bros., was destroyed by fire in the building now occupied by the Farm Bureau. The fire started on the part of the bucket brigade saved the building. The fire started about one o'clock at night. It was with great difficulty that P. G. Cropper and wife, who occupied the upper story, made their escape by a ladder furnished by some of the citizens who heard their shouting fire and for assistance.

Boone county wool growers, who pooled their wool this year delivered their crops Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of last week at 50.5 cents per pound net. Earlier in the season some growers sold their wool at 40 cents per pound. The poolers seem to have the best of the argument this year and are giving the non-poolers the laugh. Boone county's wool crop this year was somewhat short of that of last year's in number of pounds. M. Sabel & Son, of Louisville, were the purchasers.

Joseph W. Scott, one of the Recorder's good friends, of Florence, and his grand-daughter, Miss Ella May Kenney, of the Dixie Highway, were visitors to Burlington, last Wednesday. While in town they made our sanctum a pleasant call. Mr. Scott for many years was the leading breeder of fine Jersey cattle in this part of the state. He had the subscription data on his paper and that of his son-in-law, Mr. Lawrence Kenney moved up another year.

On Monday next, Sept. 1st, the new Constable School building at Hebron will be dedicated. The committee in charge of the affair has arranged an appropriate program for the occasion—consisting of good music, ball game, athletic events in which prizes will be awarded, and last, but not least, dinner will be served, and this alone will be worth the price of admission—25 cents. Don't fail to attend and help push a good cause along.

Sherman Reeves, of Cincinnati, who was lodged in jail last Sunday week on the charge of operating a automobile while drunk was tried in the county court on Wednesday, August 26th, and fined $100 and cost, Monday, August 26th, and fined $100 and cost, which was paid.

Thos. Cowen, of Memphis, Tenn., who was visiting his relatives in Burlington, last week, and his son Shelby, of Covington, motored to Louisville, one day last week, thru Indiana, returning via Lexington and Georgetown. He left for his home in Memphis, Sunday evening.

A. B. Renaker returned Thursday night from a visit to Great county, where he attended the Downs-Moore lot sale at Dry Ridge. Mr. Renaker purchased a small tenant house at the sale. The sale was also attended by C. H. Youell, who is a regular at lot sales.

Our-Nonnariat Park and Devon communications, from some cause, did not reach his office, last week until after the terms had been made up and put on the press. Please start your communications so they will reach this office on Monday.

The Bellevue base ball fans are preparing to entertain a large crowd at their ball park next Monday, September 1st (Labor Day) when they play two games with the strong Erlanger team.

The inside walls of Boone County High School building were given a coat of calcimine last week. Ed. Haves and Edna Poston did the work.

Six large airplanes, all in a bunch, passed over Burlington, last Wednesday morning headed toward Louisville. Shortly after they had passed out of sight two others followed in the same direction.

John Binder, Sr., one of the Recorder's oldest friends, was in town Monday and, through force of habit, paid as his usual call. As he had his subscription, which was already ahead, moved up another year.

W. L. Cropper, Democrat, J. L. Kite, Republican, were appointed by the State Election Commissioners at Frankfort, last Wednesday, August 20th, to serve as commissioners for Boone county at the November 4th, election.

Professor Hook and wife, who will teach at the Boone County High School, this fall and winter, will occupy part of Mrs. Bess Kelly's residence. There is only one vacant house in Burlington—the flat above the Farm Bureau.

A Boone county farmer informs the editors that this talk about agricultural prosperity sounds good to him, but when he looks at his bank account he still wonders who is getting these millions that bet or prices are bringing to farmers.

THE PENALTY FOR MISTAKES.

It is amazing how a person's whole life may be affected by some trivial mistake. One error often seems to have affected a man's whole career.

Such a man may look back and see how in school or college he at one period stood about even with his associates. But there came a time when he became engrossed in some pleasure, and failed to give due attention to some particular study or examination. As a result of such neglect, he failed to pass some test or he fell behind in his studies. It did not seem to him of any great importance.

But as a result of his lapse, he had to either quit school or drop behind. He got it into his head that school was not doing him much good, so he decided to quit and go to work. But he found that his failure to make good seemed to create an unfavorable impression, or at least that he could not get the kind of work he desired. Meanwhile his associates kept on, and when they finished, with the prestige of successful work behind them, they were able to do better.

For such a wrong start innumerable men have found their lives amounting to go wrong. Those that did well in their studies seemed usually to go ahead. They may not have been any brighter or better at the start, but somehow they commanded confidence. Those that did not make good in school were apt to fall behind. A long career of failure or partial success was the penalty that nature seemed to have exacted for one mistake.

All people make mistakes. But those who have the right stuff get over them. One mistake need not discourage anyone. There is always a chance to recover from them. But each mistake that follows makes recovery a little harder, and calls for dogged resolution to recover lost ground.

The foundation for J. G. Smith's new bungalow on Gallatin street was put up last week, and in a few days the carpenter's hammer will be heard in that part of town.

BASE BALL.

Petersburg journeyed to Hebron Saturday and captured the last game of the season, thereby clinching second place, although they were sorely pressed in the 8th inning when Hebron tied the score. Petersburg, however, came back and won in the 9th, one of their favorite tricks. The final score being 7-6. The features of the game for Petersburg were the all-round playing of McWethy, hitting of Snelling, who obtained 4 out 5 times up, and Ruth's fielding and throwing on Owen Acra's long drive in the 8th.

For Hebron the feature was their wonderful rally in the 8th, making five hits and as many runs after two men were out, which tied the score. Hits off Christy 7; off Bullock 10. Struck out by Christy 5; by Bullock 7.

Bases on balls off Christy 1; off Bullock 3.
Two base hits Klop, Nixon, Riley.
Three base hits Snelling, Morehead, E. Acra, O. Acra.
Home Run—McWethy.

Bellevue won a double header from Burlington Saturday in easy fashion, and in so doing clinched the pennant for if they should have lost one of those games, a tie for first place was the best they could have gotten. Bellevue uncovered a new pitcher in the second game and from the way he mowed the Burlington batters down he is a "comer." He was none other than our old friend "Bill" Maguire, who has done some pitching for our second team this season. Heavy hitting which were won by the scores of 9-7 and 10-2.

The season is now over with the exception of one double-header on the local lot with Hebron, and with it a last lonesome chance for Burlington to win a game in the League. These games will be played on September 13th, if agreeable to both teams, as Florence Fair and Harvest Home come on the next two successive Saturdays.

If the Burlington club had shown any form at all the race would assuredly have been an interesting one, although the race between the first three teams was not decided until the last day of the season. Further announcements in base ball will be made later.

The first load of water melons from the Bellevue bottoms was brought to Burlington last Friday by Flave Loudon. They retailed at from 30 to 50 cents each. The melon crop in the river bottoms is short this year and very late. In former years home-grown melons made their appearance about the first of August.

The Democrats of Boone county know that a presidential election is on and they surely realize that victories are won only by those parties who are up and doing, by those parties who organize and poll their full strength.

The Democrats in the nation have no easy fight to make, while we are favored by the fact that the party in power has made some serious mistakes, yet we must remember the Republican party has always been able to raise the funds of war and to bring their entire force to the battle front to meet and conquer. In this fight this fall every Democrat is called upon to do his or her duty. To do this successfully Davis and Bryan clubs should be formed in each and every precinct in the county. So it is time for the Democrats of Boone county to get together, secure some one to be present and help out on this organization.

What precinct will send the ball to rolling—for a club to see that the vote of the precinct is polled for Davis and Bryan, Stanley and Rouse. Which precinct will be the banner precinct of the county? What do you say?

The last legislature passed a law exempting from grand jury and petit jury service, members of county and city boards of education. Executive officers, superintendents, principals and teachers are also exempt from jury service while school is in session. This law was passed so that school work will not be interfered with by summoning teachers for jury service.

Oklahoma and South Dakota are mending their highways. Oklahoma announces that 350 miles of hard surfaced roads are being built and the cost of the program, with bridges, will reach $9,959,000. The 6,000 mile trunk highway system of South Dakota, begun in 1919, will be approximately one-fourth completed and gravel surfaced at the end of 1924.

The State of Washington leads America in the lumber industry. With more than 392,500 logging camps and 800 saw mills, employing approximately 150,000 workers, the State's forests provide for one of the major industrial operations on the Pacific coast.

During the year ending June 30, exports of food stuffs from the U. S. amounted to $200,000,000 less than the preceding year. Even then the total value was about $200,000,000 more than the average before the war, due largely to higher prices.

It was formerly the custom in France, when the President spoke at public banquets, for the audience to remain standing during the speeches. This has been abolished by the new President M. Doumergue.

Prof. S. Kitaato, Japanese biologist and one of the discoverers of the bacillus of plague, has been created a Baron by the Emperor of Japan in recognition of his scientific achievements.

The United States today holds practically half the world's monetary gold. Every month for some time has seen a further accumulation until the total August 1 was $4,517,185,301.

AT LOUISVILLE, SEPTEMBER 8th-13th.

W. C. Montgomery, chairman of the state highway commission, has sent to the headquarters of the Kentucky Good Roads Association a signed statement in which he points out that present pressing demands for road construction in Kentucky aggregate about four times as much as there are funds with which to meet these demands.

Necessarily, he says, with only $11,500,000 available for construction during 1924 and 1925 and with $40,000,000 worth of work asked for the citizens of a great many counties anxious to have their roads built are going to be disappointed.

He makes it clear where the highway department, if the bond issue is voted, will have a perfect right to spend for construction surplus revenue received from motor vehicle licenses and the gasoline tax after sinking fund and interest charges and maintenance costs have been provided for.

Chairman Montgomery's statement follows:

"It is estimated that the revenue available for expenditure by the highway department for the fiscal year which ends June 30, 1925, will amount to $9,000,000 and that revenue for the succeeding year will be approximately the same.

Two-Year Revenue Apportioned.

"Following the suggestion of the court of appeals the commission is treating the revenue for the two years as one fund and has tentatively apportioned this revenue for the following purposes:

For maintenance, including reconstruction, $5,000,000; for overhead expenditures, $500,000; for emergencies $1,000,000; for original construction, $11,500,000.

"The records of the road department indicate that $700 to $800 a mile will be required for ordinary maintenance and it is the commission's intention to use the remainder of the $5,000,000 for reconstruction of roads which are now in such condition that re-surfacing will bring them up to the standards of the highway department.

"The construction fund of $11,500,000 available for the next two years is not large enough to work can be done in all the counties of the state and necessarily citizens of many of the counties will be disappointed.

"There have been pressing demands from delegations from all over the state for at least four times as much construction work as it is possible to do with the funds available.

"If only the most meritorious requests were granted the total would probably run to $40,000,000.

Bond Issue Quicker.

"If the bond issue should carry there would be available $10,000,000 a year in addition to the present revenue of $9,000,000 making a total of $19,000,000 a year less sinking fund and interest charge of $4,200,000.

"The urgent demands from all over the state could be met much quicker under the bond issue than under the present pay-as-you-go plan.

"By the time the proceeds of the bond issue was spent I believe that 1400 to 1500 miles more road could be built than under the present system. This rapid increase in mileage would add very materially to revenue from gasoline tax and automobile licenses and would provide ample funds for maintenance of the road system and for construction of such roads as could not be built with proceeds of the bond issue.

"I notice it is contended by opponents of the bond issue that none of the surplus revenue, after the payment of interest and sinking fund charges, could be used for anything but maintenance.

"The highway department has always construed the word 'maintenance' in its broadest sense and has done much work that is really construction under that head. The Louisville-Shelbyville road, for instance, is classed as maintenance.

NOTICE TO MEMBERS OF BURLEY TOBACCO GROWERS' CO-OPERATIVE ASSOCIATION:

TO OUR MEMBERS:

Mass meetings of all members of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association will be held at the court house in the county seat of each county in the Burley district on for the purpose of nominating candidates for delegates to the district conventions of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association, which will select directors for the Association for the coming year. These mass meetings will nominate twice as many delegates as the county in which they are held may be entitled to in the convention.

For each million pounds of tobacco of the 1923 crop delivered to the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association, each county shall be entitled to one delegate in said district convention, and in case any county did not deliver as much as a million pounds of tobacco of the 1923 crop to the Association, then such county shall elect one delegate; and said delegate shall have that fraction of one vote that the amount of tobacco delivered in 1923 is of one million pounds.

Each member of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association will receive by mail a ballot containing the names of the persons nominated for delegate at the mass meetings referred to and this ballot shall be voted at an election.

between the hours of 8 o'clock a. m. and 4 o'clock p. m. The ballot must be voted in person or by mail, but not otherwise and it must reach the election officers between the hours of election. Ballots should NOT be sent to the Association offices, as only those ballots which are presented to the election officers, either through delivery by mail or personally by the growers, can be counted.

Said mass meetings August 30th will be called to order by a member designated by the President of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association and will select their own officers. Besides nominating candidates for delegate, they will select three competent members to conduct the election to be held September 13 and will certify, thru the chairman and secretary, the names of both the candidates for delegate and the members selected to conduct the election to the Secretary of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association.

Delegates chosen at the election September 13 will meet in each district in that county which delivered the largest amount of tobacco of the 1923 crop to the association on and will proceed to elect a director for such district to serve for the ensuing year. The name of such director shall be certified to the President of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association by the chairman and secretary of such convention.

Besides the ballots mailed to each member of the Association the election officers in each county shall be provided with ballots to the number of ten (10) per cent of the membership of such county, but each grower is hereby urged not to lose or misplace the ballot mailed to him but to mark and vote that ballot, either in person or by mail, at the election September 13.

BREAD PRICES

With the advance in the price of wheat it is predicted that bread prices will also soar.

The rapid climb of wheat may make this necessary, but it is well to remember that labor is by far the largest item which enters into the cost of bread.

Labor is high-priced, which has been responsible for bread failing to get back to pre-war levels, it is also the reason for many other commodities remaining at close to war-time prices.

The baker was given a clean bill of health in the government investigation during the year and he is not likely to take advantage of the rise in the price of wheat unless it actually increases the cost of making bread.

Attention to Rural Needs

Ever since the prices of farm products were rapidly reduced following war inflation, the people of the rural districts have been asking those who live in cities and towns to give due attention to the needs of country life. At first this appeal was regarded as a good deal of a joke. But when the rural folks showed how deeply in earnest they were by the elections, then their difficulties began to attract some attention.

There are still however a multitude of city people who give scarcely a thought to the question of rural prosperity, and who do not as yet feel concerned to see that the country people get favorable conditions for their industries. It is difficult to get intelligent action on these questions while so many people feel this indifference.

The city folks ought to realize that they depend upon the country for many things. First among these things is for a food supply at reasonable prices. If the farms are not prosperous, food will eventually cost high. Second, they get from the country districts the best workers for the city industries. Unless conditions are favorable in the country, these workers will be poorly trained.

The city folks must realize that the city industries will not prosper unless the farmers and the country folks are prosperous enough to buy the city-made stuff. So the city folks need to study rural conditions for themselves, not merely taking the opinion of swivel chair experts who never touched a farm tool.

They must get interested in the farm problem as they do in any business or social problem, reading the opinions of the experts and practical people who really understand it. If the city folks will give more attention to this subject, they will not oppose so rigidly some of the helpful measures that have been suggested to improve rural conditions.

HANDLING THE BONUS

The government is setting up the machinery for administering the soldiers' bonus law to avoid the piling up of unanswered applications for bonuses.

It is to be ardently hoped that there will not be another scandal as notorious as that which was discovered in the veterans' bureau. Hundreds of men who served their country well have died from afflictions brought on by their service in the war, without receiving any aid from the government. Other cases are known of men, much less deserving who today are receiving compensation.

Prompt action on the bonus applications is the thing desired, that the over-service men will get the benefits to which they are entitled, and with this end in view, between 3,000 and 3,500 government clerks will be put on the payroll at Washington to carry out the provisions of the law.

The American Legion fought hard for the bonus and it is backing up the government by assisting former service men in filling out their applications.

The aim of the government is to have payments to soldiers begun not later than March 1, 1925. Congress failed to provide funds for the administration of the law, but President Coolidge has instructed the veterans' bureau to use funds now on hand for this work, assuming that congress will appropriate the required amount to reimburse the bureau.

In connection with their work, the war department salaries will be $1,800,000. The printing bill will be about $21,500.

GET NEXT TO THE POWER

The reason why you, or any of us, are not contented and happy in this life, is because you are not as successful as you would like to be. Success is that which every man desires, and it is to that all are aspiring. If you are normal, or nearly normal, you desire success in something, and your happiness and discontent are due to your failure to achieve it.

Why, therefore, should you fail? There is the question that is ever confronting you, and which you are or should be, most anxious to solve. Be sure there is a good and sufficient reason why you are not successful, and, if you will, you may understand it.

It is because your ways are not Nature's ways. Instead of taking into account the eternal truth, accepting the laws of life, and pondering the great facts in Nature, and directing your life accordingly, you ignore the more important of these and assert your individual will against Nature and reason and fact. As compared with these your will is as weak and puny as the reed that is swayed and bent by every passing wind.

The nearer the source of power, the more efficient the machine is a law of mechanics. It is more; it is one of the eternal laws governing force.

God, or Nature, if you prefer, is the source of all force, physical, mental and spiritual, and the nearer you get to this the more efficient you will be in any line of action you may choose.

In fact as you may readily see and understand, when you are practically invincible, your will is supreme in your sphere, and you may command that which you desire.

Know yourself. That is most important. The man who doesn't know himself is apt to attempt that for which he is not fitted.

How to know yourself is not so very difficult. That which a man does well is that which he is best fitted to do. Note, therefore, the trend of your tastes, mark the things you find pleasure in doing, and seek to keep in the way of these.

Think it over carefully and determine definitely what it is that you desire to accomplish in life, and then get in line with the forces, and you will succeed, for you will then have all the forces of God, or Nature, on your side.

VOCATIONAL EDUCATION

A banker of national reputation disparaged the teaching of vocational education in the public schools, in an address before the sixth annual convention of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Club at West Baden, Ind.

He declared that the business world needs educated persons more than it needs vocational trained workers and expressed sympathy with the Federation's department of education to keep girls out of business and business schools until they have been through high school.

Here is something to ponder well—especially a thought for the school executives. At the risk of being unpopular, they should not hesitate to take a stand against the agitation for vocational education, which would sacrifice the regular high school course.

The favorite theme of those who advocate vocational training is that boys and girls will never make use of Latin, and other languages, history, mathematics and the sciences.

But they fail to understand that in a high school course there is something besides that which you store away in your head. They do not appreciate the mastery of the difficult problems that arise in a regular high school course is an invaluable part of character building that every boy and girl should have.

The high school is not for the purpose of training young people for an avocation in life. It is only preparatory. It is the ground work upon which they should build their technical education.

Vocational education is not the panacea that it was once thought to be and educators are beginning to realize the fact.

Many business men, such as the banker mentioned above, are also inclining to the view that it has been overdone.

"POP" GOES THE PAVEMENT
THE CAUSE AND THE CURE

The season of "popping pavements" is here. From all over the country, since the beginning of the hot summer weather, come reports of street and highway pavements "blowing up" or "crushing." Pedestrians on cross-walks and tourists in automobiles along the country highways have had narrow escapes. There have been some casualties.

"Popping pavement" is a peculiar thing. It is a perfectly good pavement for all purposes until the instant it "pops," and it frequently gives no warning at all. Some of them have been known to "Pop" immediately under an automobile, and with rather serious damage to the machine and injury to the occupants.

Mr. Will P. Blair, of Cleveland, a member of the American Association of Engineers, a highway specialist and engineer for nearly fifty years and a prominent figure in highway research, in discussing this matter gives an explanation of "popping pavements" and a remedy. He says:

"The 'blowing up' or 'crushing' of pavements is most prevalent among rigid types. Day after day during the hot season the pavement stores up heat from the sun. When moisture is present expansion follows with accumulated force. As long as this expansion is held in compression, well and good. When, however, it becomes too great to be held longer in compression, something has to give. Nature is relentless and her forces are irresistible.

"We engineers for a long time have trifled with the presence of water in and underneath our pavements and thought rigid types could be made strong enough to resist the expansive force produced by heat and the swelling and heaving by extreme cold. We were trying to resist the forces of nature. That is, as we now know, foolish. For instance, in the case of brick or block pavements for a long time we used cement grout filler that bound the brick together into a rigid slab. This rigidity would have been all right had nature permitted or mother earth were made to remain stable and constant all of the time. The soil under a pavement either is swelling and raising due to the absorption of moisture or freezing, or it is a settling and shrinking due to drying out.

"Under a hot sun the rigid pavement starts expanding, but it is a case of being 'All Dressed Up and No Place to Go' as Raymond Hitchcock used to sing in his stentorian tones. A blow up often results.

Kentucky livestock breeders are producing hundreds of sires of beef cattle, dairy and hogs in sufficient numbers to take care of the demand in Kentucky, with some breeding stock to sell to other states.

Fifteen months ago Kentucky had two counties with more than 100 men signed in the better sires enrollment. Today Kentucky has eight counties, the best record of any state in the United States in this work.

CHILD MARRIAGES

Seventeen states now have laws against the marriage of girls under 16; nine more have an age limit of 15; eight states and the District of Columbia draw the line at 14 years, while three States, Kentucky, Louisiana and Virginia, have a minimum age low at 12 years. Generally the minimum age for males is two years higher. New York is one of the remaining eleven states which have no statutes as to the age when a girl may legally marry. The other states are Colorado, Florida, Idaho, Maine, Maryland, Mississippi, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island and Tennessee.

A New York state commission has been investigating conditions and reports that outside of New York city 157 children were married under the age of 16 years in 1919; 3 of them at 14 years, 28 at 14 years and 126 at 15 years.

ARE NONE BUT CROOKS ON GUARD?

Beware of the political jabberwock neighbor.

Road bonds were just the thing some months ago, with a certain group of editors, one editor informed us personally that his paper was strongly in favor of bonds providing the Republicans were not allowed to spend the money. He did not trust the machinery of the Highway Commission.

A little later a Democratic Governor was elected, but he did not happen to be the choice of above mentioned newspapers. Everything he favored seemed to convince his opponents in his own party that a bunch of crooks and highbinders were elected to office. Their bunch of angels and Good Samaritans were the only ones who could possibly have been honest and trusted servants in spending road money. At least this was the impression given.

So there are now lined up against road bonds forces that were the first to advocate them—"under certain conditions." Politics makes strange bedfellows. It is attempting to persuade the farmer that it is better. But no matter whether the bond issue passes this fall, we shall continue to collect the revenue for its payment—and not one penny of it comes from additional tax on a single acre of land. We are collecting the 3-cent tax on gasoline now and instead of an increase in price, dealers are at this writing in a price war and have actually reduced it.

Isn't it high time for this knocker's war to stop? Or is it true that the voters of Kentucky are incapable of electing any honest men to office?—Farmer's Home Journal.

JOHNNY APPLESEED

In many spots in Ohio may be found monuments erected to the memory of Johnny Appleseed, because he served his fellow men so well and did not seek to profit from his service.

John Appleseed's real name was John Chapman a Massachusetts man born in 1775, who went to Ohio in 1880 with sacks of applescuds. Why he went to Ohio or what his motive was in following the path in life he did not record.

He was a missionary of the very finest type. He carried the sacks of seed on the back of a horse, and when he could not sell them, he gave them away.

He not only distributed seeds throughout the countryside, but he often planted orchards for farmers and started them on the road to independence and prosperity. He took great pride in his seeds and he wanted them to grow into fruit-bearing trees.

On account of the earnestness of purpose and his desire to serve, he was a very successful salesman, but he sold on very close margins and gave away all of his profits to customers who did not pay. He didn't need much money for his own use, it is related, because his object in life was not to make money.

But he was in no sense of the word a beggar, because he paid his way many times. He was welcomed by many a lonely homesteader of that early day because of the cheer that he brought.

When he made apple trees grow where no apple trees grew before, and when he left behind ideas that would help people live richer lives, he enjoyed all of the pleasures of a man who had achieved and won success.

And now the people whom he befriended have risen up and called him blessed. His work has lived for a century.

The world is still eager for the same kind of service. It stands ready to reward with its richest blessings men who are actuated, not by the desire for profit, but by the wish to serve humanity.

Many such lives are being lived now in every community, some in smaller, some in larger degrees of service, depending on the circle in which their lives radiate.

We need more Johnny Appleseeds with the one ambition in life to help others live a richer and fuller life.

FROG OR THRUSH

The bullfrog never croaks except when the shadows begin to fall.

The thrush never warbles except when sitting in the top of the tree in the full light of a bright sun.

Each has to have its peculiar environment in order to express itself.

One needs a gloomy atmosphere in the swamp ground where he can make that dismal noise expressive of its surroundings.

The other needs the invigorating sunshine to produce the sweet music that fills its being.

Do you belong in the frog or the thrush class?

If you associate with gamblers and knaves and never hear the bright and optimistic side of public questions, you will never be anything but a complainer.

If you select as associates, people who never see anything but the silver lining, you will be influenced by their optimism and become like them. Always be sure to stay away from the frog minded people, and get in the crowd where some good is seen in everything.

You can't radiate good cheer and be a booster for all things that will improve the community, unless you have those kind of thoughts.

Therefore, imitate the thrush and warble, but never croak.

It is a pleasure for me to look over some people's ignorance, as well as my own. Some friends have told me that certain parties have said that I would lie at times in my dealings. This is abusing my amusing to think that any one would be so selfish. But will say, show me the person, large or small, white or black, male or female, that will say I ever told them the lowest thing, and outside the three promises which will be fulfilled if the Lord's will have never broken. The promise, nor have never broken a Lord's name in vain. This alone is a spiritual strength and a comfort to know that I have not. Your kind words are nothing to me from the pulpit. Now listen to some selfish ones who will give a sneering grunt as though they know better. But if they are without sin and a loose tongue let them cast the first stone.

NAVY WANTS FARMER BOYS

The average boy on the farm today is a hard working, clean living youth who has only a fair education which has been obtained by many sacrifices, deprivations, and through his own persistence. His viewpoint of life must be narrow due to his limited opportunities, as his entire interests are naturally local and concentrated in his farm and farming, his home and his neighbors, which are the things responsible for his livelihood. But the farmer boy's livelihood is not assured, his prosperity is a gamble due to circumstances over which he has no control. One year the conditions of the weather, injurious insects and animals, labor etc., may be such that his farm clears a good profit for his hard work, while on the other hand these conditions may be reversed the following year and wipe out all of his surplus. While he may be able to survive the bad years the eternal farming situation of a corresponding "lean year for a fat year" must forever be contented with.

The important advantages the Navy as to offer the farmer boy are: To broaden his education by travel, by association with people from all over the world, by the ever convenient libraries and by the Navy correspondence courses; to teach him a trade whereby he will be able to make an excellent living in the Navy or in civil life steadily year in and year out, finally to offer him retirement on a pension after sixteen or more years service which will enable him to live comfortably without working.

The Navy wants farmer boys because they are a conscientious type, because they recognize and accept responsibility which is a most essential trait for a navy man, and because they make good for themselves and for the navy.

TAINTED NEWS

Professor W. G. Bleyer, director of journalism at the University of Wisconsin, declared in a recent speech: "The public should be taught to think of the news as a part of history, of current events that are making history."

Every student of social affairs will agree thoroughly with the eminent educator. There is a subtle danger in divorcing the present from the past. The right perspective on current events can be had only when they are viewed as part of the history of the race.

Current events must be appraised and their true value in the general scheme of things determined. But to do so it is important that the record of contemporary affairs should be accurate, comprehensive, and free from prejudice. Herein may be found the high ideal of journalism.

There is no gainsaying the fact that the newspaper is one of the most important institutions in a democracy. It is the universal means of social intercommunication; it is the one medium that reaches the homes of all the people.

Democracy, under the universal suffrage, rests upon the popular intelligence and the social conscience. The intelligent, conscientious citizen depends upon newspapers for information concerning current events, without which he is utterly unable to pass accurate judgment upon the issues of the day. When the information in the newspapers, whether presented in the usual news columns or in editorial form, is biased or inaccurate, his judgment is more than likely to be at fault.

Tainted news is demoralizing and it poisons the springs of civic patriotism.

News is tainted when, purporting to be accurate and unbiased, misleading information is fed out to the people to create an atmosphere favorable to a church, a party, a social or professional group or a business, under which special and improper privileges are obtained. Unfortunately, the authority of the newspapers has been sadly impaired in recent decades. Dishonest colored or doctor editors, in the name of objectivity, in editorial form, is biased or inaccurate, his judgment is more than likely to be at fault.

DIVISION OF THE REPARATIONS which the allies expect to get out of Germany will be the subject of the next conference, to be held shortly in Paris. The United States will be officially represented in this parley as Germany owes this country more than a quarter of a billion dollars for the maintenance of the American Army of Occupation in Germany. An effort will be made at the Paris conference to work out a plan for the payments of this debt from German reparations.

AN INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE on war debts has been suggested, but the United States is not so much interested in talking about these debts as in getting France, Italy and other nations to pay what they owe—a total of about six billion dollars. As this debt conference has been suggested by the French Government, it is assumed here that a proposal will be made for the cancellation of war debts by all the powers. This Government will never agree to a proposal of that kind, however, as the debt policy outlined and established by Congress prohibits payment in cash, with no cancellation or no reductions.

THE AMERICAN PEOPLE will be interested in the reparations settlement, too, to the extent of about $175,000,000, which is to be contributed by American bankers toward German reconstruction by buying bonds of the new German bank to be created under the Dawes plan. Most of this loan is expected to be covered in this country by the J. P. Morgan company of New York, but the Administration has urged the people generally to subscribe and a general offering of the German securities may be made in this country.

TURNING FROM FOREIGN AFFAIRS, we find the presidential candidates and their respective parties still working out plans for the campaign, with little possibility of any real political excitement before the first of September. The newspapers and correspondents in the capital are now being flooded with the propaganda of the three national committees, praising the virtues of each candidate and indicating the failures and faults of the opposition. All three parties lack funds, however, which will cause some curtailment of speaking tours. The radio has been used by the Republicans and Democrats, but it has been found expensive and highly difficult to get the book-ups needed for nation-wide broadcasting. As in past years, the brunt of the campaigning will have to be done by long train rides and personal appearances before the voters.

GENERAL PERSHING'S farewell address to the Army, will be delivered at radio. He will speak from the War Department in Washington at 9:30 a. m. eastern standard time, on September 12th, as the climax of National Defense Day, when all the military units in the country will be mobilized simultaneously as a test of the nation's military strength. Pershing will be 64 years old that day and after his speech will retire automatically, after completing 30 years service in the Army. Radio stations all over the country will be hooked-up so that about 20,000,000 people may hear the General's speech.

HERE IS THE WILL A WISE MAN MADE

The following is an excerpt from the will of a Wall Street man which has been recently probated in the New York courts:

To my wife, the knowledge that I wasn't the fool she thought I was.

To my son, I leave the pleasure of earning a living. For thirty-five years he has thought that the pleasure was all mine; he was mistaken.

To my daughter I leave $100,000. She will need it. The only good piece of business her husband ever did was to marry her.

To my valet, I leave the clothes that he has been stealing from me regularly for the past ten years; also my fur coat that he wore last winter when I was at Palm Beach.

To my chauffeur, I leave my car. He almost ruined them and I want him to have the satisfaction of finishing the job.

To my partner, I leave the suggestion that he take some other clever man in with him at once if he expects to do any business.

THE HARVEST HOME.

On next Saturday, Sept. 6th, the Boone County Harvest Home Association will open its gates for the Thirty-ninth annual exhibition, and if the weather is fair, one of the largest gatherings of farm people in the history of the association will be on the grounds.

All plans have been perfected to receive the largest amount of exhibits ever offered before. Besides the exhibits of almost every product of the farm, the field, the orchard and of the more useful articles of woman's work, the pantry and of art and handicraft, there will be a running race for boys under 8 years; baby show—best looking white boy baby, under two years old, and best looking white girl baby, under two years old. Another feature of the day will be an old time clay bird shooting match.

Don't fail to make preparations to take a day off from your work and attend the Harvest Home on next Saturday, where you will meet many friends and relatives you have not seen for a year or more, as this will be your last opportunity to attend an outdoor outing of this kind during the year.

SMOKE UP MEN

Smoke up, smokers, and have a heart. Smoke makes your germs feeble.

If you have a pet germ whose presence in your system you do not exactly relish, smoke and weaken his resistance. In time you may wear him out and he will die a natural death. Dr. George Wolff of Frankfurt, Germany, says that smoking has some prophylactic effects. Tobacco smoke hinders the growth and expansion of germs though it does not destroy them, according to the German physician.

During his experiments, Dr. Wolff exposed various germs to tobacco smoke and put them together with "unsmoked" germs into an oven generating a heat of 37 degrees centigrade. The result was, he claims, that the unsmoked germs grew more rapidly than the others.

In a second test, aiming at investigating the destroying potentialities of the smoke, he exposed the germs for a long time to it. The results were meagre. He succeeded in killing off only the germs of the "flu," while other less "tender" bacteria lived on, though considerably impeded in growth.

Dr. Wolff believes that nicotine, formaldehyde and pyrral, soluble ingredients of smoke, are the destroying and impeding factors.

The doctor does not differentiate as to smoke. Whether it be the pipe, cigar or cigarette, it is smoke, and when the good wife objects to the pipe and its disagreeable odors, just call up this expert testimony and smile knowingly.

WHAT TEACHERS DO.

Many country people complain of the high cost of running schools, but they do not always stop to think what they gain from the teachers that conduct these schools.

The service of these teachers is by no means ended when they have prepared and taught the lessons in the course of study. They are as a rule very helpful and enthusiastic workers for community progress.

Many of the boys and girls clubs for agricultural and domestic work have been organized as the result of efforts by school teachers. The teachers get up entertainments, they help in the churches, they assist in women's clubs, they teach in Sunday school. The more generously the towns treat their teachers, the more of this public service they are likely to get.

THIS RESTLESS AGE

The American people show more and more restlessness as the years go on. The sight of trains loaded down with tourists, of automobile parties driving all over the country in the search of new scenes, suggests that our people are on the move as never before.

The quiet, old timers, who would settle down their porches to enjoy Sunday afternoons in peace, would hardly know what to make of a world where the majority of people are on the go.

Many philosophers think that before people can be truly happy, they must live a more contemplative and self contented life. But the American temperament likes motion and action. People have to live somewhat according to their natures. Their varied life makes our folks very alert and ready for new opportunities, but it should not go to the point where people become impatient of the daily humdrum of earnest work.

Some of the home town knockers would do better to take a real hammer, and do some knocking with the head thereof from their home property that needs repairing.

It costs money to build good roads, and it costs more to drive away visitors and trade by rough highways.

The Descent

MAKING THE ROADS SAFE

Acting upon the suggestion of a physiologist, following a series of tests, a Chicago taxicab company is setting up a model street section, which will contain in life size about every form of emergency which can happen to an automobile.

New drivers will be given their training there before going out into the regular traffic.

The National Association of Taxicab Owners is planning to bring about the establishment of similar streets in other principal cities of the United States.

The roads used to be a goal for taxi drivers, it would likewise be good for the "green" driver who has his first experience at the wheel of an automobile.

The physiologist found that to be a "safe" driver one must not be obliged to stop and think what he must do in each instance. One brief second might mean the difference between safety and disaster in an emergency. The driver's reaction to a street sign, a traffic signal or a pedestrian stepping suddenly from the curb should be instantaneous and automatic.

The roads will never be safe for motoring until some sort of system is worked out, whereby drivers are given tests before being permitted to drive cars.

Neither will safety be assured until every state has rural police patrolling the roads as a constant menace to speeders to hold them in check.

SAVE SOME OF YOUR OLD CORN

The spring of 1924 was unusually backward in many sections. Following this, the growing conditions were not good, with the result that the bulk of the corn is extremely late throughout the Corn Belt and northward. It is so late that most of the crop will be unfit for seed unless frost holds off longer than usual.

The United States Department of Agriculture is calling attention to this fact at the present time in order to prevent, if possible, a serious seed corn situation in the spring of 1925. The higher prices for corn in the last few weeks are drawing much of the old crop from the farms. Farmers not having enough seed corn for 1925 left over from last year's supply should save the best of their bulk crib corn from which to obtain seed, if necessary. If this year's crop is killed by frost before it is mature, this old corn will provide a source from which seed can be selected for planting in 1925.

MEXICAN QUAIL IN KENTUCKY.

The success of the Mexican quail distributed in Kentucky in the past few years is evidenced by the following letter from Thos. P. Neet, of Versailles, Ky. Dozens of similar letters are on file in the office of the Kentucky Game and Fish Commission.

Versailles, Ky., July 17, 1924. Kentucky Game & Fish Commission, Frankfort, Ky., Gentlemen:

To further report to you concerning the Mexican quail I received from you in the spring of 1923, will say that they have done many times more than could reasonably have been expected of them. Several coveys were raised and protected last year and now they have again hatched. There are by far more quail in this section than have been before in my memory. The coveys seem innumerable. May the good work continue.

Don't be ashamed to register from Burlington when you go to a hotel in some distant city. There is no place on earth where one can be prouder to hail from.

Some folks can't see why the boys play ball in the streets, when they can find vacant lots to play in by walking a mile or more.

QUOTING THE BIBLE

A southern manufacturer, writing a letter against prohibition to the Manufacturers Record says: "We are commanded to eat and drink to-day for tomorrow we die."

The Record points to the utter folly of the man in thinking that he was quoting the Bible, for this reference was to the Jews, who failing to follow the warning of the prophet, and full of hilarity, said: "Let us eat and drink for tomorrow we shall die."

It was not a commandment, but people have a falling of quoting the Bible to suit their purpose.

The way the scriptures are misinterpreted and disconnected passages brought together to uphold some particular view, might be illustrated in the old saying, showing harm that may be done by misquoting Scriptural passages: "Judas went out and hanged himself."

"Go thou and do likewise."

HORSE ANNOUNCEMENT

My saddle stallion Rexy Chief will close the season in Boone county at Harold Gaines' stables October 1st, at which time he will go to the Holton Cattle and Horse Co., Ripley, Ohio. I want to thank my many friends of Boone and adjoining counties for every good word spoken for Rexy, especially the hundreds of boosters at the Florence fair. Want to thank all Indiana friends for the good treatment at the Lawrenceburg Fair and the silver trophy for the best saddle horse. Would not forget the Indianapolis papers for the nice write-up they gave my string of Kentucky horses for what they did and won at the Lawrenceburg fair, for which Boone county should be proud, as they were handled by Mr. Harold Gaines. Hope every breeder of Rexy will have a call that they will be proud of.

WILL S. NORRIS,

Booster for Pedigreed Stock and Hound Dog Association.

THE NORTH KY. FAIR.

The thirty-ninth meeting of the Florence Ky. Fair, closed the gates Saturday evening after one of the most successful meetings. Large crowds attended Friday and Saturday and also the night shows. The exhibits were better than for several years past and the shows of stock were much above the average. This was the first time that shows were held during the evening but they proved a success. At the evening shows rings of horses were exhibited and a number of different acrobatic and other circus acts were put on by a troupe of first-class performers. The management in having the night shows are following the programs given by the Kentucky and other state fairs. Another new feature was the dog show, more than 125 dogs were exhibited and the dog fanciers were more than satisfied with the first year's exhibits. As usual number of former Boone county citizens mingled with the fair crowd and met their old friends and relatives. The officers and directors were untiring in their efforts to make the fair a success and they succeeded in having one of the best fairs within the history of the North Ky. Agricultural Association.

The following is from Henry Adams, a former well known Burlington citizen, but now resides in Washington, D. C.:

Dear Friends: Just noticed from date on wrapper that my subscription has expired. Check for $1.50 enclosed.

My best wishes to the Record force and Burlington friends, with a truck load of good luck wishes for the fall team. Tell 'em to come to Washington and see how it is done.

Very cordially,
H. D. ADAMS

AN ALL-DAY MEETING.

Last Sunday the Petersburg Christian church put on an all-day service in which members of Bellevue, Dullesville and Constance churches also shared. R. H. Carter, local pastor, delivered a splendid sermon at the morning hour, which was enjoyed by a well filled house, even though the weather was extremely sultry. At this service three new members united with the church: Mr. and Mrs. Newton Sullivan, Jr., of Burlington, came by letter and Russell Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. Willis Smith, by confession. Mrs. Sullivan was formerly a member of Ludlow Christian church, while Mr. Sullivan made the confession and was baptized at Bro. Allen's meeting in Burlington about a year ago.

After the morning service all retired to the parsonage on the riverbank where dinner was served for everyone. On account of the excessive heat no meeting was held in the afternoon.

BERKSHIRE—EBERHART

Frank B. Berkshire, formerly of Petersburg, and Miss Elizabeth Eberhart, of Lawrenceburg, Ind., were married last Sunday in St. Louis. This marriage is the culmination of a courtship of many years standing. The groom is the only son of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Berkshire, of Petersburg, but who formerly resided in Burlington, where Frank was born in the house now owned by W. R. Rogers, 29 years ago the 13th of August.

Frank now occupies a splendid position in St. Louis, where he and his bride will make their home. His bride is a prominent Lawrenceburg society girl, and very popular in her home town.

Their Boone county friends extend best wishes to them for the future.

EFFECTS OF SPEEDING.

Willie Harris, colored, of Crescent Springs, about 10 a. m., Saturday ran the automobile he was driving into the buggy owned and occupied by Smith Goodridge wife and two children, demolishing the buggy and maiming Mrs. Goodridge, Mrs. Goodridge and the children. The accident happened on the road leading from Limburg to Hebron just north of the residence of Lewis Beemon. Mr. Goodridge, when he saw the machine approaching him drove his buggy to the extreme right of the road, no place on the road. The automobile was being driven at a very rapid rate and the impact completely demolished the buggy, and it is very fortunate that the occupants were not seriously injured. The driver of the machine did not stop but if anything increased his speed. A warrant was issued for Harris and placed in the hands of the Sheriff.

BACK TO SCHOOL.

The tap of the school bells on next Monday morning will end the vacation of hundreds of children in Boone county who will be sending their way to and from school for the next nine months. There are some who will think going to school is a harder while others will enjoy it and study hard to receive an education.

Opportunities for securing an education are so much greater now than they ever were before and the advantages of an education are so much more evident throughout the world of affairs that it is strange any boy should deliberately neglect them.

Or rather it would be strange if the impulses of youth were not commonly understood. The healthy boy longs to be out and doing. His bent is for sport, for action, for the open air. The drudgery of the school room is distasteful to him. An annual tragedy of his young life is the termination of vacation days and the call back to books. Under such conditions too many boys each year yield to their inclination to cut short their school days for an idleness that leads to failure as men or for a premature entry into business life.

Some of these latter may succeed, but few of them would have succeeded more easily and more fully if they had acted on the realization that the best capital a young man can have in going into business or going to work is an education. They will feel the handicap of a poor education throughout life, however, successful in some ways they may be.

Go back to school, boys, while you have the chance. It is the keenest regret of thousands of men who have dropped out in the race of life or who have forged ahead despite their handicaps, that they did not have your chance, or did not take the chance they had. Don't join those legions of failure and regret. Heed the counsels of your elders, who know that your school years are your golden years, which are fleet and can never return to you, and which, as you use or abuse them, are to shape for good or ill all your future.

The 1924 North Kentucky Fair is a thing of the past.

LOCAL HAPPENINGS

People of Boone have witnessed altogether a remarkable season of many ways this year, and as a result crops of nearly every kind are far from being good. To begin with, the spring months were a continual deluge of rains. There was so much rain that farmers, in most instances, were compelled to plow and cultivate the ground, even plant crops when the soil was wet.

The corn crop perhaps will be about half a crop. Due to the wet season the area is not large. In some instances it is claimed farmers have injured their ground by working and cultivating it wet. This continued rain, and then dry spells, with cold nights during the latter half of July and the first of August proved detrimental to the growth of practically all kinds of crops. The recent rains have been of great benefit to the late corn and tobacco.

Last year we had poor prices for wheat because there was a large world crop. At the present time the price is getting higher because there is a world shortage of wheat.

A forecast of European wheat harvests in 19 countries recently reported to the Department of Agriculture indicated a 16 per cent lower production than last year and about 3 per cent above 1922.

Late reports indicate that the price of wheat in the United States is the cheapest in the world. Surely the American farmer should get a better price under these conditions and thus help to restore that which was withheld from him under reversed conditions like last year, when poor crops and low prices made it impossible for him to make a living.

The Sunday of today begins at the edge of dawn with a race to the country and the fishing places. It develops through the morning into a stream of park-goers, a third stream of mass intent on going anywhere, except to church, by any means possible. By noon the golf courses are crowded. A few hours later the baseball players are entertaining the largest audiences of all. Theaters run in full swing in many cities and towns and betting houses are lined with people. Quiet, rest, meditation, and worship—these have almost departed from the Sunday our forefathers knew.

R. B. Huey, wife and daughter, Miss Estelle, Mrs. Carrie P. Riddell, Mrs. Karl Rouse and Miss Mattie Freylich after a month's trip thru the Canadian Rockies and California, returned home last Thursday, much pleased with their trip.

A more detailed account of their trip written by Miss Estelle will be published in next week's issue. In many respects this was a wonderful trip, so if you are interested read her account next week.

Ben Rue, a former Boone county citizen, but also for the last twenty years or more has resided at Cleveland, Ohio, spent last week with relatives in Boone county. He was in Burlington for a short time last Thursday meeting and shaking hands with some of his old friends. He was in company with Ernest Horton, of Florence precinct.

On Thursday, September 25, members of the Boone County Jersey Cattle Club will pull off their first promotion sale of forty head of registered Jersey cattle at the Florence Fair Grounds, Florence, Ky. Chester Folk, Sales Manager, of Springfield, Ohio, will be in charge of the sale.

The weather with refreshing showers the past few weeks has made the corn crop look promising and has helped the tobacco to show up a little better in this county, yet there is a great deal of small tobacco throughout the county, which does not promise much to the farmer.

The Camp Fire Girls exercises at the Burlington Methodist church, Sunday night, was enjoyed by a large and appreciative audience.

There are now two new bungalows being constructed in Burlington at the same time, and preparations for the third one are being made.

Sterling Rouse, of the Limburg neighborhood, sent the editor a very large peach, one day last week. It was of the Hale variety.

Begin right now to plan to be present at Baxter's Anniversary sale Rising Sun, Ind., Sept. 20, 1924.—Advertisement.

A fine eleven-pound daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. Charles Birkle, Wednesday night, August 27th.

Many women folks celebrate their outing at camps by working harder than usual under difficult conditions.

Quite a number of Burlington people attended the night sessions of the Florence fair.

Horn—On August 29th, to Mr. and Mrs. Earl Smith, a fine boy.

One of the... hatcheries in the country eventually will be completed at the orks, four miles from Frankfort, is the expressed view of George C. Waggoner, new executive agent of the Kentucky Game and Fish Commission.

Three new concrete dams, costing $850, and two new hatching ponds, costing $450, have been constructed. In the fall of 1922 the Commission acquired the Ed. Dean Fish Hatchery, consisting of nine acres of ground, with four large ponds thereon, at a $3,150 cost. The water supply to these ponds is from one of the largest springs in Southern Kentucky, he said.

EAR ACHE

Healthy ears require no care except keeping the external parts clean. Mothers sometimes try to remove the wax in the child's ear by using a hair pin or a tooth pick covered with a soft cloth or cotton. This should never be done as nature takes care of the extra wax and great damage may be done by trying to remove it.

Children frequently suffer from ear ache, especially young children. As a rule ear ache occurs in children suffering from some inflammatory condition of the throat and nose. It often follows measles, whooping cough, tonsillitis, a severe cold and many other diseases and, as a rule, there is a discharge from the ear. However, all discharging ears do not cause ear ache. It was at one time the belief of the old people that all children must have a discharge from their ears or their ears were not healthy but today we know that a discharging ear is an indication of a diseased condition.

Ear ache in the small child will cause high fever and restlessness. Sometimes it is difficult to know just where the pain is but a careful examination will disclose the location of the trouble. It often happens that pus or other fluids accumulate behind the drum membrane thereby causing pressure which results in pain. A slight operation will give immediate relief from pain.

With the older child hot applications, either a hot water bag or a hot salt bag will give relief. Try to find the cause of the ear ache and have it treated by the doctor. Many children become deaf because of a condition which could be easily cured in the beginning but untreated causes permanent injury to the ears.

Children sometimes push beads, beans, etc., in their ears. As a rule these slip out when the outer ear is pulled downward and backward and the head is bent forward. Injury may result in trying to get the object out, if it cannot be removed with the fingers call the doctor to remove it.

The United States produces about thirty-five per cent of the world's production of tobacco, which amounts to 4,000,000,000 pounds. Europe absorbs more than eighty-five per cent of the exports from this country.

In 1923 the wheat output of this country was 781,737,000 bushels while in 1850 it was only 100,000,000 bushels. The greatest production of 967,979,000 bushels occurred in 1919, due to the pressure of war.

A man may be able to climb mountains this summer and yet put up a kick if the summer hotel has no elevator.

TUNING THE SCHOOL IN ON LIFE

The funny column of a daily paper tells of a teacher who asked Willie to locate several cities and he answered "I can't locate 'em but I know how to tune in on several of 'em."

That story carries a first rate idea for teachers. The schools will open soon and millions of children will come from the free, playful, natural social child life to the different atmosphere and life of the school.

Teachers will try mistakenly to change most of the child's physical and mental habits in a day. The shift from hours of activity to hours of sitting still will cause much illness among them if the teacher is not careful. From learning what is interesting and what appeals to them they will be forced to change to serious about things that they do not use and that they probably feel never will be any help. Fortunately more and more schools are fitting themselves to make the child life in them more free, easy, and natural. The rows of stiff desks are being replaced with study tables and chairs; the textbook is giving way to library the deadly silence, to the hum of business; and restraint and repression, to encouragement and expression. The schools are "tuning in" on life.

About fifty members of the Burlington Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association met in mass meeting at the Court House in Burlington, Saturday afternoon, and nominated candidates for delegates to the district convention and also selected three competent members to conduct the election to be held Saturday, Sept. 13th. Delegates chosen at this election will meet in the district in the county which delivered the largest amount of tobacco of the 1923 crop to the association, Monday, September 15th, at 2 o'clock p. m., to elect a director for such district to serve for the ensuing year. Those selected to hold the election next Saturday are Earl Smith, L. C. Weaver and Bert Gaines.

AGAINST CHILD LABOR AMENDMENT.

The North Carolina State Senate has rejected the proposed Child Labor amendment with only four dissenting votes. The Senate recently adopted an amendment to the existing state laws which provides that no child under 14 can be employed in any manufacturing plant and no child under 16 can be employed in hazardous work.

North Carolina adheres to the doctrine of the right of states to legislate for themselves in matters pertaining to the welfare of their people and believes existing laws are not only just and humane, but are in keeping with living conditions.

A sword will be presented by Gen. Clarence R. Edwards in the name of the Massachusetts Department of The American Legion to the commander of the world fight, Lieutenant Lowell H. Smith, upon his arrival at the Boston airport. On the blade is engraved the following: "To First Lieutenant Lowell H. Smith, Air Service, United States Army, Commanding Officer, Pilot of the Airplane Chicago in the Flight Around the World, From the American Legion Posts of Massachusetts Welcome Home."

THE PUBLIC WILL NOT SURRENDER

Railroad employees are just as intelligent and independent in politics as any other class of citizens.

In fact, from this standpoint they are probably above the average.

It does not follow therefore that because a few of their politicians got together and endorse socialistic campaign programs all railroad employees will take orders and vote for such policies.

The average railroad employee dislikes to be bossed. Neither will he take orders on election day. He has the same interest in national prosperity, in good government and clean politics that any other law-abiding citizen has.

Radical candidates have not been endorsed by the rank and file. Before constituting themselves a political cabal and nominating a ticket, the ringleaders neither received authority from the rank and file to act for them nor gave the rank and file an opportunity to express their opinion and choice. Here is the ticket, take it or leave it, is the only choice provided.

This is a free country and nothing is better calculated to preserve this freedom than the privilege of the voter to express his honest convictions.

A red, pink, or yellow candidate for office may be satisfactory to some railroad employees, certainly not to all of them. Indeed, the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, the largest of them all, has not, and its chief officers say, will not endorse such candidates. Few of its members will consent to be driven like cattle by professional politicians. To many of them the thought of socialism is abhorrent.

Some of the dreamers among them expect by supporting radical candidates to kill off the Labor Board, deprive the public of a voice in fixing their rates of pay and arrange it so they can make their own rates. But no sensible employee believes it can be done for to any thinking mind it should be evident that as the public pays the bill it should and will exercise a voice in saying how much that bill shall be. This is one right the public will not surrender.

SUSPENDS DEER KILLING

Governor Pierce of Oregon has issued a proclamation suspending the open season for killing deer and other large game, beginning with August 20.

Forest fires have been numerous and widespread, owing to prolonged drought.

The danger of more conflagrations from thousands of hunters penetrating the forests and setting fires from shooting and camping, is tremendous.

Many of the deer are driven from their usual habitat and crowded into small areas. The Governor's action is fully justified by humane principles. The killing of game is absolutely prohibited until there has been sufficient rain to avert all possible danger of forest fires.

His splendid example will be followed by many other states that have suffered from drought and forest fires.

The following line-up with Kenneth Berkshire as manager, challenges any ball team in the county to play 3 out of 5 games on Bellevue Grounds at 50-50 basis.

Line-Up.

C. KELLY, R. BRADY, K. BERKSHIRE, B. BLACK, L. RYLE, P. COOK, SAM WILLIAMSON, W. RYLE, JOE BRADY, JOHN CLORE, A. FINN, G. DOLPH.

Any player in Boone County eligible to play. First Game to be played when visiting team can get together.

BASE BALL.

Elvanger met defeat at Bellevue in both the morning and afternoon games. The morning game score was Bellevue 7 Elvanger 2. During the afternoon game Elvanger made every effort to get one man across the rubber but failed and the game ended with a score of 4 to 0 in favor of Bellevue. Both games were interesting but the afternoon was the better of the two and the fans were satisfied with the article of ball exhibited by the players.

At Hebron after a very exciting ten inning game in an error of a Ludlow player the winning run was scored by Hebron, the game ending with the score, Hebron 4, Ludlow 3. The afternoon game was also a well played game and Ludlow did not capture both games so they played for all that was in them and by some good twirling and ball playing on the part of the other eight Ludlow men, only two of the Hebron boys could get on counting territory while seven of the Ludlow boys were safely at home, the final score being Ludlow 7, Hebron 2. These games were witnessed by the large crowd present at the dedication of the Consolidated School building. An excellent dinner was served on the school campus at the noon hour and after feasting on the fat of the land the large crowd was in condition to witness the ball game.

The game between Burlington first and second teams that was played on the High School grounds was called at the end of the seventh inning on account of rain. At the time of calling the game the score stood, first nine 7, second nine 14. A part of an inning had been played but as the game was called before the completion of that inning the score of even innings was 7 to 14. The first team did not present its strongest lineup as several of their regular players did not report. The second team certainly knew how to use the bat as they drove the ball to all parts of the field and also held the older boys in check at all stages of the game. The crowd present rooted hard for the younger men and gave them all the encouragement and assistance they could in order for them to win the game. When these teams met again the first nine boys, with their regular lineup, hope to snow the 2nd nine so deep in defeat that they will not want to meet them again, the younger generation have on their playing clothes and propose no let up until they have taken the regular team into their camp and defeated them as bad as they did in this game. A large crowd will be present at the next game between these clubs when they next meet to see who will make good their prophecies.

Prof. J. A. Caywood, who was principal of Boone High School several years ago will be the principal of the new Consolidated School at Crest Springs for the 1924-1925 term.

Henry Lindenburg and some of his friends of Newport, passed through Burlington Sunday, enroute to Jack Cook's in Waterloo neighborhood, where they spent the day.

Dr. L. C. Cowen, of Rising Sun, Ind., spent the latter part of last week with his relatives in Burlington. His many friends here were glad to see him looking so well.

Mrs. J. E. Rouse, of Payne's Depot, Scott county, and Dr. Harry Fitzpatrick wife and children, of Elwood, Ind., were the weekend guests of Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Conner.

A large number of city folks passed through Burlington Sunday and Monday seeking a holiday in the country.

Judge J. M. Lassing, County Judge N. E. Riddell and County Attorney B. H. Riley spent last Wednesday in Frankfort and appeared before the State Highway Commission and secured from the Commission a proposition by the terms of which that Commission would take over and put in repair and reconstruct the Burlington and Florence pike from Burlington to Florence, the proposition was submitted to the Fiscal Court at their meeting Tuesday and accepted, the State Highway Commission taking control of that road Wednesday. The county had put on that road a lot of stone and done other work in the past few months and had some road material on the right of way ready to be spread on the traveled road bed, this is to be used by the Highway Commission who was paid $15,000 and permits the Commission to use the roller in repairing that road this fall. The action of your Fiscal Court in accepting this proposition relieves the court from the duty of keeping it in repair and the road fund that has been appropriated for maintenance of that road can now be distributed to other roads in the county. This is the first road in the county, other than the Dixie Highway, to be turned over to the State for maintenance. If the Fiscal Court can get the Highway Commission to take over of the heavily traveled roads in our county and maintain them, then all money that has been appropriated for the maintenance of those roads can be distributed to the other roads in the county.

If the bond issue carries other roads in Boone county will be taken over and reconstructed by the State Highway Commission at an early date, but if the bond issue fails no one can tell when any other road will be taken over for maintenance or reconstructed by that commission.

The Jewett automobile that was confiscated by the Sheriff because the owner transported moonshine was sold court-day under orders of the Circuit Court and was purchased by D. H. Kennedy for $851. This machine was mortgaged to a Finance Company and if the court should decide that the mortgage which was executed in Ohio is a prior lien on that of the Commonwealth the entire $851 will be paid to the State Treasurer, if, however the court should decide that the mortgage is prior then that debt will be paid which amounts to about $700, leaving a balance of $151 to be paid into the treasury. The defendant in that case paid a fine of $350 and lost his automobile which is a pretty stiff penalty, and those who violate the liquor laws should take notice.

The Downs-Moore Realty Company sold every lot of the Bradford division near Florence Monday, September 1st. The brick residence and lot 107x300 feet was bought by Joe Scott, Ed. Snyder, Hugh Carey and J. G. Renaker for $6,000.00. All lots brought satisfactory prices. The automobile that was given away was won by Mrs. Howard Lizer, of Covington. The day was ideal for a sale and the large crowd present was entertained by a brass band. The Downs-Moore Realty Co., have made a success of all sales they have held in this part of the State. They are fine business men and all their dealings are on the square.

Charles J. Helms died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Cave Clore, near Bullittsville, last Friday and his funeral was preached by Elder Curry Sunday. Mr. Helms was a soldier of the Confederacy and he has left but few of his comrades. He was in his 85th year and had resided near Bullittsville for a number of years. He has been in failing health for some time.

The revival meeting which began at the Burlington Baptist church, Sunday night, is being well attended and much interest is being manifested. Rev. Adams, the pastor, is doing the preaching.

A call at Baxter's grocery, Rising Sun, Ind., Sept. 20, 1924 will be very much worth your while.—Advertisement.

CAN YOU BEAT IT?

Following is from the Motor Weekly, which opposes the road bond issue and has produced all sorts of illogical arguments to prevent Kentucky from being awakened "from its Rip Van Winkle slumber!"

Everything But Roads

"If there is any state in the Union that should have the finest of motor highways it is Kentucky. There is everything within the confines of the commonwealth to appeal to the automobile tourist—natural scenery, points of historic interest and wonder spots, such as Mammoth Cave and Reelfoot Lake. In other words, the state has a marvelous show window that all the world should view but nobody ever sees it because the approach it too difficult. There are too many detours to be overcome first. The trains on the main tracks are all whizzing past while Kentucky rears on its self-imposed siding. But one of these days the dear old commonwealth is going to awaken "from its Rip Van Winkle slumber" and get busy. That day will come when politics become a side issue in the state instead of the main show."

It is not prudent to try to rough it in camp nowadays without spring beds, phonographs, and an automobile.

If the kids had on that coat of tar that many of the girls are carrying around this summer, Mother would call it dirt.

You can't expect the hired girl to work any longer in families where the mistress declines to turn the ice cream freezer.

Betting on base ball is not a desirable practice, but some folks would never go to the games unless they had a chance to lose some money.

The fact that the boys can cook an elegant picnic lunch when the girls are alone, does not prove they could build a fire in the home cook stove.

The summer girl is allowed a certain quota of engagements, but more than three or four diamond rings should be worn on a certain finger at one time.

It is alright to listen to campaign speeches, but we advise the farmers of Boone county to depend upon their own work and not upon promised agricultural relief measures for next year's income.

Money is so plentiful in New York that bankers look upon the payments of international debts to this country with real alarm. Too much money makes it "cheap." Just why money should be "cheap" is an economic mystery—because it is not supposed to be a commodity.

The American airmen are in a fair way of being successful in their feat of encircling the earth, and if they are seeking other fields to conquer, they might try a flight to Mars. At an average speed of fifty miles an hour, they could do it in fifty years, providing Mars would stay conveniently close.

The census Bureau announces that California led the list of States with the largest percentage of deaths due to auto accidents in 1922, with 26 for every 100,000 of population. New York was second with 16.7. Then came New Jersey, 16.4; Colorado 16.3; and Illinois, Maryland and Rhode Island, each 15.

Virginia in the old days stood second only to Kentucky in admiration of the julep, has adopted a law that a person cannot have a single drop of liquor in his home unless it has been legally acquired. The man who has saved a quart of pre-war liquor and still cherishes it is liable to a prison term of one month and a fine of $50. He cannot pay a fine and escape.

When a voter enters a booth at a primary election he votes for his choice of the candidates entered in the race. Further, he pledges himself to vote for the successful candidate, to make it plain, the man who does go into a primary and bolts the ticket is a deceiver of honor because he, instead of taking an oath, knows that he is giving his word of honor to support the ticket.

All the wild ideas of unbalanced agitators the world over in their ignorant and pitiable quest for happiness through revolutions, confiscation of property, and crime, cannot overthrow the eternal truth that the one route to happiness thru poverty and open highway of service. And service always means industry, thrift, respect for authority, and recognition of the rights of others.

It has been pointed out through the Democratic national committee that there are now Democratic governors in states representing 290 electoral votes, which is 24 more than enough to elect a president. In addition to these states, seven other states elected Democratic Senators at the 1922 election, representing 56 electoral votes.

This would seem to indicate that at the present time the Democrats have a majority of the country. When they figure that La Follette will carry enough states to take away a good many Republican electoral votes and will split the Republican vote in other states, normally Republican, giving the Democrats a chance to carry more, then it may readily be seen that the chances of Mr. Davis for election are better than those of Mr. Coolidge, all other conditions being equal.

IS MURDER A NORMAL FEATURE OF NATIONAL LIFE?

Between criminal jurisprudence in this country and in Great Britain there seems to be a distinct difference. When a subject of George V is murdered, the invariable procedure is to send for a policeman. When one of Mr. Coolidge's taxpayers is violently cut off, the first thought is to call in an alienist.

Mental pathology is a comparatively new science. It is emphatically in the American temperament that when one has stumbled on a new idea, such idea becomes the key to everything and the remedy for everything. Single-tax or Freud, radio, or hopped hair, co-operative marketing or spinal manipulation can be made to explain the World War, the decline in church attendance, the drug habit, the motor speeding habit, the Fundamentalist-Modernist habit, and the murder habit. Souly Pathology is one of these new fads that must be tried out on every available stick of furniture in the house, and since human life is among the cheapest commodities we boast of in this country, it is quite in the order of things that the alienist's hatchet should be running wild in the court room.

Where pretty nearly everybody shoots, stabs or strangles pretty nearly everybody else it would really seem that psychiatric effort ought to concentrate on that section of the population which has never been charged with homicide. Let us have a law that the peaceful law-abiding citizen must be examined every six or seven years by a mental specialist to find out what is the matter with him.

And then appoint a special commission to examine the specialists.

POSTOFFICE SERVICE UNDER FIRE

It is earnestly oped that the recent severe criticism of our Postoffice Department by Dr. Charles W. Elliot may result in a few minor reforms that will bring that department some where near efficiency, for the United States postal service is one of the worst of any civilized nation. There is room for reform in most local or rural post offices, as well as in the general service. Why must a citizen who has a carrier service be unable, when a holiday or succession of holidays occurs to get his mail by going to the post office for it? If a national or State holiday falls on a Saturday or Monday, such a one is unable to get his mail for three successive days. And this in modern, progressive America!

The government is scandalously lavish in expenditures for other conveniences, including automobiles of officials, but pinches the pennies when it comes to a matter affecting every business and professional man in the nation.

The only excuse ever offered is politics. It is a government business and each administration endeavors to make a good showing usually at the expense of service. If the big magazines were compelled to pay as much as their service costs the government, there would be plenty of money for all purposes. But the big periodicals seem to hold a whip hand—and the tax payer foots the deficit.

OUR HEAVENLY VISITOR

For the first time in more than a century the earth is relatively close to Mars, one of the eight planets that revolves about the sun.

All of the learning of the ages has been brought into play in an effort to solve the secrets of the heavens. All of the boasted intelligence of science and the marvelous instruments that are used in studying the universe have been utilized.

And what have we learned? Very little, if anything. At least science has not found the answer to that vexing yet fascinating question whether there is life on Mars.

Summed up, the astronomers tell us that Mars' diameter is 4,200 miles; that the planet is 70 per cent farther from the sun than the earth; that its surface gravity is 38 per cent of that on the earth; it rotates around the sun in one year, ten and one-half months and its "year" is divided into seasons such as ours; its day is about 37 minutes longer than ours it has an atmosphere, but this must be much thinner than the earth's; and that it very probably has a form of plant life.

Though man has made progress in overcoming the elements, an unseen power withholds from him the knowledge of what actually exists beyond the earth's confines.

This generation has had its fling at finding the answer to the Martian secret and has failed.

Will the next develop higher-powered instruments and better means of communication and establish relations with our heavenly neighbor?

That's a question for our children's children to answer.

United States wheat growers are expected to receive from $100,000,000 to $200,000,000 more for their wheat crop this year than they received for the 1922 crop, assuming that they sell more than 500,000,000 bushels, according to the federal bureau report. At one time it was estimated that they would receive $1,000,000,000 advance over 1923. But even the smaller gain indicates ability to pay off a great amount of obligations, and to buy comforts for the farms.

Ohio Woman to Run for Lieutenant Governor

William Sinclair Lavan of Ohio, it has been announced, will make the run in Ohio on the Republican ticket for lieutenant governor. As far as is known she is the first woman to seek the second highest place in state politics in the country. She is also, chairman of the Coolidge forces in Ohio.

POISE

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

THE man who sold me my ticket at the Grand Central station was wrinkleless and placid in his appearance. He came into the office just as I arrived, and relieved the clerk who had previously been there. He removed his coat deliberately and hung it up without haste or agitation, straightening the collar and smoothing out the wrinkles in the sleeves. He adjusted his tie carefully and brushed back his hair, speaking to a fellow clerk in the meantime, all the while oblivious of the gathering line behind me.

When he was ready to wait on me, he went at the job without haste or delay. He confirmed my reservation calmly; he made out my ticket slowly; he consulted all sorts of tables and guides with a deliberation that revealed the fact that he was not influenced by the passage of time. He was unmoved by the irritation of the woman behind me who wanted to catch the six fifteen train.

When he finally had everything looked up and written in and pasted together and calculated and the ticket slipped into its outer clothing, twenty minutes had passed. The man had poise; he had self-control; he knew that the line behind me would keep up all day and all night and he was not going to allow a little thing like that to worry him. If the woman did not get the six fifteen train there was another going later.

And this state of mind explained why his cheeks were so round and his brow so unfurrowed and his action so calmly deliberate. He could go on doing his work for ninety years without a nervous quiver; he would always seem unimpressed by the rushing crowds constantly going by him.

I am not sure that he was not overdoing this self-control a little, but most of us could take a lesson from him. We worry too much. We rush into things headlong and do them badly. We lose our heads in a crowd or in stress of one sort or another or in meeting the unexpected because we do not center our attention upon the main business in hand. We are thrown off our balance by little things; we have no poise.

CURRICULUM

High school, college and university students, according to the Roman conception, are athletes engaged in running a race. They follow a "curriculum" of studies. This term denotes their program of subjects. It is derived from the Latin "currere," which means to run. The pronunciation is "cur-ric-kul-um."

"Cured by wearing a spider hung round one's neck in a nutshell,"—Evangeline.

Among the most interesting of superstitions are those concerning disease and its cure. Wearing something around one's neck to ward off disease or to cure disease is one of the most common superstitious practices, and is almost as much in vogue now as it was in Evangeline's day. City school teachers can tell a tale of woe about the little red flannel bags filled with amulets or with garlic cloves that tenement children wear to protect them from sore throat, diphtheria, whooping cough, and the like. Strings of Job's tears are still sold to mothers who believe that a baby that wears a string of these tears will cut its teeth painlessly. Rabbits' feet, secured under proper conditions, when worn on a string around the neck will protect the wearer from a variety of ailments, as well as bring him good luck.

There is scarcely a community that does not boast of at least one person who can blow fire out of a burn and prevent hissing. The blowing must be accompanied by the repetition of a charm that cannot be communicated by one woman to another or one man to another, but must always be taught by one of the opposite sex. The neighbor who blew the fire out of all the burns in the neighborhood when I was a child is now a stately old dowager who is a pillar in the church and a mainstay of the local cultural movements; but she still blows fire out of her neighbors' burns.

There is scarcely a community of any size that does not have in it at least one old woman who can "measure" a child and so cure it of the "take off," an ailment that doctors dignify by the name of marasmus.

There are likewise few communities that lack at least one "pow-wow" doctor who will cure any sort of ailment from cold to cancer by reciting charms and incantations. We usually pride ourselves upon having outgrown witchcraft in medicine, but I have never yet found a high school student who did not know either the name of a white pow-wow doctor or some one who did know the name of one. They never believed in them personally; but they always had an aunt or a cousin or a neighbor who did believe in them.

The KITCHEN CABINET

(© 1924, Western Newspaper Union.)

Aye, to the leavening, but here's yet in the word hereafter, the kneading, the making of the cake, the heating of the oven, and the baking. Nay, you must stay the cooling, too, or you may chance to burn your mouth—Shakespeare.

A WORD ABOUT CAKES

Cake-making and baking is an art—a science. Most housekeepers have some cake recipe which they use as a foundation for various forms and kinds of cake. Baked in layers the cake batter is thinner than if baked in a loaf; adding different flavorings, fruit, chocolate and spices, one may have a different cake from the same base for every day in the week.

For those who are yet inexperienced in cake-making a few suggestions may be helpful:

Firstly, have all the ingredients gathered before starting to prepare the cake, as often a most important ingredient may be lacking. Lining all cake pans is a good practice as it helps to keep cake moist, makes easier the removing if it from the pan, and if too hot, the search will be on the paper and will peel off with it when the paper is removed.

The old-fashioned cooks were advocates of much creaming of butter and sugar, but times have changed and the time spent in such work has been largely saved for more important things. All ingredients, if well-blended and given a good beating, will make a fine-grained cake which answers almost any purpose. Of course, for great occasions, such as wedding cakes, work is never considered. The following is a good, plain foundation cake which may be used for all ordinary occasions:

Sponge cake—angel food, or any plain white cake served with a spoonful of grated pineapple and topped with whipped cream, makes a most tasty dessert.

A slight depression made in the center of all cakes, heaping the dough around the edges of the pan, will result in a level cake, as all mixtures tend to bump up in the middle when baking. Too much flour will cause this unsightly bump also. The most satisfactory cake is the one which may be baked as thin as possible—that is with as little flour, and still keep from falling when baking. The thinner the batter the more delicate and tender the cake.

Collar and Cuff Sets the Call of the Mode

Sing a song of lingerie collars and cuffs, they are the fashion of the hour. Let every school girl join in the chorus, for pretty, lady, frilly things at neck and wrist have such a happy way of giving one a refreshing start to classroom each morning.

If one heed the promptings of the mode, one will see to it that the school-time outfit includes one of the popular youth-fleeting line flannel frocks either, plaid, striped or in solid coloring. To wear with it, in the till of one's trunk or in one's top dresser drawer should be a plentiful supply of lingerie collar and cuff sets, a lace vest or two, a net and insertion bib effect and do not forget to include one of the detachable lace panels which drop from their matching collars to the very hemline of the dress. Garnished with these dainty accessories, even the most ordinary frock assumes a distinguished air of charm and refinement.

When 'th' rich girl gits heartack, she takes a boat to Europe. Then she gits seasick, an' wishes she'd staid home.

STATE FAIR WILL BE GREATEST IN THE HISTORY OF KENTUCKY

Louisville, Aug. 28.—Though the gates of what is expected to be the greatest State Fair in the history of Kentucky will not be swung open until September 8 the grounds in the western end of the city are already a veritable beehive of activity and swarming with hundreds of workmen. The barns in which will be housed the biggest exhibit of pedigreed livestock ever shown in the South have been thoroughly cleaned and whitewashed; the stables for the blue-blooded horses have been made ready; the interior of the various exhibition buildings, including the $100,000 M. and M. building, have been scrubbed, the walls washed down and the exteriors are being decorated with gay bunting and flags as fast as the workmen can accomplish it.

"All in all," said Secretary James E. Fahey yesterday, "save for the absence of exhibits we might almost be ready to open the Fair of 1924 some days ahead of schedule. I and the members of the Board believe that the management of the Fair is optimistic in the belief that the people of Kentucky will show their appreciation of our efforts by coming here Fair Week in greater numbers than ever before."

"It is already assumed that the exhibits in virtually every department will exceed in both number and variety the entries of any other Fair that has been held in Kentucky and there are still many more to come before entry closing time. Aside from the live stock exhibits, the agricultural displays and the horse shows and races, we are laying particular stress this year on the Women's Department and the Children's Department."

"Both are expected to be jammed with entries and the judges are going to have a much more difficult task than heretofore in selecting the winners. As regards the children the Fair is one of the greatest educational factors we have today and that in featuring the work of the youngsters we are helping in the uplifting of the state and its citizenry of the future."

"Nor have we forgotten the amusement features of the Fair. The Midway this year will be replete with the best acts obtainable. Many have been brought here direct from New York where they have played at the Hippodrome and the local vaudeville houses. Included among these are: Hanaford, Premier Equestrian, Ziedman and Polles big circus (which is a prize-winning car show) and the most stupendous and spectacular display of fireworks ever seen here. Then too, we are arranging for a stellar Free Attraction that should prove a knockout both for beauty, novelty and daring, and should hold an appeal for the men, women and children alike."

One of the improvements which has just been completed at the Fair grounds is the erection of a stucco comfort station for women. This was erected at the cost of several thousand dollars and is in charge of Mrs. George T. Settle, chairman, and will be open as long as the gates of the Fair are open. There will also be special entertainments, singing, concert addresses, etc., each day.

Great interest has been aroused throughout the state by the Baby Health Contest and more than five hundred bundles are expected among the entrants. This feature has grown in public favor each year since it was inaugurated in 1913 and though only once during that time has a "perfect baby" been found the general health of the state children, that have been examined here, has been materially improved. From an average rating of 85 per cent the rating has jumped to around 95 and 96 per cent.

Heavy entries have been received in the Horse Show and Dog Departments and exhibitors from all parts of this country and Canada will strive for the trophies. Naturally the greatest interest is in the International Five-gaited Saddle Horse Championship for the $10,000 prize and competition promises to be the keenest. In the Dog Exhibit classes have been arranged for sixty-three different breeds and some entries are being brought from as far away as China and England. More than 500 dogs will probably be on the bench during the week.

Among the Special Days and Nights arranged by Chairman Smith T. Bailey are the following: Monday—School Children; Tuesday—Retail Merchants' and Women's Day; Wednesday—Louisville Day; Thursday—Governor's, Automobile and Manufacturers' Day; Friday—Railroad Day, Farm Bureau Day and Farmers' Union Day; Saturday—Indiana, All Fraternal and Scout's Day.

The Special Nights program is: Monday—Junior Order and Legion Night; Tuesday—Masonic Night; Wednesday—Knights of Columbus Night; Thursday—Elks' Night; Friday—Red Men's Night; Saturday—All Fraternal Night.

A large number of horses is expected to compete in the numerous events on the six day's program. Although entries do not close until the evening before the opening day of the fair, enough have been received to assure big fields in each race. The management is offering purses totaling $10,000.

The track is being put into first class condition for the races. The six-day card follows:

COLLEGE TO EXHIBIT AT THE STATE FAIR

The best farm practices in Kentucky will comprise a large exhibit by the twelve departments of the College of Agriculture Extension Service at the forthcoming Kentucky State Fair at Louisville, Sept. 8-13. There will be something of interest and value to farmers and their wives from every section of the state, according to T. R. Bryant, assistant director of extension service.

Marl, the newly discovered cheap source of lime supply, will occupy a prominent place in the soils exhibit. Marl has been found in more than 40 counties, and promises to revolutionize fertilizer methods in many of the state, according to S. C. Jones of the college's agronomy department, who has been discovering new beds here and there over the state, often on farms where the soil was too acid for good crop production. Marl does not need to be ground, but is commonly found in a form which permits it to be sown on the land in its natural state. A map will show the counties in which Marl has been discovered, and a ton of the actual clay-lime substance will be on display for examination by visitors.

Ralph Kenney, the college's alfalfa enthusiast, who talks in terms of millions of acres by charts and maps, attempts to convince the doubting as to the possibilities of this wonder legume in Kentucky. He will explain to all comers the details of seeding, harvesting and handling alfalfa, and otherwise offer his services to farmers who would devote a few acres to this soil-building and hay producing crop. It is estimated that there are now 50,000 acres of alfalfa in Kentucky, but Mr. Kenney believes that some day there may be that many acres in one county.

The batting averages of the college students are always printed in the newspapers, but you will have to go to the dean's office if you want to get their scholastic marks.

The city fellow sometimes laughs at the country boy in his overalls, but the latter is quite as likely to be able to have a good bank account.

MONEY A DRUG IN THE MARKET

When the Federal Reserve Bank of New York lowered its discount rate, not long ago to 3 per cent, it established the lowest rate in its history and the lowest bank rate in the world. Money is so cheap in the United States that it is going begging. Never before in history was money in such a precarious situation as at present. The gold standard has become a fiction. Practically nowhere except in America can we even pretend that the gold standard exists. In America, while other money is redeemable in gold, it would be better to say gold is redeemable in other money. The tail is wagging the dog today. The real virtue of the gold standard, as an automatic regulator of value, has gone. Sound money today rests on discretion, and not, as hitherto, on the automatic flow of gold from nation to nation impelled by the individual self-interest of bankers and merchants.

The Federal Reserve banks now hold over double the gold they need. If they should follow blindly their self-interest, according to the old established precept of good banking, and release the plethora of gold, lending it out or rather founding credits upon it, the resultant expansion of loans and the consequent abundance of "money" would inflate the price level over twofold. In other words the purchasing power of each dollar would be more than cut in two.

The West can move its crops with its own money this year, reinforced, if necessary, by the various bank agencies given special advantages by Federal law.

Men who make money by speculating in money are now looking to the German loan as a means of putting their surplus capital to work. It is also figured that the railroads will have a billion dollars a year for ten years to put the lines in condition. A meet traffic requirement it will be observed that these financiers are not investing in "wild cat" oil stocks or "industrial" in general; they seem to prefer to leave their money idle.

THE PRODIGAL

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

THERE is much comfort to many of us in the parable of the Prodigal Son. The ending of the story seems so happy and so satisfying. But this is all because we do not read the tale carefully; we do not grasp all that is implied. We see the boy in the elegant garments which the father has brought out, we smell the savory odors of the feast in preparation, and we catch the sound of music and of dancing, and are deceived into supposing that the son's unwholesome past has been wiped out and that life for him in the future is to be as if the past had never been.

One can turn his face in a new direction—that's what conversion means—one can get a new start, but there is always one's past to be reckoned with.

Underneath the embroidered silken garments which the returned prodigal was wearing was his shattered body, torn by want and disease and discipline. In his mind was still the tarnished memory of an unspeakable past. He was a pauper, too, for his inheritance had been wasted in riotous living. When the ill-tempered elder brother complained at the wasteful expenditure which was being made in celebration of the prodigal's return the father answered:

"Son, all that I have is thine."

The prodigal had started out with an inheritance, but he had wasted it. He was starting again, but with nothing but a second chance.

In one of her stories Margaret Prescott Montague has the drunkard say to Just Jimmie, "Little pal, don't you get drunk. You wouldn't find any thing so nice again, not ever again."

It is hard to come back home. It is hard to start over again, and the reward is quite worth while, but a wasted inheritance, moral or intellectual, is not atoned for in a day. The handicap of a wasted or an unimproved past can be overcome in time. If one goes at it with courage and persistence, but not at once. And there are many prodigals even today who will never "find anything so nice again, not ever again."

Water Snake Causes Drowning of Three

Los Angeles, Cal.—A harmless water snake caused the death of three persons at Gray's lake, north of here. The dead are: Frank Balaz, twenty-seven; Rita Balaz, his wife, and his sister, Agnes Balaz, members of a picnic party. The two women were rowing when the sweep of an oar brought the snake to the surface. The women grew hysterical and leaped into the water. When Frank attempted to rescue them they seized him by the neck and all perished.

NOTE FROM THE GAME & FISH DEPARTMENT

In some sections where violations of the Bird Laws are so bold and brutal, the State Game & Fish Department shall seek the co-operation of the Federal authorities. The Federal Laws and penalties are more drastic than those of Kentucky, for instance, the penalty for killing a dove out of season, under the Federal Law is not more than $500 or for imprisonment for not more than six months, or both.

The Railroad men from the least to the greatest, are proving themselves to be the most loyal friends of the Game and Fish Department. They transport the Department's car wherever and whenever requested, showing every courtesy to the occupants and talk Fish and Game conservation at every chance. They love sportsmanship and manifest that love with real practical assistance. And they do this and more without price or special favor.

The Kentucky Game and Fish Commission invite all sportsmen, all farmers and all lovers of wild life to make their headquarters at the Co. A mission's building, situated at the east end of the big manufacturer's building at the State Fair grounds, Louisville, Ky., the week of the State Fair, beginning September 8th. Interesting exhibits of live fish and game will be on display, as well as mounted specimens, together with a very attractive line of sporting goods. All Visitors Welcome.

Ribbon Filet for Youthful Coiffure.

It is a pretty sight to note the cunning ribbon coiffure arrangements which youth is wearing this season. Perhaps the vogue for bobbed hair is responsible for these very charming ribbon bandeaux and filets noted at party and dance. Anyway, with all due respect to the "bob" it is no exception to the "thorn with every rose" adage, which in the case of short tresses is that they have a way of blowing recklessly about at the touch of every breeze. However, necessity being the mother of invention, the cleverest sort of ribbon fantasies are designed to confine curly locks or straight.

So what care we as long as fashion declares in favor of the fanciful ribbon filet? The one in the picture is made of narrow gold ribbon with lots of color in its weave.

If perchance anyone is so courageous as to abandon the bob, why not, while tresses are growing out, artfully conceal the fact with a pretty ribbon conceit such as is shown in the picture.

THE HIGH SCHOOL AND SOCIAL PROBLEMS

Is your high school giving you child the key to understanding and intelligent participation in social relations?

Such understanding and such participation is vital to national, group, or individual well-being. If we could select the strong men of the nation, who have perfect understanding of social needs and if these men had been to be wholly bent upon the well-being of the whole group, we could commission them to direct our affairs governmental and turn our whole attention to other matters of personal importance. Happily, or unhappily, however, perfectly unselfish or altruistic men are not found. Happily or unhappily our intelligence determines whom we select to direct our national life. Our intelligence judges as between this man's point of view and that man's point of view. The collective intelligence of the masses of the people in a democracy determines the course of the national life. We cannot avoid it. The people do, in time, solve the problems of the people.

What is your high school doing to train the intelligence of your child in the problems of the Nation?

A very small crowd attended county court Monday.

DEDICATION OF HEBRON CON SOLIDATED SCHOOL

Sept. 1, 1924, will be long remembered by the present citizens of Hebron and the surrounding community as well as by our children—the future patrons fathers and mothers of tomorrow as the day on which the handsome new school was dedicated for the service of more than two hundred pupils.

Two ball games were played during the day and a splendid dinner was served at the noon hour.

A very large crowd was present, coming not only from Boone county but from Ludlow, Covington and Cincinnati, and every one responded most liberally in donations which were very gratefully received.

We are fortunate indeed in having such an efficient corps of teachers who so ably conducted this affair. Much praise is also due to the women who so competently managed the serving of this bounteous repast and also the pupils who rendered their assistance.

We desire to thank heartily each and every person who responded to our call for support and the Ludlow band for their music.

To see our massive brick building modern as it is, located in one of the most attractive sites of the county, just north of Hebron, with a magnificent view for miles and miles, is to admire its great beauty and grandeur. From a small one room frame building of twenty years ago to the handsome structure, is certainly several steps forward in the progress of the education of our children.

"The heights of great men reached and kept Were not attained by sudden flight."

But they, while their companions slept,

Were toiling upward in the night." So, we too, if we attain the goal must strive onward and ever upward and so live that when the summons comes to join the innumerable caravan, that moves to the pale realms of shade.

Thou too sustained and soothed by an unflinching trust—a faith and trust in the Divine Creator to whom we bow humbly in gratitude for his aid to erect such a temple of learning.

DAVIS AND THE FARMERS

If one wants complete sense and common sense in politics read that edition of John W. Davis' speech of acceptance dealing with the farmers of the country.

"To the farmers of the United States we promise not patronage but such laws and such administration of laws as will enable them to prosper in their own right."

They feel today more severely, perhaps, than any others the depression effects of discriminatory taxation. Buying in a protected market and selling in a market open to the world, they have been forced to contribute to the profits of those in other industries with no compensating benefit to themselves.

"Recent experience has proved, if proof were needed, that an effort to help the farmer by a tariff on his products is the baldest political pretence. He knows as well as any economist can tell him that the price he gets for his surplus crop depends on conditions at the place of sale; and he realizes that his permanent prosperity depends not upon the decrease through crop surpluses of the quantity he has to sell, but upon the restoration and expansion of the markets to which his goods must go."

"We propose to see to it that the discrimination which the tariff makes against him shall be removed; that his government by doing its share toward a European settlement shall help to enlarge and revivify his foreign markets; that instead of lip service to the principles of co-operative marketing the forces of the government shall be put actively at work to lead assistance to these endeavors; that the farmer shall be supplied not only with information on problems of production but with information such as the dealer now receives concerning the profitable use and demand for his product, so that he may be enabled to think as intelligently as the dealer in terms of consumption and demand."

GALLATIN STREET TO BE RE-CONSTRUCTED

At a meeting of residents and property owners on Gallatin street last Saturday night, funds were raised for the reconstruction of that pass, way. To be more correct, it should be called "impassable," if there be such a word, for it has been impassable for several years except in extremely dry weather. And now since that neighborhood is building up so rapidly it has become necessary to do something.

There are seven property owners on the street who, assisted by Judge Lassing, who lives on another street, raised $450 in about 20 minutes for this work, which will be started at once.

There are three new residences on this street, including one still under construction, and two or three more being considered, so that when finished this part of the town will be vastly improved.

HOME ISSUES

The presidential campaign in the United States, now in full swing, is to be fought out on home issues.

And well that it may, because the citizens of the United States are more concerned about their government at home than they should be about relations with neighboring nations, though it is an essential part of the government's functions to maintain peaceful relations with other groups of peoples.

President Coolidge has declared for "common sense in government," and it will be the campaign slogan of the Republicans in the continuation of administration efforts to put more economy in government.

John W. Davis, Democratic nominee for president, put foremost in his campaign keynote, "Honesty in Government," thus injecting into the campaign the oil scandals which resulted in the resignation of three members of the cabinet whom President Coolidge "inherited" from his predecessor.

Sixteen abreast in five and possibly more divisions, the 25,000 marchers in the great parade at the sixth annual convention of The American Legion at St. Paul, Minn., from September 15 to 19 will require more than three hours to pass the reviewing stand, according to the convention committee. The line will be five miles long and will make one of the most spectacular parade sights to be seen in the country this year.

The parade will be held on the afternoon of September 16th. As the department having the biggest membership percentage means Florida will lead the parade.

Col. Frank Matson, railroad and warehouse commissioner of Minnesota, has been appointed grand marshal. He is also chairman of the parade committee and is making arrangements for staging this event.

Senator LaFollette, running as an independent candidate, wants the "government returned to the people."

The more hopeful situation in Europe, brought about by the pact of London, in which the reparations tangle was settled with the aid of the Dawes-Young plan, practically eliminates foreign relations from the campaign and leaves the candidates free to do battle on home issues.

All this should work for betterment of the government, if the attention of the people can be focused for a few days on that which they take all too much for granted.

It may be possible to impress upon them that the government is in a measure a living thing, that it was not built according to a certain plan, but is elastic and grows and develops to suit the changing needs of the people.

There was a time when the difference between a "dirt" farmer and a "gentleman" farmer was that one made a living out of his farm and the other grew mortgages. But now that the "dirt" farmer is said to be bankrupt, candidates anxious to get close to their hearts should pose as gentlemen farmers. The probable money loan might mean a sense of fellowship in the unhappy farming region of the west.

WHAT THE COUNTRY DISTRICTS NEED.

Much could be done to promote rural progress, if the newspapers published in the larger cities would give more attention to rural problems. They print more or less about this matter, but frequently it is written by men who have lived most of their life in cities. It is easy for editorial sharps who never handled a hoe to tell the farmers what to do. They would find it a difficult proposition to take hold and do these things.

The big city newspapers devote columns to discussion of the financial and business situation, but not many of them discuss the problems of rural business in the same thorough way.

What is needed is to impress on city people, that agriculture is just as vitally important as manufacturing or transportation. When laws are framed affecting business, they should give as much attention to the way they are going to affect rural life, as to their relation to the populations and the industries of the city.

The idea should be impressed on the city people, that if they expect to get food at a reasonable price, they must contribute very considerably to improve the country roads, and to maintain good schools.

If the country roads are mudholes or sandholes, the food brought to market will cost high. And if the schools are poor in the country, it will be very difficult to induce people to live there, and the schools will not be able to train the young people as they should become efficient in food raising and other rural industries. The wealth of the country is largely in the cities and large towns. They ought to contribute according to their means to keep up the facilities through which country life becomes efficient.

FREAK VOTING QUALIFICATIONS

There is a wide difference of opinion in the various States regarding the proper qualifications for voters.

In twenty States there is a literacy test for voters. The standard is somewhat elastic. In New York a citizen must be able to read fifty words from the Constitution and write legibly in English ten words from the passage read. Several States demand that the prospective voter must be able to read the Constitution and write his or her own name.

Others do not require that a man should be able to read the Constitution but that he should be able to explain it—a rather difficult task. In some States again, the requirements are very general, merely stating that a man must read and write, while in still others a voter satisfies the literacy standards if he can write a single line or his own name.

A few States require a voter to have employment at election time. South Carolina demands that a voter must be paying taxes on $50 or more property. A good moral character of good behavior is required in some States. Several deny the ballot to paupers. Many States, if their laws were enforced, would take the vote of any one betting on the election results.

The election laws are far more diversified and ambiguous than divorce laws, and in the matter of electing a president of the United States, it would seem that the same rules should apply in every state.

THE DEFENSE TEST

When the enemy met the American Devil Dogs at Chateau Thierry, they knew that they were dealing with a new force and they began to feel less confident of victory.

From that day until November 11, 1918, the war was one succession of triumphs for American bravery and heroism. The men from the new world went over to finish up the task and they did it, but at a great sacrifice.

Lack of preparation, inadequate training and supplies cost the life of many a brave American boy.

With the experience born of the world war, congress passed the National Defense Act of 1920, which is the first time in the history of the United States that its government has ever been committed to a definite military policy.

Under the terms of this act, it is proposed to hold a Defense Test, September 12. We are told it is not intended as a mobilization, but simply as a demonstration of the resources of this country, which would be available in case of war.

No sensible person could ever hope for war. But if war becomes inevitable, as it did in 1917, we should be prepared.

If other nations laid down their guns, sank their battleships and junked their airplanes, the United States would be quick to join in such a movement. But so long as they are armed, it is the part of wisdom not to be defenseless and invite attack.

ETIQUETTE BOOKS

Among the best selling books of late have been works on etiquette and manners. Some people laugh at such volumes, but they are needed. The reason why some of them may seem absurd is that they have tried to appeal to different types of people.

Persons of culture sometimes laugh at such a work if it warns people not to commit gross blunders. Yet there are a lot of folks who need just that type of advice. Different people need different grades of instruction in manners. The man who eats with his knife needs a kind of primary school instruction book, the more sophisticated person needs something that discusses finer points.

The country has been going thru a period in which a lot of rough and unrefined conduct is charged against the young people as a mass. These complaints may have been exaggerated, but there has been some basis for them. Such conduct is perhaps a natural development of the war period, when young men and women were given a degree of freedom they never have in old fashioned or so called "normal" times.

It would do a lot of people, both old and young, considerable good to read through a well prepared book on manners. They would discover that though people are never going to be as stiff and conventional as they were in the starved a prim old times, yet there are certain forms and ways of doing things that are more graceful and appropriate, than others, and which suggest that the people who have learned these ways are gentlemen and ladies.

Bulwer-Lytton, the famous novelist, once said: "What a rare gift it is that of manners, and how difficult to impart! Better for a man to possess them than wealth, beauty or talent, they will supply all." Very true.

There are a few words closed to men and women who have good manners.

THE GIRLS PLAYING BASE BALL

It is a common sight nowadays, in going by a playground or school yard to see a group of girls playing base ball. It seems a more healthful and normal thing than when the same youngsters are engaged in some indoor pastime.

These youngsters seem to be games formerly considered as boys' sports, with as much vigor and enthusiasm as their brothers. If they could keep it up through their young womanhood, it would seem as if it should promote a greater physical strength and endurance than women ever had before.

There is also a certain moral training to be had from such sports that girls ought not to miss. Such games, if played under suitable supervision, are a wonderful help in encouraging fair play and teaching the spirit of obedience to rules. There are just as many women as men who need that form of instruction.

The freedom of dress granted to the younger girls is a great help to them in playing boys' games, suggesting that the reason why they do not keep up may be that the longer skirts that they put on in later years prove too much of a dead weight on their activity. Recent years, with the freedom given their girls to wear "knicker" should have removed that difficulty.

Probably the ancient custom that has forced women to wear skirts most of the time, has had much to do with excluding them from the more active sports. It seems too bad that a mere convention should thus hamper their participation in healthful exercise. While the knicker custom has become very popular, many women still feel a little queer about putting them on in their home neighborhoods, a feeling that they would do well to get over, so that they could have full freedom in work and play.—Exchange.

If the $75,000,000 bond proposition receives a majority of the votes cast on that question at the November election, Boone county will be entitled to about $265,000 of that fund. The tax payers of Boone will pay just as much tax for road purposes regardless of the result of the bond election. By voting in favor of road bonds Boone county will be entitled to $265,000 and the tax payers will not be required to pay one cent additional tax. The bonds and interest will be paid from the taxes now levied and collected. If the people of Boone county do not want the State Highway Commission to spend in Boone county the sum of $265,000 then they should vote against the proposition, but when our people find that they will pay just as much tax if they vote against the bonds, they will, if they vote in their favor, and $265,000 will be spent in Boone county primary roads, for the proposition carries, then our citizens should, without hesitation cast their votes in favor of the bonds.

Why vote against the issue of these bonds when we will receive from the bond fund so large a sum with out our citizens paying one cent additional tax?

FARM POULTRY

MUCH TURKEY LOSS DUE TO BLACKHEAD

A large part of the turkey losses seem to be due to blackhead. Various medicines have been recommended for this disease and recently the Ipecac treatment has received a great deal of publicity in hopes that it might be the long-sought-for cure.

Up to the present time I can locate no cases in our section where the Ipecac treatment has given results sufficiently good enough to prove that it is definitely beneficial, says a writer in the Indiana Farmer's Guide. This being the case, I feel that turkey breeders must still rely on the old methods of preventing disease and not depend upon medicines. Labeling must be avoided as it often results in weak poult which are subject to a disease like blackhead. Breeding from mature stock seems to produce more resistant poult than those from young breeding stock.

Turkeys that range with farm poultry of all kinds seem more apt to have blackhead as they are often scratching in the dirt of the other birds. Plenty of sour milk in the turkey ration seems to help the poult to resist blackhead. The sour milk is not a cure but it does stimulate a rapid, vigorous growth and in turn helps to keep down digestive disorders which might weaken the poult and make them subject to blackhead.

It is difficult to raise poult on land where blackhead has been prevalent and some breeders have cleaned up their premises by ceasing to raise turkeys for a year or two. Then they obtain clean breeding stock and have better success. At present there are many farmers who might have good success with turkeys because none of the birds have ranged on their farm for five or ten years or more and the soil is probably entirely free from the disease.

Profit Made in Guinea

Broilers and Roasters

The guinea hen is a good layer, but on account of the wild gamey flavor, the eggs have never had an extensive sale for table use. However, to turn these eggs into young broilers or roasters, a considerable profit will be derived. The flesh is the nearest substitute we have for the wild game.

The guinea is of a roving disposition, and one of the best known destroyers of insects.

The laying season starts in early April and continues until October, the hen laying as many as 120 eggs in a season. In the early part of the season it is not advisable to let the guinea hen hatch a brood, as she is of too restless a nature, and will not give her young the proper attention. But after the first of July, on account of the warm weather, she will be more quiet, and she can be safely entrusted with a brood.

It requires four weeks to hatch out guinea. The hen always hides her nest, and that, too, in some obscure place. As they come off the nest they give a shrill cry, and in this way their hiding place can be detected. All the hens of a flock are apt to lay in one nest, and in taking away these eggs they should not be touched with the hands, for if the hen discovers that the nest has been touched she will desert it and hunt another place. But if the eggs are removed with a stick she will not leave the nest, even if the eggs are taken out nearly every day.

Overcrowding Is One of Most Common Mistakes

Overcrowding is one of the most common mistakes made in growing chickens. Overcrowding of the baby chicks usually corrects itself by the simple method of the chicks dying from day to day until the number that can be accommodated with air in one nest, and in taking away these eggs they should not be touched with the hands, for if the hen discovers that the nest has been touched she will desert it and hunt another place. But if the eggs are removed with a stick she will not leave the nest, even if the eggs are taken out nearly every day.

All cases of diarrhea are not the infectious white diarrhea; many of them could have been prevented by providing more room for the chicks; the diarrhea is merely an evidence of overcrowding.

When the young stock have reached the sex-conscious age, the sexes should be separated. Separation of the sexes promotes the growth of each.

Wet Feeds for Chicks

A few breeders say they have good results with wetfeeds for baby chicks. Since many breeders fail with this system, we do not recommend it. Clean dry grains after the rolled oats become offensive to the chicks is the safest feed. Sour milk is very important in the feeding rations of baby chicks.

Origin of Pekin Duck

The Pekin duck is of Asiatic origin, and was imported to this country from China, about thirty years ago. A traveler who saw them about the streets of Peking mistook them for small white geese at first, but upon finding them ducks, was so impressed with their snow white plumage and noble carriage that he secured some of their eggs. They were brought to Hong-Kong and hatched, and in due time the birds were shipped to New York.

"LIONIZE"

When Benjamin Franklin was in France interesting the French people in the struggling colonies, he was "lionized" by the French. The term is a reminder of the days when the lions at the Tower of London were the chief spectacle of the city shown to visitors. The menagerie was abolished in 1834, but the "social lions" of the city are the rulers of its human menagerie. All society showers favors on the man whom it decides to "lionize."

THE COMMUNISTS beat all other parties to it by breaking into Washington with the first stump speaker of the presidential campaign. He was Ben Gitlow, who is running for Vice-President on the ticket with William Z. Foster. Gitlow was run out of the Knights of Pythias hall just as he was starting to speak, but accumulated an audience in a dark and musty hall on Seventh Street, where he proceeded to tear into the other parties and denounced Senator LaFollette as a "reactionary."

GITLOW'S SPEECH unleashed a flood of political oratory in the capitol with the result that both President Coolidge and Senator LaFollette have now jumped actively into the campaign via the radio. The President makes his speeches to various national organizations meeting in the capitol while LaFollette speaks directly for the radio, his first speech having been delivered on Labor Day.

SENATOR WHEELER has been selected to do most of the cross-country stumping for the Progressives, just as General Dawes will do it for the Republicans. Wheeler is now in New England and after he winds up there he will head westward. Among the other things he has to worry about is a demand for his appearance in Baltimore, Md., to answer to a federal charge for accepting money to appear before a federal department after he was elected to the Senate.

RETURNING FROM a ten-day vacation in Vermont, President Coolidge will remain in Washington for some weeks, although he plans to make at least one speech in the Middle West before November, probably at Kansas City or Chicago. For the next week or so he will be engaged in organizing the Federal commission which will investigate the farming industry.

ALTHOUGH THE Democratic national campaign is being directed from headquarters here, Nominee Davis has not put in his appearance here this far. He is expected to drop off in Washington during his campaigning, but finds this city out of the beaten path in his trips East to West.

Edward Prince of Wales, has come and gone, his brief visit serving to forge another link in the chain binding the two great English-speaking nations. Aside from having lunch with the President and a few officials at the Executive Mansion, the Prince had no other engagements here, leaving for Long Island to witness the International polo matches, Capitol debutantes, who had expected to have an opportunity to meet the Prince at some social affairs, were therefore greatly disappointed.

THE DAUGHTERS of the American Revolution are taking a prominent part in the plans for the national defense mobilization on Sept. 12. Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook, president of the Daughters was named by Secretary Weeks as Chairman of the Civilian Committee to co-operate with the War Department in perfecting the Defense Plans. She has turned over Memorial Day plans here for the use of the committee and all the organization's energies are being directed toward making the defense test a success.

THE STATEMENT that many Government employees have to go hungry because of the low salaries they receive is made by the Federation of Federal Employees, which will urge the next Congress to grant pay increases in some departments. Pointing out that the guards in the Library of Congress receive only slightly more than a thousand dollars a year and have to buy their own brass-buttoned uniforms, the Federation declares that their motto is to be "less mural decorations and more corn beef and cabbage."

In the early election betting in Wall Street, President Coolidge is quoted as a 3 to 1 favorite. Some of the betting commissioners are of the opinion that from $10,000,000 to $15,000,000 will be wagered this year. It is a curious fact that betting on horse racing is prohibited but pools on ball or elections, or on hogs and produce are matters of common publicity for which the mails are freely used.

BOONE COUNTY AT STATE FAIR.

County Agent R. J. Matson and wife left Monday morning for the State Fair at Louisville with the following Junior Live Stock Judging Team: Paul Hafer, Hebron; Ava Lou Hudson, Walton; LaVerne Sullivan, Union, and Grant Maddox, Florence. This judging team will compete with forty-two other teams from different counties throughout the State, and expect to bring back the Silver Loving Cup won by the Boone county team two years ago, but now held by another county.

C. F. Kinsey, of Hopeful neighborhood, left last Saturday for the State Fair with a car load of Jersey cattle; Chester Tanner, Robt. Youell and Ross Russ also took their herds of Chesterwhite and Duroc Jersey hogs and expect to bring back the bacon.

There will also be a county display of apples in addition to individual entries of fruit from the orchards of Boone county fruit growers. There is a premium of $120 for the best county display of apples, and it is hoped that Boone will win this prize.

Mrs. R. J. Matson, local leader of the Florence Sewing Club has entered at the State Fair the two best exhibits at the Florence Fair, made by girls in the Junior Sewing Club of Boone county. These entries belong to Miss Carrie Florence, Burlington, and Miss Edna Jettara, Florence. Boone county is the only county in the State making a clothing exhibit at the fair, that does not have a Home Demonstration Agent. County Agent Matson is endeavoring to have a Sewing Club in each of the High Schools.

From all indications Boone county will be well represented at the State Fair at Louisville this week—by her citizens, live stock, fruit and various other fine exhibits.

YOUR LOCAL BANKER.

How many hard earned dollars are lost every year by Boone county people in wild investments? Nobody knows, for the man who loses keeps his mistakes to himself.

If he had put his money in a local enterprise and it had failed through no fault of anybody, he would raise his voice to the house-tops. But when he is taken in by the "get rich quick" scheme, he has nothing to say.

So we want to make a little suggestion to all people who have a little money to invest. Don't let the glib talking promoter hypnotize you. Go to your local banker before you put your name on the dotted line. Ask him whether he would invest in this scheme. Find out what he has to offer in the way of investments—learn where you can put your money so as to be sure of getting at least the principal back.

Your banker knows you and you know him. He is going to make his home in Boone for many years. He needs your good will and you need his advice. So we suggest that you talk it over with him first.

OPERATION SUCCESSFUL.

M. L. Souther, a prominent farmer of the Idlewild neighborhood, submitted to an operation last Thursday at the Jewish hospital in Cincinnati. Mr. Souther has been suffering intensely for some time and all efforts had failed to bring about any improvement in his condition, and specialists were at sea as to the cause of his ailment.

The operation revealed a growth in the spinal column which caused a displacement of the spinal cord. When removed the cord was allowed to resume its proper position, but his system was so depraved from his protracted suffering that his friends and relatives are very anxious about his condition. At last account he was slightly, but noticeably improved.

SHERIFF HAS PNEUMONIA

Sheriff B. B. Hume was taken to the Jewish Hospital last Saturday afternoon, after having been confined to his bed for two days. An examination there revealed that he was suffering from pneumonia. It is thought however that his condition is not serious.

It is a well known fact, say sheep specialists, that a small flock of sheep on the farm is one of the most profitable things that a farmer can have on his farm as they will convert the weeds of the farm into meat and wool. In the last few weeks quite a number of Boone county farmers have disposed of their flocks, and W. L. Kirkpatrick, who has purchased them is selling them to Ohio farmers who are anxious to get them. Last week he sold to two Ohio farmers 153 head of stock ewes.

School's Open

MORE REASONS WATERMELON STEALING

FOR BOONE COUNTY TO SUPPORT THE BOND ISSUE.

Now that the State Department has taken over the Burlington and Florence pike for construction and maintenance it presents another reason why Boone county people should support the $75,000,000 bond issue in November.

If the bonds carry Boone will have her proportionate share of the road money to spend on her county roads, but since this heavily traveled segment is now a state road, none of this proposed amount of money will be spent on this road but divided among the other roads of the county instead.

This is merely a local factor, but since we stand principally for the interests of Boone county, we therefore think we should consider it.

The principle reason for which any one should vote for these bonds, and as previously pointed out in these columns, is that they will not increase the taxes on either real or personal property because the revenue which will retire these bonds will be derived from the gasoline tax which is already levied and being paid by you today on each and every gallon of gasoline that you consume. Since we are now paying the tax, let's take one more forward step for education and highways—by our vote on the 4th of November.

COUNTY CONVENTION

Of Christian Sunday Schools Held at Walton last Saturday.

Walton Christian church entertained the Sunday schools of the Christian churches of Boone county last Saturday in an all-day convention.

Aside from the usual routine of business short talks were made by R. H. Carter, E. C. Riley, G. W. Nutter, George Rogers and others. Special music was furnished by the Walton and Petersburg schools.

The Walton people, as usual, played the part of host in a praiseworthy fashion as attested by everyone of those present.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

G. F. Schram, President.
C. Scott Chambers, V. President.
Oleva Chandler Secy-Treas.

LARGEST DREDGE BOAT

"The C. B. Harris" a new government dredge boat is at work at Dar 38, being constructed across the river at McVille, this county. The boat is the largest dredge on inland rivers in the United States. It is capable of cutting a channel fifteen feet deep and as wide as is desired through the bars and shallows of the river. It is operated by a 1,000 horse power engine connected directly to the centrifugal dredging pump. The equipment consists of commodious quarters for the crew and is provided with recreation rooms, shower baths, drinking fountains, electric fans and other conveniences. The length of the boat is 175 feet, with a fifty foot beam and has eight feet depth of hold.

GOOD ADVERTISING

In the columns of an exchange the other day, there appeared the advertisement of a fruit farmer. He stated in a few words just what he had to sell, and printed a map showing how motorists could get to his place.

It looked like mighty good advertising. Many farmers can set a lot of stuff to motorists, if they make it clear to the driving public just where their places are located.

MAY BE STOPPED IF THIS CONTINUES.

Last Saturday night four melons were discovered in Otway Deck's patch, which is on the Christian church farm operated by L. K. Cropper. They had their Ford loaded and were on their way before anyone could stop them, and then they were only stopped by reason of the fact that Raymond Witham drove his roadster directly across their path allowing them to crash into it rather than have them make a get-away.

They had pulled more melons than they could haul, as there were about fifty piled against the fence. Deputy Sheriff L. T. Utz was called and arrested them. The four defendants Fred Tanner, Orville Courtney, Leroy Courtney and Elmer Courtney, all of Erlanger, are now in the county jail in default of bond.

Another theft was caught in Jesse Kelly's patch earlier in the week and was fined $25 and costs. Watermelon stealing has been a popular habit in the Bellevue and Petersburg bottoms for years and it is to be hoped that a few more arrests will break it up.

Later—Monday afternoon reia of the defendants paid fines, costs and damages aggregating $137. Of this sum $25 damages was paid to the owners of the melons.

REV. RUNYAN AT FLORENCE

BRINGS LATONIA CHOIR WITH HIM

An appreciative audience gathered at the Florence Christian church Sunday afternoon to hear the Rev. H. C. Runyan for the first time in many months. Rev. Runyan was accompanied by the Latonia Christian church choir whose renditions were beautiful and highly appreciated.

Rev. Runyan started on a voyage to Europe some months ago, but an attack of sickness caused his sudden and unexpected return. He occupied his Latonia pulpit last Sunday morning and evening for the first time since his return. His text Sunday evening being "What I did not see in Europe." His friends, numbered by the hundreds in Boone county, are delighted to hear of his recovery.

THE HARVEST HOME

For the past thirty-nine years the ancient and time hallowed beach grove near Limaburg has been the scene of a convocation of Boone county people on either the first or second Saturday in September, and last Saturday September 6th was no exception to that rule.

The day itself has never been nor could it ever be, excelled in so far as its beauty and comfort were concerned. Usually about this time of year we are still having some of the "left over" August heat but such was not the case this year, as the weather was just warm enough to be comfortable to the large crowd of 150 that attended.

The exhibits were well patronized and attended. The feature of the day being the Jersey and Holstein cow exhibit. First premium of $20.00 in the Jersey ring was taken by J. T. Stephenson 1st; O. C. Hafer 2nd, while the same on best Holstein cow was captured by Emmet Riddell 1st, Dode Carpenter 2nd, Harry Dinn 3rd.

A well filled house was in attendance at the Sunday night service of the Baptist protracted meeting. Rev. Adams delivered a splendid sermon on "The House Not Built with Hands, eternal in the Heavens." Prof. and Mrs. Elder, who have moved here for the winter were taken under the watch care of the church.

The time has gone by when you could hire boys to pick berries by giving them all they wanted to eat.

WONDERFUL TOUR

Described by Miss Estelle Huey, Assistant Principal of Boone County High School—Yet Kentucky Is The Only Place to Live She Says.

When one is asked to describe a journey of seven thousand five hundred miles through mountains, plains, cities, rivers, lakes, ocean, desert and forest, from Canada to Mexico and through seventeen of our own states, from the land of snow three hundred feet deep to the land of ever-blooming roses, palm trees and orange groves, his first thought is one of joy but the next is one of regret. For neither a Wadsworth nor a Cort could make you see the beauty, the wonder and the grandeur until you look with your own eyes. However, I shall try to give you just a little of the impression that came to me.

The tours through the cities were always made in large auto buses equipped with a capable guide who announced through a megaphone the points of interest, the chief of which in Chicago were Michigan Boulevard, the largest in America, the homes of Schuman Heiny, Jack Johnson, and Robert Franks, Chicago University, the Sears, Roebuck & Co. plant and the stock yards; Washington, Hyde, Jackson, McKinley and Garfield parks. In Washington Park is one of the largest artificial fields in America. Twenty-eight games of baseball can be played there at one time, allowing plenty of room for the fans. During the afternoon we visited Marshall Field's the largest department store in the world. It is twelve stories high and occupies a whole block.

On account of rain storms we ran several hours behind the schedule through Wisconsin and Minnesota. We were much interested in the white trunked birch trees, the cedars and pines, the glacial drift and beautiful lakes in some sections and the vast grain fields in others. In St. Paul we drove through the residential section, past the State Capitol and across the Mississippi river. At Minneapolis the sound of the water of Muncie Falls brought back to us the soothing music of "Hiawatha."

On the third day of our trip we passed through North Dakota which with Minnesota is a giftly called "the Granary of the World." The vast fields of yellow wheat were broken only at intervals by clumps of trees which serve as wind breaks for the homes. After laboriously filling out our immigration papers and opening up our baggage for the inspectors, about noon we passed the international line.

For miles and miles through Saskatchewan there was nothing but prairie, rocky layers beneath the soil that can't be cultivated, and not a house to be seen. As we approached the better section we came again to beautiful green fields of waving grain that was ready to be harvested.

After leaving the prairies at Calgary, a city of seventy-two thousand people, the largest in Alberta, and passing through the foothills of the Rockies, about noon of the fourth day we arrived at Banff, a picturesque little village nestled close to the foot of the mountains almost two miles high. As we enjoyed our lunch at the Mt. Royal Hotel and gazed up the mountain at the magnificent view from the windows, we could not believe our conductor when he said he had something yet more wonderful in store for us, the forty-two mile drive to Lake Louise, the most beautiful drive in the world.

As we sped along the smooth wide highway which winds about the foot of Castle Mt., a precipice that can't be scaled, eight miles long and more than nine thousand feet high, and dozens of other snow-capped peaks our gaze of admiration was diverted only by the beauty of the scene bordering by flowers of brilliant yellow, rose color, and white; just below which are the graceful yellow birch trees, while the mountain slopes are covered up to the timber line with forests of spruce and pines.

At length came the climax of the whole journey, Louise, the lake in the clouds, which traversed one of the most perfect gems of scenery in the world, a lake of the deepest and most exquisite coloring, now a turquoise blue, now an emerald green, ever changing, defying analysis, mirroring in its wonderful depths the sombre forests and cliffs that rise from its shores on either side, the gleaming peaks in the background enveloped in the white mist overhead.

As we joyfully snatched time to eat our dinner in the beautiful chalet which is situated just by the lake, we gazed at the scene beyond in speechless wonder. We spent the night in our charming camp, the next morning we passed on through a continuation of the same romantic region.

Six miles west of Lake Louise is the Great Divide, the boundary between Alberta and British Columbia. Our train crossed just long enough for us to see our hands in the open air, but not far enough to get out of the car.

LOCAL HAPPENINGS

The Boone County High School opened Monday morning with the following teachers: Prof. Hook and wife, Miss Estelle Huey, Mrs. Elder and daughter, Miss Olive.

During the summer vacation considerable work has been done on the interior of the building. The walls have been painted and all furniture in the rooms has been cleaned and varnished, making the building more sanitary and healthful for the children, and presents a much improved appearance. The school board is to be congratulated on this good work, and the teachers should see that the building is kept clean and the property not destroyed.

The following is from last week's issue of the Rising Sun, Ind., Recorder, and will be of much interest to their many friends in their old home county:

Miss Lendalene Batts, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Batts of Buckeye Ridge, won the gold medal in the final oratorical contest held at the Baptist church last Thursday night. The fight for the grand prize was a spirited one in many ways and the fact that the winner was a member of the Amosa class goes to show, as a matter of fact, that you "have to go some" to beat the class.

Dr. Will B. Campbell, who held a series of meetings at the Burlington M. E. church about a year ago, and who for the last five years was the president of Kentucky Wesleyan College, Winchester, has accepted the appointment to the pastorate of the St. Paul's Methodist church at Parkersburg, W. RADIO'S PROGRESS.

When the new five-kilowatt transmitting station of The Crosley Radio Corporation, Cincinnati, Ohio, is placed in operation, about Christmas time, it may send Yuletide greetings around the world from its WLW studios. This new super-power station will be the latest radio achievement of The Western Electric Company, containing all of the improvements known to the radio engineers.

Radio's progress is marvelously rapid. Where it will stop no one knows, but Powell Crosley, Jr., as a leader in the radio industry, may be depended upon to give the broadcasting listeners the best in equipment and programs that can be obtained. Beginning with the five-watt transmitting equipment of only a few years ago, power gradually has been increased until it is now necessary to remove the transmitting station outside of the city limits in order that no interference will occur when WLW is "on the air."

After a careful survey of the topography of the counties surrounding the WLW studio, a point outside of Cincinnati was selected by the radio engineers for the erection of two 200-foot antenna towers, and the broadcasting station. The design of this station will be unique and contain not only the powerful broadcasting equipment but in an adjoining building will be housed the resident operators. From the top of the towers, located on a knoll at the highest view of the surrounding country and three states may be had.

Operation of this new Crosley WLW station will be automatic. Within five seconds after a button has been pressed in the broadcasting studio, located in the administration building in Cincinnati, the voice or music of the artist will be loosed into the ether and perhaps heard in Cape Town, South Africa, as was a similar station equipped for experimental purposes. Remote control will be used, making it possible to have the microphones in either the studio, theatres or other places miles away from the point where the station is located. Special wires will be used to carry the voice or music from where the artists and studio director are located to the transmitting station. By means of line-amplifiers, the voice and music are kept of the same quality that would be found if the broadcasting was done in the same room with the artists.

THE GARDEN HARVEST

Many people consider gardening a tedious occupation, but real enthusiasts feel amply rewarded about this time, when their little patch begins to yield its trophies. There is a fine flavor in a vegetable picked in your own little plot and eaten on the same day, that does not attach to the products that were a long time getting to you. There is a sense of triumph, when these gifts of nature reach the dinner table, that you were able to produce them yourself, thereby triumphing over adverse forces of soil and climate and pests.

Nature seems to want to make such outdoor pursuits attractive. So she endows her products, not merely with healthful qualities and succulent taste, but with a wide range of brilliant color, from the golden yellow of corn to the deep red of beets. A garden basket filled with such trophies is a little symphony of color, celebrating the achievement of their 'big gain' in crop values.

Kansas statisticians estimate that the total value of Kansas farm products and live stock to be sold this year will be more than $100,000,000 greater than the value of these products in 1923.

John A. Whitehurst, president of the Oklahoma State Board of Agriculture, estimates that the value of the 14 principal crops in Oklahoma will be $147,000,000 greater than the value of these crops in 1923. He estimates that Oklahoma will have for market 1,122,000 bales of cotton. With cotton at 30 cents a pound this would mean Oklahoma would receive from her cotton crop alone $183,000,000.

O. E. Bradfute, president of the American Farm Bureau says that the price gain to farmers may amount to half a billion of dollars. Washington experts assert that, including the pork and cattle, which will consume nearly 50 per cent of the corn crop, the price benefit will be close to $2,000,000,000. Gross farm sales for 1924-5 are now estimated at $10,000,000,000, an increase of half a billion over last year.

Mrs. Clara Trentman, Dead.

Mrs. Clara Trentman beloved wife of Fred Trentman, Jr., passed away at a Cincinnati Hospital early Thursday morning, Sept. 4th, at the age of 33 years. Funeral services were conducted at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Stephens, near Florence, Ky., Saturday morning Sept. 6th, at 11 o'clock in the presence of a large concourse of relatives and friends. Interment being in Highland cemetery.

Mrs. Trentman is survived by her husband, father and mother and one sister, Undertaker Philip Tallafra, had charge of the funeral arrangements.

The tobacco growers of the White Burley district are advocating a cut-out for 1925. This question should be decided but once, as landlords will be making contracts in a short time for tenants to raise tobacco next year. There is not much use to raise tobacco in 1925 with a surplus of two crops on hand. The growers have everything to gain and nothing to lose in taking a vacation and devoting their attention to the growing of other crops. The blue grass counties of the State seem to favor the cut-out movement. From expressions we have heard, most of the growers in Boone county are in favor of cutting out the 1925 tobacco crop. Others favor a reduction in acreage.

Next Tuesday evening at 7:30 a meeting will be held in Burlington at which plans will be discussed relative to the consolidation of all telephone lines in Boone county.

By coming to this meeting you do not bind yourself to any agreement, whatever, and will not be asked to do so. Plans will merely be discussed for the benefit of everyone interested in a county wide telephone service.

Preparations are being made by the British air force for a trip around the world next spring.

Spanish Modes for Fall

Stylists travel to all quarters of the earth in search of inspiration for new modes. This year the costume of ancient and modern Spain caught their fancy and now we see reflections of these Spanish styles in our present-day apparel. In millinery the Spanish sailor and the toreador hat grace the heads of many Americans in adaptations. And made welcome by the Parisians. One of these dashing salons is shown here in black hat and plush.

Gorgeous fringed and embroidered scarfs and shawls, lace dresses and the large Spanish combs that distinguish evening modes, show that fashion's eyes lingered long on the romantic apparel of Spain.

Miss Ha'tie White submitted to a very painful and dangerous operation at the Deaconess hospital last Saturday, when she had several molars extracted. The teeth, in trying to force their natural way out, had grown at a tangent through the sides of her gums. The operation was not only painful, but tedious, requiring that she be kept under the influence of an anesthetic for one hour and a half. She was doing as nicely as possible under the conditions at last reports.

The prosperous conditions of the country are very pleasing and if cheap money does not cause too much speculation prosperity will continue with us. It seems that Europe is gradually getting on her feet and increasing her trade with other nations, all of which is bound to add business to the world.

Those who are carefully watching conditions will be ready for any and all changes. This nation is the home of opportunity to those who take advantage of it when it arrives.

CITIZENS URGED TO LEARN WHAT BONDS WILL DO

Greater Kentucky Committee Compares Bond Issue Program With Present Pay-As-You-Go Plan and Declares Facts Are Self-Evident—Some Needs Very Urgent—State Lags in Highways, Education, Care of Sick and Unfortunate.

Citizens anxious to see Kentucky take its place beside sister states with a good roads system, adequate schools and modern institutions for the unfortunate, will convince themselves that the $75,000,000 Bond Issue should be approved at the November election if they will take the trouble to learn the provisions of the Bond Issue Law, and to compare figures presented by the proponents and opponents of the measure.

This declaration prefaces a statement issued by the Greater Kentucky Committee of the Kentucky Good Roads Association, showing by statistical tables the results to be expected under the proposed Bond Issue plan under the present pay-as-you-go plan. "All that we ask of the public is that it actually take the trouble to find out what the Bond plan really will do," the statement says further. "We feel there is no doubt that the 'truth' will pass the Bond Issue' if enough voters actually learn the whole truth about this vital question."

Results Are Estimated

The statement continues: Estimated results from the $75,000,000 Bond Issue covering the period from 1925 to 1929 inclusive, as compared to estimated results under the present pay-as-you-go plan of road building, show the following:

Read built under bond issue plan 1925-1929 Miles Road Built 1925-1929 1925-1929 Difference in favor of bond issue plan 1925-1929

Other Pressing Needs Met

There is also provided under the Bond Issue plan during the same period, $13,000,000 for education; $5,000,000 to modernize the penal and charitable institutions; $6,000,000 to refund the State Debt; $400,000 for geological survey; $350,000 for Tuberculosis Sanatoria; $100,000 to modernize plant of School for Deaf and $150,000 for same purpose for School for the Blind.

For these latter purposes the pay-as-you-go plan offers nothing. Estimated results under bond issue plan for road building during the period from 1925 to 1929 inclusive, as compared to the present or pay-as-you-go plan for road building show the following:

Read built under pay-as-you-go plan 1925-1929 Miles Road Built 1925-1929 1925-1929 Difference in favor of bond issue plan 1925-1929

The assumptions of fact upon which the estimates are based are as follows:

Many More Automobiles

MOTOR VEHICLE LICENSES: That there will be no change in the present rate on motor vehicle licenses. These will increase twice as rapidly under the bond issue plan of road construction as under the present or pay-as-you-go plan, because new mileage will be built twice as fast under the bond issue plan during the first five years as under the pay-as-you-go plan. This stimulus given the increase of automobiles is a proven fact wherever good roads have been built. It is contended that the average annual increase for motor vehicles under the bond issue during the next ten years will be approximately 44,000 machines a year, or 20 per cent over the assumed number of licenses for 1925, namely 220,000. The assumed amount of revenue available from motor vehicle licenses for 1925 is based on an estimate made by The Automobile Department of the State Tax Commission.

It is assumed that under the pay-as-you-go plan the increase at this time will average 22,000 cars a year or 10 per cent over the assumed 220,000 cars for 1925.

The 1924 Legislature enacted a law which requires that 60 per cent of the license fees on trucks shall be disbursed by the State back to the Counties. The term of motor vehicle license in the table, herewith, excludes that part of the truck licenses which go back to the Counties.

Other Revenue Sources

GASOLINE TAX: The amount which it is assumed the 3-cent gasoline tax will yield in 1925 is an estimate based on the yield of the former 1-cent gasoline tax and arrived at in the office of the State Tax Commission.

BUS TAX: The same Legislature passed an act placing a special tax on bus lines. From figures available, during July, 1924 it was evident that the receipts from this source of revenue for the present fiscal year would aggregate not less than $40,000. Under the bond plan it is assumed that this tax will increase at the rate of $15,000,000 per annum during the next ten years. Under the pay-as-you-go plan it is assumed this tax will increase $7,500,000 during the next ten years.

AD VALOREM TAX: An increase of $50,000 per year is assumed as a fair normal rate of advance.

FEDERAL AID: This is placed at $1,500,000 per annum, which is about the amount received heretofore.

COUNTY BONDS: There are now approximately $1,000,000 county bonds for road purposes which have been voted and are yet unexpended. Of these, the Highway Department estimates $1,000,000 will be absorbed in 1924, $1,000,000 in 1925 and the remaining $2,000,000 in 1926. To continue to require the counties to vote bonds for road purposes means a further drain upon their credit.

Cost of Maintenance

It is believed this source of revenue has about run its course, though the Highway Department under the present pay-as-you-go system may continue to require it. There may also be some revenue received from cash contributions from the counties. This of course deprives the counties of funds of which they could make some other use.

MAINTENANCE: From statements received from the Highway Department it is conservative to estimate that the maintenance costs of 1925 will be not less than $2,000,000 because at that time there will be approximately 2,000 miles of state primary system under state control. Many of the older roads are of a type of construction hardly adequate to meet the heavy and increasing traffic demands now being imposed upon them. For every mile of new road added to the system under this method of calculation there is added a maintenance cost of $800 per mile per year.

INTEREST AND SINKING FUND: This is placed at $4,250,000 per annum and assumes the sale of bonds at an average of 4 1/2 per cent interest.

Your Conversation "HIGHBROW"

"Highbrow" is a slang term which will work its way into the dictionary along with other words of popular origin now accepted in the best circles. "Highbrow" means intellectual. It is used both as a noun and adjective. It is a reference to the belief that the high forehead is a sign of superior intelligence.

General Pershing's Last Review

General Pershing reviewing the Illinois troops in training at Camp Grant. This was probably the last review the general will hold, as he retires on September 13.

ARE YOU AN HONEST WORK-MAN?

Men need a higher and more just view of the work of work, and the social order is faulty and incomplete until it shall impress upon humanity the true dignity of labor.

We can never be a happy or wholly useful people until those who work with their hands, either from choice or necessity, fully realize the benefit they thus confer upon themselves as well as others, and find genuine joy in the accomplishment of the tasks undertaken.

"Work in every hour, paid or underpaid," says Emerson. "See only that thou work and thou canst not escape reward;" whether the work be fine or coarse, planting corn or writing epics, so only it be honest work done in thine own approbation, it shall earn a reward to the sense, as well as to the thought. No matter how often defeated, you are born to victory. The reward of a thing well done is to have it.

It is a combination of ignorance and greed that blinds the average worker to this sublime and right view of the matter. He is ignorant of the fact that in working honestly with his hands, he is performing actively a part of the divine order, which sustains the universe. He is greedy for the gold to be got by his labor, rather than for the vastly more enriching satisfaction of having played his part to the best of his ability—a satisfaction which cannot but breed that measure of self-reliance and skill which is the world's one master of money, after all.

Thus for a mere gleam, he barter his grip on the true gold. He is a slave because he makes and keeps himself a slave. He does not know that labor is the root of liveliness, but thinks himself driven by a heartless combination of circumstances which "have it in for him."

Circumstances "have it in" for men just what men chose to get out of them. The only being who is a slave to work is the one who slights his work or cheats therein. The only person humbled by work is the one who imagines work can be either mean or mental.

Whatever is needed is in some degree noble. And this day there is no nobler title than "Honest Workman."

Are you worthy of it?

HE HOPES WE CHOKED

Arthur Michael Samuel, a British economist, says that the U. S. is going to choke to death on gold.

The wish is father to the thought. In other words, he hopes we choke to death on gold.

In his opinion, the United States is selfish in attempting, by putting the Dawes-plan German bank on a gold basis, to hasten the return of the gold standard to Europe, because the United States wants, in this manner, to disgorge her gold—and save herself from choking to death on it, economically and industrially speaking.

But many of our European brethren would be glad to die the same way. Whatever they may say about the United States is nothing more than an expression of their envy. They would be only too glad to have our gold. They would die for it or as it.

They have never shipped back any of our gold. It has been poured in streams for the relief of the war destitute. No humanitarian appeal has ever come from across the Atlantic that has not been answered with American gold.

It is very poor grace for an Englishman or any European to express gratitude for American gold. Our record is clean—just as clean as our gold.

Much farm machinery rusts out before it wears out. It is said that a machine left in the open all year, will last only half as long as one properly housed. The annual depreciation on $1,000 worth of farm machinery poorly housed is rated at $200. On many a Kentucky farm a machine shed to house $1,000 worth of machinery could be built for $200.

A BUSINESS OF THE FUTURE.

E. G. Quamme, president of the federal land bank of St. Paul, predicts that farming will be better and more profitable from now on, the upward trend to continue for perhaps thirty years or longer.

He expresses the view that farming will be the safest, best and most satisfactory business in America within the next ten years.

Everything points in this direction and as this feeling of security begins to permit the farming industry, farm land prices are going to rise because farmers are beginning to appreciate their possessions are rated higher than they supposed.

The area of the demagogue in public office is behind us. The period of unrest in the farming industry may be traced to the doorstep of office seekers who used the temporary unfavorable conditions for their own profit.

They proposed all sorts of curials to catch votes, but farmers are awakening to the realities of the situation. They are beginning to realize that no amount of paternalistic legislation is the solution of a problem that is purely economic.

A billion dollar increase in the agricultural wealth of the nation in the last few weeks has been foundation enough for the renewed hope arising in the breast of the farmer.

Farm buying power is higher today than it has been for several years and indications are that it will go higher.

Farm prices are going up and commodity prices are going down. The farmer takes in more money and can buy more merchandise with the money he takes in.

He is unaffected by industrial unrest and he has no unemployment problem. Business on the farm is going ahead at full speed because there is an assured market for his products.

On the whole, the farmer has as much, if not more, reason to feel encouraged than any other business man.

VIRTUE REWARDED

A frail postal clerk of East Orange, N. J., saw two strange men swing onto the train as he received a valuable sack of registered mail from New York.

He reached for his gun but the bandits beat him to the drawer and he felt a stinging sensation in his leg, then in his hand. Undaunted, he drew his gun, and fired, bringing down one robber and putting the other one to flight.

At the peril of losing his own life, he protected the government's property.

When men fight for their country on the field of battle and are wounded, they are cited for bravery. The law does not recognize the civilian hero.

The postmaster general, however, rewarded the young clerk, with a check for $2,000 and he received the congratulations of President Coolidge.

Such integrity and devotion to duty is worthy of reward and should be an example for every American youth.

There is already too much danger of immature young men gaining the impression that only robbery is fruitful and that virtue gains nothing substantial.

Silk and Lace Trimmings in Fall's Varied Blouses

When one wants to dress up a bit for afternoon or evening, there is nothing quite so convenient as a pretty blouse. New ones for fall in cheerful colors, are all made in the overblouse style, with sleeves more or less short, and decorated with lace or embroidery of beads, or other adornments. The styles are greatly varied, but most of them slip over the head and fasten with a snap fastener—and that is all there is to a change of toilette.

The blouse pictured is of dark red crepe de chine with emplacements of wide flat lace at the front, and narrow val lace used for edgings and insertions. It has ties of narrow ribbon.

THE BIRTH OF A NATION—

At an enormous cost we have secured this famous picture of the Civil War.

EVERY AMERICAN MUST SEE IT

18,000 PEOPLE IN THIS GREAT GRIFFITH FILM!

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION" COVERS ESSENTIAL DETAILS OF CIVIL WAR HISTORY

D. W. Griffith's master production, "The Birth of a Nation," a United Artists release, will be the attraction at Florence Theater, commencing an engagement of 3 days on September 11, 12, 13th.

It will be brought here in reproduction of the greatest attraction which in New York recently set a record by playing to more people in two weeks time than had ever before gathered in a play house. This was the massive Capitol Theatre where over 150,000 persons witnessed the spectacle in a fortnight.

The merest statement regarding "The Birth of a Nation" leaps to superlative because there is no other form in which it can be written. Simple facts in relationship to its developments sound extravagant until you have seen the production and realized a tithe of its sweep and power.

It covers the essential details of American history ranging thru three centuries. Actual battles are shown with ten thousand of soldiers in the conflict. 18,000 people participated in the telling of the story. Three thousand horses were used to give the cavalry and other thrilling effects of the wild dashes over miles of territory. Cities were built up only to be destroyed by fire. The total cost of the entire production was in the neighborhood of $500,000. Five hundred costars and seamstresses worked three months to make the costumes worn by the people. Ten thousand yards of cloth were worked into the costumes worn by the women while 25,000 yards of white muslin were used up in the regalia of the Ku Klux Klanmen.

The narrative is filled with tears and smiles. A brilliant cast lends animation to the story. The list of presenters and film favorites includes such well known screen artists as: Henry B. Walthall, Lillian Gish, Mae Marsh, Miriam Cooper, Mary Alden, Josephine Crowell, Ralph Lewis, Joseph Henabery, Raoul Walsh, Donald Crisp, Howard Gaye, George Sigemann, Walter Long and Elmer Clifton.

Millions to Listen to Radio Accounts of the World Series

Exceptional Qualifications and Specialized Technique Required for Reporting of Base Ball Games.

Plans already are being laid for broadcasting of the world's baseball series. Preliminary reports have indicated that the audience of fans that will "attend" the contests by radio will be greater by many millions this year than ever before, and broadcasters are determined to make a corresponding advance in the quality of their service.

Inquiries made by the Radio Apparatus Section of the A. M. S. E. (Associated Manufacturers of Electrical Supplies) show that only "star reporters of the air" will be chosen to describe the banner sporting events of the year. Exceptional qualifications and a highly specialized technique, experience has shown, are required for the reporting of baseball games, and capable studio announcers have frequently found themselves at loss when confronted with the problems of the diamond.

"Few people realize the extent to which practice has developed the technique of describing a world's series baseball game to the radio audience," says one air reporter of national reputation. "The announcer must report the moves in the game the instant they occur, whereas the newspaper man writes his description after the play is completed."

CHILDREN AND PLAYGROUNDS

The advance of the playground movement has affected the welfare and happiness very largely this summer in thousands of communities. It has been a pretty sight to see the youngsters getting healthful exercise on these open spaces.

Yet it is proving true that to get the best results from the playgrounds, they need control from some older person who has acquired some skill in dealing with youth. Boys and girls lack organizing power if left to themselves. They are a kind of anarchical society that has a tendency to break up in quarrels.

You may provide a suitable playground for a neighborhood, but the kids may prefer to play ball in the streets in front of their homes. The fact that they thereby damage their neighbors' grass or shrubbery does not worry them in the least. Even if a policeman occasionally has to be summoned to straighten them out, it simply adds to the zest of their fun.

But if you can put a competent play leader in charge of a playground, who shall organize the boys and girls of certain ages into teams to play the sports that each type of youngster is capable of, their attitude is entirely changed. Where they had been indifferent before, their enthusiasm is aroused; they throw themselves into the activities of the place with all the energy of which they are capable. The demand of their energy having been met, they are ready to go home when the play period is over, and do not have to wander around the neighborhood with their gangs, rubbing fruit, perverting mischief, and picking up the bad habits of the street. If there was a well supervised playground operating in every neighborhood in the cities, there would not be much need for jails in this country.

PROMOTING A COUNTRY TOWN

The people who founded our towns did splendid work along certain standard lines, in creating town governments to control the basic activities of a municipality, in establishing churches and schools, etc. But certain other interests were neglected. The pioneers were so burdened with the work of creating new communities from the beginning, that they could not foresee the conditions existing at this time.

Today the pioneer work is done, and our towns have gone on to new stages of progress. Some are standing still. There is no one to take hold and do the active work necessary to help their communities keep up with the times.

Others are not fortunate. They have active people who are not interested in their communities. They see that other communities are doing. They can see the results of their own towns could be better, but they do not know how to do it.

But to accomplish these results, they know that organization is usually necessary. They are not content merely to talk about these things but they are willing to take hold and work for them. They form associations of the Chamber of Commerce and Board of Trade type. They are much simpler than similar organizations in larger places, but they are alike in this, that they appoint certain people to be leaders of the community for the time being, in the effort to achieve developments to a higher stage of civic progress and business success.

WONDERFUL TOUR

the Pacific and the other to the Atlantic.

Soon we passed through the Spiral Tunnels, one of the most notable engineering feats in the world. The train goes under the mountains in the shape of the figure eight, thus making two complete circles and reducing the grade considerably.

A little later we went through Connaught Tunnel, under Mt. MacDonald, the longest tunnel on the American continent. It is five miles long and requires fifteen minutes to go through it. At one place the mountain top was exactly one mile above us.

Late in the afternoon we reached the McIlwain Glacier which has only Banff and Lake Louise as rivals. After using black films at an alarmingly extravagant rate some of us followed a trail one and one-half miles up the mountains. Finally we left the magnificent pines and firs, which are taller than our Boone-co. hills, and came to within one-half mile of the snow three hundred feet deep. When all the others in the party decided that it was foolhardy to climb farther, very reluctantly I started back to the hotel to find myself very tired and hungry but late for dinner and glad that somebody had been wiser than I.

After dinner we had an informal program given by two expression teachers and two musicians of our party. Of course we were quite proud of our Burlington representative, Mattie won the approval and applause of all with "Mandy's wedding."

After another night under double blankets in our pullmans at the depot we started quietly down the western slope of the Selkirk, with just a little feeling of sadness deep down in our hearts, at leaving this enchanted wonderland.

But many other varied interests were still ahead of us. Saturday evening of the first week we reached Vancouver B. C. in time for a walk up into the city before bed time. We went to the dock and saw the Empress of Canada, one of the largest Pacific Ocean Liners and returned to our "comfortable berths."

Next morning after a sight-seeing trip through Vancouver and Stanley Park where we saw giant hemlocks, firs, and redwoods, some of which were 350 feet tall and 2,000 years old and the mountain which has leaves somewhat like our walnut and clusters of brilliant red berries we embarked upon the Princess Charlotte for Vancouver Island. The great steamer plowing its way upon the calm Bay of Georgia, followed closely by scores of sea-gulls clamoring for food as they sailed gracefully above the deep green waters, the light-house on the rocks, and the mountains in the distance shrouded in mist made a picture long to be remembered. After seeing Victoria, a veritable rose garden, we boarded the steamer for another delightful cruise across Juan de Fuca and arrived at Seattle late. The next evening after a trip through the business and residential districts, boulevards and parks, University of Washington and a seventeen mile drive along the shores of Lake Washington, we left for Portland. One interesting feature here was the great pile of fire-wood out in the street in front of every home. They burn wood almost entirely in this city. In the Forestry Building which was made of immense unwhewn Oregon logs for the Lewis and Clark Exposition were great fir planks nine feet wide, a part of a tree that was two feet in diameter when Columbus discovered America, and a single log which contains enough lumber to build a five room bungalow.

We always had splendid meals on the diners and in the hotels with even an occasional turkey dinner. A great deal of the time oil burning engines were used thus eliminating much of the dirt and black smoke which never on the train longer than two consecutive days without a stop. And by no means least of the pleasure was the association with the other sixty members of the cosmopolitan party. Our coach received the name of "The Gay Coach." Most of the young people and children happened to be in it. We had a Victoria candy three times a day with plenty of jokes and fun, interspersed. Our conductor, Carl W. Rich, a graduate of the Cincinnati Law School, spared neither time nor effort to make everybody comfortable and happy. Many friendships, likely to be enduring, were formed.

We spent two interesting days in San Francisco. We crossed San Francisco Bay on the largest ferry boat in the world. Twenty-one coaches can be crossed at one time. Golden Gate Park contains one thousand and thirteen acres, eighteen lakes, and every known kind of shrub and tree. The Eucalyptus tree which is tall and has long slender leaves and a light scaly trunk sheds its bark instead of its leaves. The Presidio, the largest military reservation in the U. S. within city limits makes San Francisco as well protected as Gibraltar. Our only regret was that we missed the sunset at the famous Golden Gate, due to the cool foggy weather of the winter season. The odors and sights of Chinatown were much as we read about—especially the odors. We saw much exquisite carving in the Joss House, or Chin Temple. The altar of the idols was made of teak wood covered with gold leaf. The Chinese make their most beautiful jewelry and carving by hand and at night.

One night our guide took us into the underground den of Prof. Mon Yuen, a musician of seventy-four years, who during the war walked down the streets of Chinatown with Mary Pickford while he played his instrument to arouse his countrymen to patriotism. He played for us on his Yankong, Somyum, Hicome and Yetcome a number of supposedly familiar American airs but only an occasional note or two were recognizable. This quaint oriental community of San Francisco consists of twelve square blocks and has a population of fifteen thousand.

On Saturday of the second week we found ourselves at the Big Trees. These are the giant redwoods, the sequoia sempervirens. No matter how nearly destroyed by fire or the ax they always send forth new sap and roots in and time are completely healed. After viewing for so long from the train windows the dry parched regions of northern California, a day spent among these silent reminders of the Great Creator, trees five thousand years old, three hundred and six feet high and thirty-two feet in diameter, and one of them, Gen. Fremont, with a hold in which thirty-nine of us stood at one time we were reminded with Joyce Kilmer that though

"Poems are written by fools like Only God can make a tree."

Late that afternoon we went to Santa Cruz where we received a royal welcome from the Woman's Club and the Chamber of Commerce. Free automobiles were furnished to take us driving and baskets of luxurious flowers were distributed among us.

Sunday morning we went to the Temple Baptist church in Los Angeles, the church of Bob Burdette. It seats thirty-six hundred people and has four galleries and a mezzanine floor besides the main auditorium. The minister was a Scotchman, a visitor from Massachusetts and preached a practical sermon on "The Inner Life of Moses." Other enjoyable features of the program were the music and the children's sermons which preceded the main talk.

Our four days' stay in this beautiful city were literally spinning over with interest. The Kentucky people, Dr. W. K. Chambers and family, Mr. and Mrs. Griffith, Mr. Roy Clutterbuck and family, Mr. Tom Tutman and Mr. and Mrs. Elvin Curry entertained the Burlington crowd at Santa Monica Pier with a lovely picnic. As we enjoyed almost every good thing to eat that can be imagined we watched the white breakers of the Pacific roll up on the shore at our feet.

On our drive through Hollywood we saw the homes of Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks, Charlie Chaplin and Bill Hart. Los Angeles is said to have the most varied architecture of any city in the world. Much of it is the severe, square, plain, flat Spanish type. The English with its graceful round arch was more attractive to me. It is said that a house is being every three minutes in this city. The avenues of palms and poplar trees with their lacy leaves and clusters of brilliant red blossoms are close rivals of the redwoods, in my opinion.

George and Edna Riley drove us through Pasadena. Among many other interesting and beautiful things we saw the Colorado St. Bridge which is often seen in the movies. One day we spent at Catalina Island which is the top of a mountain twenty-two miles long, projecting from the top of the ocean. Seven eighths of this island is owned by Mrs. Wrigley, the chewing gum man, whose home we saw there.

The day was calm and clear so the twenty-six mile drive was made without giving away the pleasure of getting seasick. After lunch we visited the Submarine Gardens. We went in a glass bottom boat. The glass was cridri a window glass one inch thick with a magnifying power from fifty to one hundred ten feet below the colorful life of the ocean bottom could be clearly seen. Blue, green, red, and purple fishes playing about the seaweed, the rock, the sponges, the shells and the large leafed plant, the kelp from which iodine is made, made a scene never to be forgotten.

Another day Mattie and I went with about forty other Cosmopolitans on a three hundred and fifty mile auto trip to San Diego and Tijuana, Mexico. We left early one morning and got back at 1:50 the next morning. But the drive through orange, lemon and English walnut groves, ranches of more than two hundred thousand acres and that most magnificent view of the blue sea with the white caps rolling upon the shore as we drove for over thirty miles right beside it, a thrilling ride in an air-plane over San Diego and the bay and that exciting thirty minutes spent in wild Tia Juana the city of saloons bull fights etc., made me forget that we only had three and one-half hours sleep that night.

After leaving Los Angeles we soon came to the Mojave Desert. This too with its miles and miles of drifted yellow sand, sparsely covered with sage brush and cactus was interesting to me in spite of the oppressive heat and the dryness of the atmosphere which prevents perspiration. It was a comparatively cool day on the desert, the temperature being not much over 100.

During the rest of our journey over the Santa Fe there were no dis-

ers. At meal time the train stopped thirty minutes at the Harvey Eating Houses which are situated at suitable intervals along the route. There was always a mad rush in the burning sun for the dining room. But the food was excellent.

We reached the Grand Canyon of Arizona on Friday of the third week. This "Titan of chasms" is two hundred miles long, fifteen miles wide and one mile deep. It is flanked on each side by "tier upon tier of huge architectural forms—veritable mountains carved by erosion from the solid rocks which lie exposed in great layers to the desert sun, and all are painted in colors of the rainbow. As we hiked a little distance around its rim our guide called out attention to some black spots far below us which on careful inspection appeared to be ants crawling on the ground. They were people on burros one mile beneath us following the Bright Angel Trail. Roosevelt said "The Grand Canyon of Arizona fills me with awe. It is beyond comparison, beyond description, absolutely unparalleled throughout the remains as it now is. Do nothing to mar its grandeur, sublimity, and loveliness. You cannot improve it. But what you can do is to keep it for your children, your children's children and all who come after you, as the one great sight which every American should see."

The Indians and their adobe villages through Arizona and New Mexico kept us busy with our kodaks the next day. The following day we arrived at Colorado Springs. The trip to Pikes Peak, fourteen thousand one hundred and nine feet high via the auto-highway which is from twenty to fifty feet wide and smooth as asphalt is just one thrill after another. The view is into limitless space and immeasurable depths. When we left the feet of the mountains the sun burned through our coats. Within two hours we were in one of the worst snow storms I ever saw. When we reached the summit each of us stood shivering in a big blanket over our coats waiting for a snapshot before going into the curio shop to the big log fire. Many of the Colorado mountains are of a smooth red formation or white marble. The timberline of Pikes Peak is at an elevation of eleven thousand eight hundred and eighty feet.

After luncheon at Glen Cove Inn we descended the mountain only to ascend another via Mt. Manitou Incline. The railway is one and one-fourth miles long, then rising to an elevation of one half mile above the city of Manitou. The magnificent view ever widens until ten thousand square miles of territory is visible to the awe-struck traveler.

After one day and night in Denver and a half day in St. Louis we reached Cincinnati at 9 p. m., Aug. 28th. As the "goodbyes" were said among the twenty-three remaining Cosmopolitans there were wet eyes spite of the fact that we were convinced as never before, that Kentucky is the only place to live.

A WOMAN GOVERNOR

The success of Mrs. Ferguson of Texas in winning the Democratic nomination for governor of that state, will cause jubilation among women who hope to see their sex gain a larger share of the actual governing power of the nation. They will feel that it means that before many years there will be a large number of women congressmen, and some may say that eventually there will be a woman president.

It takes a long time to learn the moves of the political game, as seen by the fact that the majority of successful politicians are men who have passed the meridian of life. Women are perhaps not sufficiently adept at it to win many of the honors.

"Ma" Ferguson, as they call her, may administer her office with such skill and power as to encourage many women in other states to try for the higher honors. A woman who discards the usual political methods but acts with sound sense and judgment, is bound to get a large following.

IS MARS INHABITED?

The recent observations of the planet Mars, which is much nearer the earth this year than usual, revive the idea in many minds that that sphere is tenanted by races and creatures not unlike those inhabiting the earth.

Even if so, it may never be possible to demonstrate that fact, as no one so far has been able to prove how communication could be established with such people if they exist. Yet on general principles, it does seem as if many other heavenly spheres other than our own must be inhabited. It seems incredible that the whole universe extending as it does to an infinite distance, could be created just for the inhabitants of this earth to look at.

Announcements have been received of the marriage of Chester N. Aylor and Miss Rose Ehrlock of Milwaukee, Wis., on August 2nd.

The groom is a former Boone-co. boy and a son of Mrs. Louise Aylor of Petersburg neighborhood.

The grooms many friends here extend best wishes to them for their future.

ROAD BUILDING

FOUR-WHEEL DRIVE AIDS ROAD SURFACE

When a man or a family gets used to eating pancakes for breakfast, it takes an extra effort and much advertising to make them believe that there is a breakfast food that is cheaper and better. It is the same with everything. Roads and automobiles are no exception.

We have our present style automobile driven by the two rear wheels. The two front wheels carry about the same load, many times there is more weight on the front wheels than the rear ones. And still the rear wheels are compelled to do the pulling for all four.

In traveling around the country on dirt or gravel roads you will notice the road surface is full of short little holes dug into the road by the pull of the wheels. Because the pull on the road surface with the present style drive is exactly equal to the pull on the tire surface, any dirt or gravel road will give way under such a pull or strain. This strain or pull on the road surface is entirely gone from the four-wheel drive. If we used horses to pull the auto instead of an engine, we would do away with all this pull by the wheels on the road surface.

Now, it was never supposed that rolling a road did it any harm. Neither would rolling an auto over the road do much harm. By having an auto over the road with all four wheels turning together we would be as near the rolling idea as possible. By turning all four wheels at the same time they simply act as rollers and do not dig into the road surface enough to pull a loose.

I claim that four-wheel drive will more than pay for the extra cost in saving on tires alone, writes J. B. Ketchum of Illinois, in Hoard's Dairyman. It would also save on gasoline; less horse power would be required. It is the big secret of good roads in this country.

Until we get the auto perfected and a successful four-wheel drive, we will never be able to maintain any road system at a reasonable cost.

Our present automobile engineers are just about the same as the man that got used to the pancakes.

Highways and Railroads Need Billion Each Year

At a time when the railroads of America need at least $1,000,000,000 a year for their development, the public highways of the country are receiving that amount and more, says the Providence Journal.

In 1923 the sum of $1,250,000,000 was expended upon road improvement, while the total capital expenditure on railroads, including equipment, was only $750,000,000.

This means that we are starving our railroads and at the same time providing new means for their competitors, the motor trucks, to flourish. The situation is serious, because the trucks are permitted to operate without paying anything like their fair share of the upkeep of the modern highway surfaces of which they take advantage and on which they put a heavy tax of wear and tear.

Trails to Be Marked in Cascade Forest Reserve

Five hundred miles of government trails in the Cascade national forest will have been marked with sign posts every mile when installation of 800 that have just been received at the local warehouse of this forest is completed. The posts will be installed in May, according to officials of the forest service.

The posts will be sent to the McKenzie bridge, Oakridge and West Boundary districts of the forest. On the top portion of the posts will be printed the name of the trail and beneath it an arrow pointing the direction of different objectives.

Drive Against Billboards

Massachusetts has begun a statewide drive against the billboards that line its highways. The state department of public works has been empowered to regulate billboard advertising by the process of licensing that industry. Violation of the new regulations is punishable by a fine of $100 for the first offense and $500 for the second.

Location of Best Towns

In traveling one cannot but note that the most prosperous towns are along the lines of good transportation, good roads and good transportation help in the first element of the farmer. "The ability to make a comfortable living from the land."

Roads to Circle Earth

More than 8,000 miles of roads of all types were completed with federal aid during the year which ended June 30, 1925, according to a government report. This, added to the mileage completed previously, brought the total for finished projects up to 26,536 miles, or more than enough to circle the earth. The projects under construction at the close of the year amounted to 14,772 miles, and were estimated at 93 per cent complete.

There's nothing worse than selling an old second-hand car—'cept, maybe, buyin' one.

It is officially estimated that the American wheat growers will receive from $100,000,000 to $200,000,000 more for their wheat this year than they received for last year's crop, which will mean a general improvement in financial conditions in wheat growing regions.

POLITICAL CAMPAIGNS are expensive undertakings, the national committees of the three political parties are now finding out. Each of them is hard up, and especially the Progressives who have appealed to the American Federation of Labor for assistance in garnering contributions from trade unions throughout the country. The Republicans and Democrats, of course, are not nearly so broke, but they will have to do some close figuring to complete the campaign without incurring deficits.

PROHIBITION COMMISSIONER Haynes stirred up a hornets nest when he charged that the failure of Washington judges to impose sufficiently heavy fines was chiefly responsible for the difficulty encountered in enforcing the dry law in the capital. The Federal judges to whom Haynes referred were quick to take offense, declaring that the Commissioner was talking through his hat. It is a fact, however, that drunkenness in Washington is increasing, though disagreement exists among officials as to whom is to blame for conditions.

SECRETARY OF STATE Hughes smiles broadly and makes no reply to the assertion of the Russian Soviet Government that he is responsible for the civil war in China. American officials look upon this and similar charges emanating from Moscow as part of the propaganda of the Soviet against the United States and its commercial interests in the Far East. In this connection too, there is some apprehension among officials here over the growing power of Russia in the Orient, particularly in China, where Russian officers have been used in training some of the troops now engaged in the revolution at Shanghai.

WASHINGTON PREPARED a magnificent reception for Lieutenant Lowell Smith and Lieutenant Erik Nelson, the American round-the-world fliers, but called it off at the request of the Secretary of War, who desired that the Magellans of the air, on the last leg of their circumnavigation of the globe, should be permitted to rest as much as possible instead of being subjected to the rigors of a public celebration. The fliers will stop in Washington, Dayton, Chicago and Cheyenne on their way to Seattle, where the flight will end.

IT IS UNFORTUNATE, in view of the splendid record that these fliers have made in encircling the globe that their feat must come under the scrutiny of a Congressional investigation. Of course no one blames the fliers. They did what they were told to do and did it well. But the investigation which undoubtedly will break in Congress, will be for the purpose of determining why the flight was ordered by the War Department, what was expected to be accomplished, and what was accomplished. There are some who feel that the flight proved nothing except that flying around the world was a highly impractical proposition. Naval officials point out that an ordinary little destroyer can do it quicker and cheaper than an airplane.

WITH INDICATIONS that each of the Presidential candidates will receive a fair share of the popular vote, two months hence, it is becoming increasingly probable that there will be a deadlock in the Electoral College. What will happen after that no one may with certainty conjecture. Some experts have figured out that the United States for at least 24 hours and maybe longer, beginning at midnight on March 3, 1925, may be without a President. It is lucky for the country that it does not have the habits of some of its Latin-American neighbors, who, in such a contingency would find the Government seized by some military chief.

The Pennsylvania Railroad has established nine motor truck routes in New Jersey and around New York covering about 370 miles of traffic, in lieu of local freight trains. These truck routes give quicker service and warehouse delivery at lower cost to patrons and better profit to the railroad company.

KENTUCKY FRUIT GROWERS PROSPER

A large patch crop plus good prices and prospects of an equally large apple crop, combine to make this a successful year for Kentucky fruit growers, according to W. W. Magill, fruit specialist of the College of Agriculture service, who has just returned from a tour of demonstration orchards in 12 counties. Thousands of bushels of good Kentucky peaches found ready markets this year at remunerative prices, and growers generally are in a happy mood, according to sentiment expressed at the meetings. Carl Johnson, a grower in Breckinridge county, marketed 8,000 bushels of peaches, and several other men reported that they grew 3,000 bushels each. Scores of growers found peaches a profitable crop this year. Prices ranged from $1.50 to $4 a bushel. A standard price for the regular crop of Elbertas was $2 at the orchards, but late pickings realized much more. The roadside market has become a popular method of selling fruit, both to consumers and producers.

The largest peach orchard in Kentucky is that owned by Mr. Johnson, whose 100 acres of 4-year-old trees this year produced 6,000 bushels. He established his peach orchard four years ago on an old worn-out farm, which, as Mr. Magill expressed it, had the life taken out of it 75 years ago. Mr. Johnson purchased the land for a comparatively small price and turned it into a highly profitable orchard farm by fertilization with nitrates, combined with frequent cultivation.

Mr. Magill reports that western Kentucky will harvest a large apple crop, such varieties as Delicious, Winesap, Stayman and Grimes Golden yielding especially well. The meetings were held at demonstration farms in McCracken, Ballard, Hopkins, Webster, Henderson, Union, Boone, Kenton, Boyle, Jefferson, Breckinridge and Ohio counties. A total of more than 1,200 farmers attended.

ACTIVE CAMPAIGN

IN SIXTH DISTRICT TO BE LED BY ORIE S. WARE, OF COVINGTON

Hon. Orie S. Ware, Commonwealth Attorney of Kenton county, has been named by State Chairman Samuel M. Wilson as Democratic Campaign Chairman of the Sixth District composed of Kenton, Campbell, Boone, Grant, Pendleton, Carroll, Gallatin and Trimble.

AFTER TWENTY YEARS

Twenty-one years ago the Wright brothers installed a sixteen-horse power engine and twin-screw propellers in their glider and in 1913 made a flight of twelve seconds on the sand hills of North Carolina. A little more than twenty years later American Army men went flying around the world, following an itinerary that took them over temperate seas, desert jungles and the arctic circle.

The United States gave the airplane to mankind; it holds practically all the records for speed and endurance, and now it will enjoy the supreme triumph of being first round the world in the air.

The young men who have dared and completed this undertaking have made a place in history that will rank second to none since the discovery of the American continent.

SUNDAY TRIPS.

Many of the country people are using Sunday as the day for automobile trips, and they get much pleasure and refreshment therefrom. At the same time it seems a mistake to omit church services for such pleasures. The work of the churches is necessary for the preservation of the moral standards of the nation. These standards must suffer some decline, if people are riding around in their cars all day while congregations dwindle down nearly to nothing.

The day spent entirely in an automobile is not the most restful one. Better go to church first, and the quiet of the sanctuary and the inspiring thoughts presented will make your afternoon excursion all the more delightful and helpful if you wish to take it.

JUDGMENT

OF $3,000 AWARDED W. O. ROUSE, OF WALTON, IN SUIT OF TWO YEARS STANDING.

Judge Sidney Gaines held court at Walton, last Friday, and heard the case of W. O. Rouse of Walton, against the Eastern Verkamp Co. of Cincinnati. Mr. Rouse was represented by Atty. Jno. L. Vest and Eastern Verkamp by Atty. S. W. Tolin, of Burlington, and Mathews & Mathews, of Cincinnati. Circuit Clerk R. E. Berkshire, took the records to Walton for the trial, which records included about 200 pages of depositions taken in the case.

The plaintiff W. O. Rouse alleged that he was a salesman for defendant company from 1912 to July, 1922, that during said time defendant had made certain changes in figuring his commissions, with the charges he made against the company amounted to about $4,800.

The defense to these allegations was that the changes in figures were justified, and in addition claimed they had paid Mr. Rouse several sums of money, which they filed in the form of a counter-claim.

The judgment of the court awarded to Mr. Rouse the sum of $3,000 having given the defendant company credit for some of the counter-claims against him.

Atty. Jno. L. Vest exercised unceasing diligence for his client in preparing this case, as he was required to go through about 200,000 orders of the company, taking from them over 1,000 in which changes in favor of defendant company were alleged to have been made.

Senator S. W. Tolin put forth every effort for his client, and asserted his intention of appealing from the judgment after the trial of the case.

SCHOOL OUTFITS.

Many families are now buying outfits of clothing, shoes, etc., for their children to start in with at the fall term of school. People take more pride than ever before in fitting their children out nicely for their year of school work. The wear and tear of summer and the necessity of providing warmer clothing call for a large expenditure in families having children of school age.

The merchants of Boone county are splendidly equipped to meet this demand, with big assortments of neat and attractive clothing that will have the solid wear necessary to stand the strain of kid life. A poorly made suit or pair of shoes will go to pieces soon when worn by an active boy. But the honest fabrics and well made goods that can be found in any of our stores will cut this necessary expense to the minimum. You can go a great deal farther and fare much worse.

TRUDGING BACK.

The children are trudging back to school again. They don't want to go one bit. And why should they? Nothing to do but sit between four walls every day to try to learn some things that they don't want to know. And the great, happy outdoors beckoning them out to enjoy the sunshine and fresh air.

But soon they will be reconciled. After a few days, under the careful guidance of a thoughtful teacher, they will begin to take interest, and the battle will be won.

A great responsibility rests upon the teacher to get them back on the right track after vacation ends. And an equally great responsibility rests upon the parents to back up the teacher and support them in every attempt to develop good boys and girls, who will become good American citizens, in the public schools.

Good Will Trip.

PLANNED THRU NORTHERN KENTUCKY BY COVINGTON INDUSTRIAL CLUB

Henry W. Jenisch, President, and Carl B. Wachs, Executive Secretary, of the Covington Industrial Club, were in our office on Friday of last week outlining and perfecting plans for a neighborly get-together-trip through Boone and Grant counties on Thursday, Sept. 25th, when the new concrete road from Williams town to Covington will be opened. They plan to visit Williamstown, Dry Ridge, Walton, Richmond, Devon and Florence, with a side trip to Burlington. There will be a procession of decorated autos with souvenirs and advertising matter, this procession to be led by a military band.

The object of this trip is to promote a business friendship between Covington and the smaller towns of Northern Kentucky.

We would call the attention of Industrial Club's officials and members to an unsolicited editorial carried in our columns in our issue of June 12th, last, advocating a closer relationship between Boone county and Covington, also boasting the hotel project, which would, as we suggested, do much toward causing folks to "stop in" instead of "passing thru" the "Dixie Gateway."

WHAT IS EDUCATION?

The President of Yale University delivered an address in which he said: "If you ask me what education is I must answer that I do not know. If the university president does not know, how can the common school teacher be supposed to know what this business is?"

The many-sidedness of these institutions have largely depleted the main tent. Their extreme specialism and multiplied courses have scattered education and split the minds of students into a hundred competitive and distracting fragments.

In a recent newspaper discussion of the subject the writer advocated establishing in the universities a chair of barbering, claiming that this is a profession, and another called for a chair for training circus performers, and it must be admitted that some of them would not need to add much to their equipment and faculty to turn out skilled acrobats and tight rope walkers and even clowns.

The idea of education is broadening out into such thinness and vagueness that it is becoming increasingly difficult to define and find it.

It is easier to state what education is not. It is not one-sided specialism, whether it be on the intellectual, or the athletic, or the social, or even the religious side. It is not a preparation for making money. It is not a materialistic interpretation of the world that generates an atmosphere in which all the higher ideals and interests of life are starved and strangled to death. It is no one-sided process that produces lop-sided men. Education is a discipline that develops faculties, physical, mental, social, moral and spiritual, into a full-orbed personality, the highest attainment of man, and the greatest thing on earth.

TWO WEEKS MEETING

REV. SAM ALLEN RETURNING TO BURLINGTON

Beginning next Monday night the Rev. Sam Allen will begin a protracted meeting of two weeks duration at the Methodist church.

Rev. Allen is an evangelist in the Christian church and has just finished a meeting at Cynthiana. Folks in this community have never forgotten the meeting that Bro. Allen held here about two years ago, when he and his wife made many friends here.

W. N. HIND AT WALTON

Hon. W. N. Hind, of Covington, Master Commissioner of the Kenton Circuit Court and Democratic Committeeman for the Sixth District, was visiting friends in Walton last Friday.

Chairman Hind says the Democratic machinery is working smoothly and prospects are favorable for the ticket composed of Davis, Bryan, Stanley and Rouse to carry the district.

Covington Democrats are expecting an everflow crowd when Senator Stanley addresses them at the Rialto Theatre on the evening of September 24th.

Jack Frost paid this part of the country a visit one or two mornings last week—the earliest in many years. The first was quite noticeably everywhere, but it did not do any material damage. A later frost would ruin a great many acres of the "weed" and late corn.

If the people of Burlington could hear some of the complimentary things that have been said about our community by visitors who have seen it this summer, it would give them a great deal of satisfaction.

LOCAL HAPPENINGS

James Blythe, of Glenferr, Cal., is visiting his brother, Geo. Blythe and family. Forty-one years ago "Jim" left Burlington for the west and settled in Nebraska, where he lived for twelve years. In 1875 he moved from there to California where he has made his home ever since, and this is his second visit back to the town of his birth. During all these years time has made many changes in the "Old Kentucky Home"—nearly all of the old citizens and a great number of his former playmates having moved away or passed over the silent river, but those remaining were delighted to grasp his hand once more, and glad to see him looking so well. About a month ago death robbed him of his wife, to whom he was married in 1886, in Nebraska. He expects to be here a month and will visit his brother H. W. Blythe at Lawrenceburg, Ind., and his sister, Mrs. F. P. Walton, of Covington.

James Monroe was arrested by Deputy Sheriff Percival at Walton, last Thursday evening after he had run his automobile into the machine being driven by Geo. Burris. The accident happened about one mile north of Walton on the Dixie Highway. After making the arrest the officer took Monroe before Magistrate Redinger who fixed his bond at $500 for his appearance before County Judge Riddell, before whom the trial was held Friday morning and the defendant was fined $100, and he also agreed to pay for the damages done to the machine of Geo. Burris. The charge was for driving an auto while intoxicated. Monroe said that he had attended a picnic at Cody's on the Dixie Highway near Erlanger and had gotten hold of something to drink that had "fits in it."

In little town like those situated in most of the counties in old Kentucky should be found the spirit of brotherly love, a kind regard for the feelings of each other, a good word for those who are trying to carry on the business of the town and a strict adherence to the truth by all. No tattling, no telling tales, no spirit of enmity, no jealousy. Why should we be envious, why jealous of the progress of our fellow townsmen? Soon the final trial will be needed that calls the soul before its Maker. Let's leave this world with ill toward none.

Jealousy and enmity denote ignorance and narrowness of mind. Real men and noble women live above those petty feelings.

The Boone county team, coached by County Agent R. J. Matson, won fourth prize in the Livestock Judging Contest at the State Fair, last Wednesday, in the individual contest LaVern Sullivan, of the Boone county team tied for third honors with Rufus Robertson, of McLean county. Forty-seven teams, representing as many counties, competed in the contest. The team from Boone county won first prize and was named the champion boys' and girls' stock judging team of the state. The first prize was won by the Boone county team two years ago.

Dr. I. E. Carlyle was a business visitor in Burlington last Thursday. The doctor expects to leave us near the end of his month for Sedalia, Indiana, which is about 50 miles from Indianapolis. He has been a Boone county practitioner for 15 years having been located at Rabbit Hash.

Among other reasons, Dr. Carlyle names the condition of the roads as the cause of his leaving us. Moral Vote for the Bond Issue and keep the Doctors with us.

Horse trading is yet carried on in some of the remote localities but as a vocation it is nothing like as general as it was in former years before the automobile came along to all but supplanting the horse as a transportation adjunct. What horse traders there are nowadays are nothing like the old time characters that formerly were recognized as an institution.

D. B. Wallace, President of the Equitable Bank & Trust Co., and Dr. R. E. Ryle, both of Walton, were in town on Thursday of last week. The small of printers ink brought Mr. Wallace into our office for his customary call.

Mr. O. P. Phlips, of near Lawrenceburg, Ind., was inhaling Burlington atmosphere again Thursday of last week. Mr. Phlips has many friends on earth who are always glad to see him.

TO MY FRIENDS & CUSTOMERS:

After sojourning in Michigan and Canada, I shall be at home again on and after Saturday, Sept. 13th, and will be pleased to do any repairing on my line of trade promptly and at reasonable prices, combined with first-class workmanship.

TOBACCO MEETING

Delegates from Boone, Kenton, Campbell and Grant counties held a meeting last Monday at Williams-town, in Grant county, where they re-elected Mr. Dawson Chambers, of Independence, as director of the pool from this district.

C. O. Hempling, of Taylorsport, Jos. W. Cleek of Beaver, Ben H. Berkshire, of Petersburg and W. M. Whitson, of Verona, were the delegates from Boone, having been elected last Saturday.

The question of a "cut-out" for 1925 was openly discussed at this meeting, but no action was taken, inasmuch as the delegates were instructed on the question. It was decided, however, that the time is now ripe for action on this subject, if any be taken, accordingly a meeting was called for all Boone county tobacco growers—both poolers and non-poolers—to be held at Burlington next Saturday afternoon at one o'clock p. m., for the purpose of taking action on this important problem. Practically every farmer, with whom we have talked favors a "cut-out" for 1925, as they claim that what they now have on hand in the way of growing and cured crops will bring a very low price if manufacturers know that another crop will be pitched next year. Their slogan seems to be "cut-out next year, and get double price for what we have already raised." It seems like pretty good logic.

ARE THEY REALLY GOING SOMEWHERE?

The Parent-Teachers Association held their regular meeting at the Baptist church last Monday evening when several new members were enrolled including Prof. and Mrs. Hook, who gave some interesting talks on parent-teachers work as they had seen it done in other places. Their talks seemed to inject a shot of "pep" into all those present, and from the open discussion of plans for the betterment of the school that followed, it would really seem that the association is going somewhere.

Means were also discussed for the raising of funds for incidental expenses in the way of equipment, as well as for permanent improvement. Upon the resignation of the chairman, the present vice-chairman, C. B. Gaines was elected to fill the vacancy. The roll of members now numbers about 45, with numbers increasing at every meeting.

The next regular meeting will be held at the school house one week from next Monday night, Sept. 29th, at 7:00 p. m.

Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Ramley, of Ottawa, Kansas, are visiting Mrs. Ramley's sister, Mrs. S. W. Hall and other relatives in Boone county. Mrs. Ramley, (nee Rice) was a former Burlington citizen, but for the last twenty-five or thirty years has made her home in Kansas. It has been ten years or more since she visited her Old Kentucky Home.

Miss Sallie Rogers and Mrs. Martha Roberts, of Covington, returned home Monday from Waynesville, O., where they attended a three days session of the Old School Baptist Association.

Atty. S. W. Tolin attended court at Rising Sun, Indiana, Monday and Tuesday. He is representing Ada McMullen, who is contesting the will of Isabelle Henderson.

On account of the protracted meeting at the Baptist church, there were no services at the Methodist church, last Sunday night.

Mrs. Martha Roberts and son, Clifton, of Covington, are guests of W. R. Rogers and sisters, Misses Sallie and Elizabeth.

Mr. and Mrs. B. C. Taylor and family of Price Hill, were Sunday guests of N. W. Carpenter and wife.

C. L. Gaines and wife have had as their guest for a week Mrs. Angie McCauley, of Harrison, Ohio.

Richard Marshall and wife, of Salem Ridge, Ind., were guests of relatives in Boone county, Sunday.

R. S. Cowen, who has been quite sick for several days, is improving.

WEEDS.

Just this morning I was walking
Up the pathway to my door,
When I saw along its borders
Weeds I had not spied before.

Spanish weeds? yes, I knew them;
Although now they're soft and green,
In a few weeks, on their branches
Dark, tough needles may be seen.

So, I stopped and plucked those weeds up Root and branch; for well I knew Little children would be passing
On that pathway, where they grew.

As I pulled those weeds, I reasoned—
O, that I might thus destroy
All the weeds of sin and evil
In the path of every boy.

Spanish needles are a bother,
For to garments they cling tight,
But the weeds of sin and evil—
They, both soul and body blight.

Shall we older ones sit idle,
Close our eyes and fold our oars,
While the weeds of sin are growing
Even to our very doors?

We must now put forth the effort,
For there's danger in delay
It's our duty—"lets go to it"
And uproot those weeds today.

There will be a meeting of Boone county tobacco growers at the court house in Burlington next Saturday afternoon, Sept. 20, 1 p. m. Don't miss this meeting.

SCHOOL NOTES.

The Union High School opened Monday, Sept. 8th for the school year 1924-25 with an enrollment of eighty-five. The teachers in charge of the different departments are Mr. W. B. Elder Principal; Miss Norma Rachel Asst., Mr. O. W. Purdy Intermediate and Mrs. Warren Utz Primary. Members of the Board of Trustees present at the opening exercises were Calvin Cress, Joseph Weaver, Leslie Barlow and J. W. Huey.

Classes organized on Tuesday chose their officers and are planning to do some excellent work.

The basket ball teams have organized and began practice. Some grading has been done on the court and the teams are enthusiastically preparing for their first game. Plans are being made to do some grading on other parts of the grounds in order to have a better base ball diamond. A foot ball team may be organized here later.

A Parent-Teachers Association was organized Friday afternoon and quite a number of the parents were in attendance. The first regular meeting of this organization will be held on Friday evening, Sept. 19th. Parents, teachers and pupils are uniting in an effort to make this school year most successful.

"WHAT ARE GROWING PAINS IN CHILDREN?"

Recently the writer was in church and heard a sermon on this subject. The minister, ignorant of the real cause, said, "It is necessary for people in gaining spiritual growth to suffer the same way that many children do in gaining their physical growth." He went on to explain that the tendons of muscles attached to the bones pulled during our growth in such a way as to produce great pain, and he believed this was necessary. He said his little boy was having this experience.

In this enlightened age, the Child Health Department would like to give him a new view point, because we know that physical growing pains come from some focus of infection within the body possibly an abscessed tooth or a diseased tonsil, and that often that pain is the forerunner of acute rheumatism or endocarditis, which is inflammation of the heart. Soon after the removal of the focus of infection—the diseased tonsil or abscessed tooth, all growing pains disappear. He might have likened much of the mental and spiritual suffering or unhappiness that human beings undergo to the presence of evil in our lives, a focus of sin, which if removed brings to the individual peace and happiness. No terrifying or painful operation is necessary for good results to be obtained. The little child can be taught that by grasping and holding tight to the loving Christ, just as he would to his dear mother, all forms of unhappiness will vanish without mental or spiritual suffering. In such dazzling light sin cannot exist. No life at any age filled with the love of the Master has room for sin.

We hope all watchful parents will quickly bring to the attention of their physician the child with growing pains; these little bodies must be kept perfect like the image in which they are made.

MEETING CLOSED

The Baptist revival closed last Sunday night with a crowded house at the last service. Although the meeting did not result in a great number of new additions to the church, at the same time every one knows that such results are not always indicative of a successful meeting.

Regular attendants heard a splendid appeal at each service, which fact alone characterizes it as a successful revival. Many thought that Rev. Adams' last sermon on "The Church," was the best delivered during the series.

Rev. and Mrs. Adams both leave very soon to resume their work at the Southern Baptist Seminary in Louisville, where Burlington people wish them every success.

STATE FAIR RESULTS.

County Agent R. J. Matson and his coterie of exhibitors returned from the State Fair at Louisville last Sunday, each very well satisfied with his showing and pronouncing the fair itself a great success.

The Junior Live Stock Judging team composed of Paul Hafer, Hebron; Ava Lou Hudson, Walton; La Verne Sullivan, Union, and Grant Maddox, Florence, won fourth prize, while LaVerne Sullivan tied for second place with Rufus Robertson of McLean county in the individual contest. This entitles Sullivan to a trip to Chicago on the Kentucky team, besides winning a $20.00 prize.

The most remarkable feature of the stock judging contest was the showing made by Ava Lou Hudson in the individual contest, when she finished twelfth in a field of 243, all boys.

Several agricultural colleges were after her through County Agt., Matson.

In the Pig Club show Miss Elizabeth Tanner, received first on Chesterwhite gilts, first on male pig, and second on pig club record book. Miss Tanner is a daughter of Chester Tanner.

C. F. Kinsey in the Jersey exhibit, received seventh on his three year old bull, but would have done much better had the animal not been run over by a race horse as he was entering the ring. The same individual pulled down first last year. Mr. Kinsey got further Jersey premiums as follows: One year old bull fourth; bull calf fifth; 4-year old cow third; 2-year old cow fourth; 2-year old heifer fifth; yearling heifer fifth; heifer calf eighth; exhibitors herd fourth; breeders young herd fifth.

Robert Youell and Chester Tanner received Chesterwhite premiums as follows: Two-year old boar fourth; senior yearling boar 2nd; Junior yearling boar 4th and 5th; Junior boar pig 4th; sow 2 years or over, 2nd; herd bred by exhibitor 4th.

In the fruit display Boone was in the class which received fourth. F. H. Rouse first on Seckel pears; first on Siberian crab; Sterling Rouse 1st on yellow transparent; second on Hale peaches; first on Wickson plums; Histon Hempling first on Wealthy apples; second on any other red apple; O. C. Hafer second on Siberian crab.

Miss Eva Jettors of Florence, got second on sewing record book in competition with fifty others.

A. M. Acra received several firsts, and seconds on his Pekin and Rouen ducks.

The Boone county exhibitors in Jersey cattle and Chesterwhite horses were in competition against herds from all over the United States, from Florida to Maine, Washington and California. About $265 in premiums were returned to Boone county. This is a splendid showing, and our county should be proud of those who put forth the efforts necessary to attain the results.

DIXIE HIGHWAY

NOTE SUITS TO BE TRIED IN THE COURT OF APPEALS

At a special hearing in Walton last Saturday, Judge Sidney Gaines sustained a demurrer to the answer of each of the defendants in suits filed against them by B. B. Hume, as Sheriff of Boone county.

The Sheriff filed separate suits against John Rensler, J. W. Northcutt, W. L. Gaines, Geo. Burris, V. P. Kerns, Fat Code and J. M. Arnold in the Boone Circuit Court last November on notes against each of the above persons for the amounts pledged by each of them towards the building of the Dixie Highway from Walton to Florence.

The amounts ranged from $100 to $500 in each case.

O. M. Rogers attorney for the defendants, filed an answer in each case asserting that when these men made their donations it was with the understanding that the new road would be constructed upon the old right of way, or in other words, where the present road is now located; and that they would not have done so had they known that it would be built where the State is now locating it, west of the railroad.

The ruling of this court therefore means that the defendants must pay the notes or appeal their cases, which, it is understood, they intend to do.

CONSTANCE.

A reception was held at 8 o'clock at the home of the bride for her many relatives and friends. They received many beautiful and useful presents.

Some repair work being done on the line put this office out of commission several hours Monday, but power with which to operate the machinery.

OUTLINE PRINCIPLES OF HIGHWAY SAFETY

The Bureau of Public Roads of the United States Department of Agriculture believes that consideration of highway safety is of the greatest importance in view of the great increase in highway traffic and highway accidents. A careful study of existing conditions has led to the following statement of basic principles:

1. The development of safe roads by elimination of all known dangers in so far as such elimination is possible within physical and economic limitations.

2. Warning of uneliminated dangers by means of easily recognized signs and other devices of standardized form, uniformly placed with respect to the danger.

3. The development of safe vehicles by perfection of running parts and adoption of safety devices.

4. Diligence and care in the licensing of drivers of motor vehicles, to eliminate the incompetent, careless, and irresponsible driver.

5. The development of simple, uniform, and effectual traffic regulations and the education of the whole public to a complete acquaintance with them.

6. The rigid enforcement of traffic regulations.

There is little doubt that a solution of the problem worked out on the basis of these principles would have the effect of reducing the dangers of the open road to a minimum. The Bureau especially urges the necessity of uniformity in action by the various States in working out the means of applying these principles.

It believes that the work of a committee of the American Association of State Highway Officials, on the problem will be an important factor to this end.

Engineers of the bureau state that the problem can best be solved by the selection of the best methods and practices from the various States rather than the working out of new methods and practices.

NEW STOCK LAW

PROHIBITS CATTLE FROM RUNNING AT LARGE IN TOWNS IN KENTUCKY

A new law passed by the 1924 General Assembly and approved by Gov. Field, prohibits the running of stock at large in small towns, an age-old circumstance. The bill was introduced by Representative Thos. J. Knight, of Sharpshurg.

The act empowers the board of trustees of towns of the sixth class to prohibit horses, cattle, hogs and other animals from running at large on the streets and alleys.

It enables these towns to pass ordinances and resolutions establishing and maintaining pounds, to make proper regulations for impounding and keeping stock when found within the town limits, "regardless of whether or not the owners of said stock reside within said towns, and fixing fees of officers for impounding, trial and release of same, as well as penalties for the violation of said ordinance."

Sixth class towns are those having less than 1,000 population.

BASE BALL.

Burlington "almost" won a game last Saturday when they met Hebron in the local 1st in a well played and exciting eleven-inning contest which Hebron won by the close score of 9 to 7.

McGuire pitched a great game for Burlington, allowing but one hit until the ninth, when the home team had the visitors shut out 7-0. Then a few errors, a few hits and the score was tied, Hebron winning in the 11th. Hogan was knocked out of the box early in the fight, when six runs were scored off his delivery, being succeeded by York, who allowed but one run during the balance of the game. These two teams will meet again next Saturday at Hebron.

Burlington and Petersburg started a five-game series at Bellevue last Saturday, Bellevue winning by the score of 13-1.

The Petersburg boys were unable to get their entire team together, but nevertheless had nine men on the field and filled their engagement. These two teams when properly aligned are pretty evenly matched, and the promoters promise better games the balance of the series. They play again at Bellevue next Saturday.

POULTRY MEETING

Next Friday afternoon, Sept. 19, a poultry meeting will be held at the farm of Goebel Stephenson, about four miles from Florence on the Dixie Highway.

Mr. J. R. Smyth, of Lexington, Goebel Stephenson and Roy C. Lutes will each make talks on various subjects interesting to poultry breeders. Admission—free. Poultry Association are urged to attend the meeting as it will surely repay you for coming.

Smart men make good use of their experience; fools never do.

Among those who believe in liberalism are the tramps who are looking for hand-outs.

The politicians will shop deep interest in the farmer at least until after election is over.

The battle cries of the parties are now being sounded, but some people insist on bottle cries.

People should not extol the virtues of home so loudly that they stay there on election and primary days.

Kentucky farmers spent $25,000,000 last year for stock feed which could have been produced on their own land.

The men look very imposing in the stylish clothes they are buying, but the girls would prefer them to look proposing.

Bad debts are said to be fewer than last year, but this is not because the bad debtors are unwilling to be trusted.

While the politicians are trying to jump on board the band wagon, the people are looking for someone who sticks to the saw-horse.

Many of the kids are enough interested in Sunday School work so they are willing to attend the annual picnic and eat ice cream.

The man who says advertising does not pay because he once spent $2.08 on it and got no results, will not probably become a captain of industry.

The short-hand reporters have been meeting at Washington. They will have to work fast to take down all the bunk being issued in this campaign.

And not merely are many voters going on trips to the mountains and forests, but it is claimed that many will take to the woods on November Fourth.

The boys who are puncturing tires by throwing tacks in the road, would not look with approval on anyone who should strew the same in their swimming hole.

Democracy does not believe that any public property should be transferred to private interests without the Government receiving due compensation therefor.

About the only way to secure safety for some automobile drivers is for their friends to lock them up over the week-end so they can't get behind a steering wheel.

Davis and Democracy stand for such things as mean most for the farmers and laborers, and at the same time are opposed to any plan which will in any way injure legitimate business.

Forty years of planning, scientific production and cooperative marketing have elevated the Danes from a depressed state of peasant agriculture to a position of prosperity and contentment.

Motorists would better be careful not to run over any cows, calves, chickens, dogs, or cats, for if they do they are likely to find those animals were high blooded stock and very valuable.

Hereafter, no person can enter the polling booth in New York State who has not completed at least the sixth grade of an elementary school course or passed an examination given by those to whom the State entrusts the teaching of its children and adults.

Guard the rights of man against graft and greed as represented by a high tariff, because such legislation causes the wealth of the nation to assemble in the hands of the few, and the past great nations have gone to destruction because too much of the wealth was in the hands of the few.

Only six weeks from Tuesday next and the election for president and vice-president takes place, and not an organization of any kind in the Democratic party in the county. What has become of the leaders of the Democratic party? The young men are willing to sacrifice themselves for office, but when it comes to keeping up the Democratic organization in the county, it is to hell with the party.

NO GREAT DAMAGE FROM WILD FIRE

Wild fire has not so far this year been a material factor in reducing tobacco yields, especially in the Burley tobacco section of the state, according to Dr. W. D. Valleau, plant pathologist at the state college of agriculture here. While there have been many reports of wild fire, yet that disease probably is not present in more than 2 per cent of the fields. Many other diseases have been mistaken for wild fire, Dr. Valleau said. Principally among these has been a mosaic burning, which occurs about half way up the leaf, making a dead area probably the size of a man's hand. This burning does not spread like wild fire, and commonly is found on not more than two or three leaves on a plant.

Rurter black fire is present in many fields, but up to date has not spread much, at least in the Burley section of the State. Where wild fire is present, most growers readily recognize it, according to Dr. Valleau. Wild fire has been disappearing gradually since 1920. The reason for less trouble from this disease is not known, unless it is because growers tend to avoid selecting seed from fields in which wild fire is known to be present.

A WONDERFUL HANDCLASP

It was a notable moment in the history of the times, when the French premier and the German chancellor were induced to shake hands at the close of the London conference on reparations, and that there seemed to be a real friendship behind it. The disputes of these two nations have kept the world in a turmoil for hundreds of years. They finally brought about a world disaster causing infinite pain, suffering, and loss to the American people. It will be a wonderful thing if these quarreling countries can make a real effort for better relations.

The French have taken the position that the Germans would pay only what they were forced to pay by military force. While the German people are guilty of maintaining power and following the commands of a wicked, conscienceless, and brutal government, it is unwise to assume in advance that they would not follow the lead of the present more democratic authority if the same were encouraged to maintain its existence.

THE PRINCE OF WALES

The Prince of Wales has come over here for a jolly good time. He acts like a regular fellow—and he must be, else he couldn't fall off a horse so many times and go back for more punishment as if he liked it.

He relishes outdoor sports—takes an active part in them—dances and enjoys good, healthful exercise just like a typical American boy. In fact, it seems a queer twist of fate, that such as he should be cast for the role of wearing regal robes. They won't be a bit becoming.

Though like every other youngster, his every movement as he came to America was chronicled in the daily press. When he danced with an American maiden, she was so proud that she was willing to write about it for the newspapers.

She gave her life history, not hesitating to mention the fact that her clothes were in rags when the Prince asked her for a fox trot. A modern Cinderella, she was, and not ashamed of it.

And our bashful American girls are not forgetting that the Prince is still single. Wouldn't it be a terrible blow if the young heir to the crown should find one to his liking here? Lots of boys like him do every day.

MULTIPLYING SOUNDS BY RADIO

Signor Marconi speaking the other day in Rome, promised that before long speech will be heard by radio from a given station all over the world at once, a promise that may well thrill the 3,000,000 American homes already equipped with radio apparatus, and add impetus to the onward rush of an industry that is reported to have grown from sales amounting to a trivial $2,000,000, 000 in 1920, to 112,000,000 in 1923, and by estimate to $350,000,000 in 1924. Assuming 24,000,000 as the approximate number of homes in the United States, a statistician writing in Radio News says that nearly 12,000,000 of them have automobiles, 9,000,000 have phonographs, and 3,000,000 have radio sets. Evidently a home without either of these possessions is hardly to be considered a home at all; it is merely such a place as human beings ate and slept in during the 19th century.

MEN OF VISION

Men who can see the value of an improvement to the community before it is completed are the kind of men who are needed for leadership. All too often, those who are of a conservative frame of mind control the sentiment by reason of their positions and development is retarded.

They have never taken a chance in their business and they don't believe in anything in which the element of chance enters. They lack vision. The man who draws back always comes around after the improvement is completed and agrees that it is all that was ever said for it.

They are to be admired for the position they take. They can't be blamed, perhaps, because they have a type of mind that can't visualize things. Being for it when it is done is some thing.

Fashion takes anything or nothing and makes women like it.

THE CONSTITUTION

The week of September 14th is to be known as Constitution week, and churches, schools and lodges are requested to provide exercises appropriate to the occasion.

The setting aside of days and weeks for special causes has been overdone and very properly there is a growing impatience with these celebrations; there are too many of them. But Constitution week will meet with general approval.

The Constitution is the fundamental law of the land; it is the statement of the great principles that underlie all our laws, traditions and history. In the true sense it is the palladium of our rights and privileges. Without it, all American history becomes unintelligible.

When promulgated it was an epochmaking document, and its appearance announced the opening of a new era. It is the embodiment of liberty, justice and fraternity.

Getting Out the Women Voters

Miss Belle Sherwin, president of the National League of Women voters, holding a silver loving cup which is to be awarded by the National League to the state league showing the greatest percentage of increase in the vote of 1924 over 1920.

The $75,000,000 Bond Issue law to be submitted to the voters in November. WHAT IT PROVIDES.

In order to correct an impression that has gained ground to the effect that a vote for the bond issue would be voting for increased taxes, we quote some of the provisions of the bill which clearly shows that there is to be no increase in taxes.

Bonds are to be sold as follows:
Within the last six months of the year 1925, the Commissioner of the Sinking Fund shall sell in the manner hereinafter provided bonds of the face value of $20,900,000.00; in the last six months of the year 1926
bonds of the face value of $14,700, 000.00; in the last six months of the year 1927 bonds of the face value of $13,200,000.00; in the last six months of the year 1928 bonds of the face value of $13,200,000.00; and in the last six months of the year 1929 bonds of the face value of $13,000,000.00, provided, however, that only so many bonds shall be sold during any of the above periods as shall be necessary to accomplish the purposes of this act in the opinion of the Commissioners of the Sinking Fund, based upon the certificates of the institutions, departments and other arms of the Government entitled to the proceeds of said bonds, and provided further, that in case the full amount of bonds authorized to be sold during any of the periods mentioned above shall not have been sold, said unsold bonds may be included in the amounts to be sold in any succeeding period in the discretion of said Commissioners of the Sinking Fund as above, and if any bonds remain unsold after December 31, 1929, they may be sold by said Commissioners at such times thereafter as they may see fit.

The bonds shall be paid as follows:

July 1st 1926—$3,400,000.
July 1st 1927—$2,900,000.
July 1st 1928—$2,400,000.
July 1st 1929—$1,800,000.
July 1st 1930—$1,300,000.
July 1st 1931—$1,350,000.
July 1st 1932—$1,400,000.
July 1st 1933—$1,500,000.
July 1st 1934—$1,550,000.
July 1st 1935—$1,600,000.
July 1st 1936—$1,700,000.
July 1st 1937—$1,800,000.
July 1st 1938—$1,900,000.
July 1st 1939—$2,000,000.
July 1st 1940—$2,050,000.
July 1st 1941—$2,200,000.
July 1st 1942—$2,300,000.
July 1st 1943—$2,400,000.
July 1st 1944—$2,500,000.
July 1st 1945—$2,700,000.
July 1st 1946—$2,750,000.
July 1st 1947—$2,850,000.
July 1st 1948—$2,950,000.
July 1st 1949—$3,050,000.
July 1st 1950—$3,350,000.
July 1st 1951—$3,600,000.
July 1st 1952—$3,700,000.
July 1st 1953—$3,950,000.
July 1st 1954—$4,100,000.
July 1st 1955—$3,550,000.

In order to provide for the payment of the principal of all of said bonds at their maturities and the interest thereon annually as same shall accrue, there shall be levied and collected in each of the 30 years from July 1 1925 to June 30, 1955, the following taxes:

(a) License taxes on motor vehicles and chauffeurs not less than those imposed by chapter 90 of the Acts of the General Assembly of 1920.

(b) A excise tax of three cents upon each gallon of gasoline sold at retail in Kentucky.

(c) The aggregate amount of the direct tax yielded by the three and forty-five hundredths thirtyths direct ad valorem tax of the revenue act of 1924 for the construction, reconstruction, maintenance and repair of roads and highways, and for the payment of the interest on and for the creation of a sinking fund for the liquidation of State bonds issued or roads and other purposes.

There are hereby appropriated to the payment of the principal and interest of said bonds, to be set aside as received and held inviolably for that purpose, all funds received during the 30 years aforesaid from the following sources:

(a) From the license taxes imposed by chapter 90 of the Acts of the General Assembly of 1920 and by all acts amendatory or in lieu thereof, by which the revenue to be derived from such licenses, is not decreased.

(b) From the excise tax of three cents upon each gallon of gasoline sold in Kentucky.

(c) The aggregate amount of the direct tax yielded by the three and forty-five hundredths thirtyths direct ad valorem tax of the revenue act of 1924 for the construction, reconstruction, maintenance and repair of roads and highways, and for the payment of the interest on and for the creation of a sinking fund for the liquidation of State bonds issued for roads and other purposes.

It will be seen that in view of the above that the man who rides over the roads pays the bill by the taxes on gasoline and auto license taxes, which is the fair and just way. Therefore VOTE FOR THE BONDS.

SERVING YOUTH.

It is a common saying that "You'll must be served." It carries the suggestion that in "being served," youth be permitted to violate laws, both of nature and man.

But can't youth be served sanely?
The many cases of boys driving recklessly late at night and causing the death of innocent people is not so great because of taking the life of another, but because of the great underlying principle that is involved.

There are too many indifferent, simple and irresponsible people, both old and young, driving motor-cars on the public highways. The question that confronts every community—one that is pressing for solution and will have to be solved someday—is how to stop it?

It does no particular good to send the offenders to the penitentiary.
Neither does it any good to assess a heavy fine.

The simple, direct remedy is not to permit them to drive a motor car.
When public sentiment reaches such a state that such a law can be enforced, it will be enacted.

Such a penalty might seem hard, but it is not. The motor car as a plaything belongs to a class of superfluous and unnecessary things; nice to have, but not essential to life and happiness.

Are we to continue allowing our pleasures to become death-dealing instruments to snuff out the lives of innocent persons?

It scarcely seems consistent with American ideals and standards. Motormanism would not be so terrible were it confined to the patient, but it spreads and endangers the lives of innocent people.

Will a means of prevention be found by refusing the demerit driver the privilege of driving a motor car?

That's the logical solution.

KENTUCKY CROP REPORT.

Crop estimates indicating good crops of oats, potatoes, buckwheat, hay, apples and peaches; and reduced crops of corn, tobacco, barley, and sorghum for sirup, as compared to 1923, are the features of the Sept. 1 crop estimates issued by the Louisville office of the United States Department of Agriculture. These forecast estimates are based on conditions as of Sept. 1. Tobacco in Kentucky shows a decrease from 1923, both because of decreased acreage this year, particularly in the dark districts, and because of poor condition in practically all districts, the probable production of all types in

CARD OF THANKS

We take this means of expressing our sincere thanks and gratitude to the many friends, neighbors and relatives who were so kind and helpful during the death of our dear husband and father Vernon French. We also wish to thank Scott Chambers for his kind services.

Heartbroken Wife and Babies.

In last week's issue we announced that Rev. Paul G. Gillespie and Rev. C. C. Tanner were returned to their respective churches, but in making this announcement we were in error.

Rev. Gillespie will have Petersburg, Burlington and East Bend this year, with Rev. Tanner as Junior preacher. This separates Florence from Burlington which has not been the case in several years.

Rev. Gillespie will reside in Burlington while on his new circuit, and will be a welcome and valued addition to our citizenship. He is now a member of the faculty of the Florence High School, but with added territory to cover, he is in doubt about his ability to stay on the teaching force.

FROM PRODUCER TO CONSUMER

A friend who has been away on an automobile tour notes that during his journey he was in a summer resort where he inquired of a boarding house keeper if they were able to get fresh fruits.

The landlady replied that there were great quantities of berries growing on wild tracts of land not far from her place, yet it was very difficult to get them picked. About the only way was for her and her servants to drive out to these lands and pick the berries themselves. There did not seem to be anyone else whom they could get to do it, as everyone seemed to be at work. The boys and girls who formerly used to go out to such tracts and pick berries, all seemed to be busy. Many of them had taken summer jobs where they were earning money to put themselves through colleges and schools.

This friend remarked that as he continued his trip, he passed through a city only about 60 miles from the place where these wild fruits were so plentiful. He noticed that the same kind of berries that were going to waste up on these hills, were placed on sale for around 40 cents for a basket containing a quart or less.

It is noted nearly every fall that great quantities of fruits and vegetables are going to waste in the rural districts, while in the near by cities their price continues high. The gap between the producer and the consumer is a wide one, and it seems to grow deeper as time goes on.

High freight rates are a considerable item in producing this discrepancy. But the principal element in it is ne wages that have to be paid to unskilled labor, and the inefficiency of a great deal of work that is done. The gap between producer and consumer can not be bridged until a great many people who now work in a dawdling and inefficient way, shall be persuaded to take hold of their tasks with more life and spirit.

Burlington, Ky.,
September 15, 1924.

Dear Editors:

Through your kindness we desire to say a few words to a great host of friends whom we can reach directly in this way. We are to move to Louisville in a few days to begin our last session in the Seminary. It would only be a sure evidence of inexcusable lack of appreciation for what you have done for us if we should leave without saying this word.

Most of you think of the Christian Ministry in its true light--the light left us by its founder, Jesus Christ. (Read Matthew 10) Our work is and will always be (if we are faithful and true to our task) an unceasing struggle for the well being of ourselves and of others. Such are the limitations and responsibilities imposed upon any Christian minister. We are always aware of these facts and there is no rebellion in our hearts against them.

But we hasten to say a word about our Burlington people. It is impossible to live here and speak of "sacrifices." Rather we speak of "privileges and blessings." Since we came here we have been the glad recipients of a constant stream of loving care. Our pantry has never been empty. Most of the days our problem has been, What can we do with all these material gifts? "Here a little and there a little" from an unceasing number of friends and for several months amounts to a great deal. We know that we shall never live where people are more thoughtful than you have been, and we are prepared in mind to discover those far less thoughtful.

Then just recently, at the close of our Revival, without a single person being solicited we received twice the amount which would ordinarily be given with that method. You have reduced our financial burdens almost to the vanishing point. To each and all of you our hearts are and will ever be full of gratitude for your care for us in this regard.

When we come to the primary work of the Ministry, the enlarging of people's spiritual conviction and Christian attainments, words fail us. Here is the test of any Minister and of any people. And here is where we have found you most faithful. Here is where we are under greatest obligation to you. Where the Gospel is preached (Acts 20) and lived, and in among hearts that sacrifice, there are no powers that can stay the advancement of the work of Christ. For your fellowship in the Gospel, we are most grateful indeed (Philippians 1:3-4).

There is only one thing for the Christian people of Burlington (of any name) to do--go straight ahead in the path of duty each strengthening the other, all together strengthening Him who knows no defeat. We regret that we shall have to labor with you from a distance rather than right among you. Yet we look forward to each Sunday's visit back to the people we love most.

With grateful appreciation and every good wish, we are,

Your Friends,
MR. AND MRS. W. W. ADAMS

WORTH NOTING

By BUCK CAMPBELL

The devil is a good dancer, a card shark, and has a tongue that is honey-coated with scandal.

Political platforms are constructed mostly of hot air; all right to go in on but too frail to stand on.

Men die long before their time because they try to crowd too much into their experiences. The faster you run a machine the sooner it will give out.

Many a good man has been allowed to go into oblivion and find a resting place in the scrap pile because of his modesty in pushing himself forward.

If the old man who induces a girl to marry him for his money had always shown as poor judgment in his investments, he wouldn't have accumulated enough wealth to have lured the girl to have married him.

There was only one fool killer provided for, and when he looked about and saw the magnitude of his job he gave up in despair, and that is why some folks are permitted to live. If all the fools were dead there would be a lot of familiar faces missing.

"Papal Bull"

The edicts of the popes are known as papal "bulls." "Bull" is a term which comes from the word "bullet," which means a missive, having on one side the images of St. Peter and St. Paul and on the other the name of the pope who uses it. Since the year 1878 papal bulls have been written in ordinary human characters on parchment, stamped with the bull.

ROAD BONDS FOR NORTH CAROLINA

Failure Of Pay-As-You-Go Plan To Provide Highway System Necessitated Bond Issue, Advocate Declares.

Citizens of North Carolina are well satisfied with the bond issue method of financing the construction of their state highway system, and most of them firmly believe they are getting the full worth of their money in road building.

This information has just been received by John W. Newman of New Orleans, former commissioner of agriculture and at present organizing opponents of the $75,000,000 bond issue, from Miss Hattie Berry, secretary of the North Carolina Good Roads Association.

Miss Berry tells of the failure of the patchwork pay-as-you-go plan of highway building, describes the advantages of the statewide road system to North Carolina farmers, cites the financial and road-building operations, and winds up by urging Mr. Newman to support the bond issue plan for Kentucky, promising him he will not regret it.

Replying to Mr. Newman's inquiry, Miss Berry said in part:

Old Plan Wasteful.
 "I am secretary of the North Carolina Good Roads Association and the one who led the drive for the establishment of a state highway system. For many years I had collected statistics and published reports (in connection with the State Geological and Economic Survey) on road work in the State as carried on by various political subdivisions—the county, township, road district, etc.

"Through these years I was impressed with the enormous amount of money that was being spent, the absolute waste of most of it, and the futility of trying to accomplish a great economic task through the political maneuvering of hundreds of boards of county commissioners, road commissioners, trustees, ad infinitum.

"It seemed to me that if we were going to have a road system which the automobilist was becoming more and more insistent on, the state would have to act as a unit. With this idea as a background we cast about for some means to bring this about.

No Property Tax Levy.
 "So we concluded to issue bonds for construction and use the income from automobile license, plus a tax on gasoline, to take care of the annual expense; that is, maintain the system (which costs around $3,000,000 per year), overhead of the state commission $250,000, interest on sinking fund

SELF-CONTROL AND THE SAVING HABIT

One of the hardest things in the world to master is self-control. Every man who has ever saved anything will tell you this. The hard work is the self-denial necessary to make a start. Once you have got your start, the rest is easy. The first hundred dollars, the first thousand dollars, some very hard. After that it is plain sailing.

But if you fail to show will power in your youth, if you fail now to make necessary effort to gain independence, later on you will find, when it is too late, that life is long and rather dreary when you combine old age with poverty, a tired mind with dependence and the necessity of obeying some one else's orders.

Remember that thousands of men miss their chance in life BECAUSE THEY HAVE NOTHING SAVED UP. They are running a constant race with bills, with obligations.

They dare not stop; they are like men on a treadmill. If they were but a little ahead, they could seize the chance that they see and take one of the many short cuts to fortune.

But each day's work must be done to meet that day's expense, and the offered chance is not taken.

Get yourself free by making yourself independent and gaining control of your own time.

Your money is the only thing that can keep you independent. It alone can save you from the worst fever of modern life—poverty, dependence, the humiliation of trying in old age and under adverse conditions to make up for the folly of youth.

Deny yourself now. Make the effort of will that is necessary and save yourself suffering and humiliation in the future.

PICTURE OF A TRUE FRIEND.

Men love dogs because dogs alone make a friendship need that human beings generally haven't the faith, the sympathy, and the gentleness to supply.

One philosopher has said that a friend is one who incessantly pays us the compliment of expecting great things of us. Another has defined a friend as one who knows our faults and loves us still. A man's dog does them all one better; he never asks

A SCHOOL SEVENTY-FIVE YEARS OLD

The only school in Kentucky founded and maintained solely for the purpose of training ten age orphan girls, unable otherwise to secure their self-support, is the Kentucky Female Orphan School located at Midway, Kentucky. The school is small, accommodating but one hundred and forty, while annually turning away about one hundred and fifty for want of room and endowment. The beginning was made seventy-five years ago with sixteen girls in the student body. Dr. Lewis L. Pinkerton first caught the vision of the practical wisdom of James Ware Parish helped materialize the vision. By charter the directing board is composed of members of the Christian church. But when it comes to the student body, the foundation is as broad as humanity. While most of the pupils are members of the Christian church, students of all faiths and of no faith at all are welcome. About four thousand young women have been students at this school.

The board members have been men and women of vision. They have selected as teachers real educators attracted by the high character of service rendered rather than by the modest salary.

EVERY DAY TASKS

It has been the custom of President Coolidge, ever since he came to Washington as vice-president, to take hold and help with the work on his father's farm while he spent his vacations there. Thereby he sets a good example to the men of the nation.

Many men who have gained a little advance in station, would feel beneath their dignity to put on a pair of overalls and go out to do some garden work on their home places. They think it looks better to have hired helpers to do such tasks. A false point of view. The bigger the man is, the more he needs to keep in touch with the tasks of common folks. The more he handles a pitchfork or a hoe, the more he will understand and sympathize with the ideas of the every day man.

It is an essential feature of a government that the people must be able to hold the officers to responsibility for their public acts, and it is therefore impossible for the present administration to escape going down in history for its acts of misconduct in office. It is, however, asking the voters to elect men who will do the

THE ENLARGED OPPORTUNITY.

Many country town people fail to realize the good chance that exists for development of their home community. They read about the crowd of people drifting from the country towns into the big cities, and think that to small town is permanently handicapped.

There are however certain forces that are working strongly to take people out of the cities very soon, to the country towns. People in a community like Burlington ought to realize the power of these forces, and take advantage of the new situations that are developing.

One of the most powerful of these forces is the tendency of many manufacturers to start factory plants in small towns. They are doing business under difficult conditions in the cities. The cost of living is high for their help, hence it is an expensive place in which to produce goods. Frequently the labor unions are very dictatorial, which makes it difficult and often very costly to do business. The help frequently have to live in poor tenements in undesirable neighborhoods, which tends to make them unhappy and discontented, under which conditions it is hard to get a good amount of production at a reasonable cost.

Many concerns, to avoid such conditions, are looking around in the country districts to find favorable locations for factories or branches thereof. They will take the country young people and train them to do their work, and build up permanent industries in places where the work can be done in a healthful way and where the cost of living will be low.

Huge cars are being advancing, and they contain advanced very fast in their automobiles when you meet them on the road.

Some of these reckless drivers of motor cars are not qualified to operate anything but a motor car. They

JOHN J. PERSHING is a private citizen now after a life time of service in the American Army and with hardly enough income to live decently for the rest of his days. Movements are on foot to honor the commander of the American world war forces, either with a special military commission or with some high civilian appointment that will permit him to be at liberty and at the same time continue to render some service to the nation's armed forces in an advisory capacity. The nationwide defense mobilization last Friday was the climax of Pershing's career and now he wants to rest for a while and then do some more writing on his memories.

REPUBLICANS generally are gay and carefree since the Maine election resulted in such a sweeping victory for the GOP gubernatorial candidate, especially as the Democratic National Chairman, twenty-four hours before the polls opened, predicted flatly that the Democrats would elect a Governor in Maine. The Democrats now declare that the Maine vote indicated nothing, the Republicans say it means victory in November, and the Progressives maintain it was just a straight out Ku Klux Klan fight without any other issues being involved.

BOTH DEMOCRATS and Republicans are wondering what will be the result of the endorsement of LaFollette by the St. Louis Society of America, claiming to speak for 6,000,000 German-American voters. One of the things that brought them into the LaFollette camp was the Wisconsin Senator's outspoken opposition to the World War, but they are also interested in his promise of an effort, if he is elected, to revise the Versailles Treaty. The Germans see some hope in that.

THE BIGGEST BONFIRE that this part of the country has ever seen will be set off in the Potomac River near Edgewater, Va., in a few days. Up in smoke will go more than 200 wooden ships which the Government built during the war at a cost of a quarter of a billion dollars. The ships have been sold to a salvage company for $260,000, the company's plan being to burn up and sell the metal fittings for junk. The Shipping Board has tried to sell the ships to American marine interests, but no one wanted them.

SECRETARY OF LABOR Davis is winning a reputation as the "best dressed man in the Cabinet," even excelling Secretary of State Hughes according to those who saw him at Bolling Field when the Army world Fliers arrives in Washington. Acting Secretary of the Navy, Roosevelt was noted, said one correspondent, "wearing a pair of dirty white pants," while President Coolidge's most remarkable item of wearing apparel was an ancient pair of rubbers with red soles.

THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS has thrown a monkey wrench into the Coolidge-Hughes plan for another Washington disarmament conference. The Labor Prime Minister of Great Britain and the Socialist Premier of France have served notice that the next arms conference must be held in Europe and the United States can stay out or come in as we please. It is an embarrassing situation just now with the campaign in full swing in the country, as President Coolidge promised a conference in the Republican platform and had hoped to call it before the election. A compromise may be reached by having a Washington conference to discuss naval armament and a Paris or a London conference to reduce land armies, which is regarded as essentially a European problem.

TOBACCO GROWERS

BOONE COUNTY MEMBERS OF BURLEY POOL FAVOR CUT-OUT OF 1925 CROP

About one hundred Boone county tobacco growers, members of the Burley Pool, met at the Court House in Burlington last Saturday afternoon to discuss and take some action in regard to the cut-out of the 1925 crop.

The meeting was called to order by C. C. Sleet, of Beaver Lick, who in a short talk explained the object of the meeting. On motion and second C. C. Sleet was selected as permanent chairman and F. A. Hall as Secretary.

Representatives from the different precincts of the county expressed their opinion that a majority of the members of the pool and quite a number of non-poolers in their precincts favored a cut-out.

On motion and second the proposition was put before the house and every man in the house, excepting one, voted to cut-out the 1925 crop. E. H. Berkshire, of Petersburg, Earl Smith, of Burlington, Van Hill, of Idlewild, C. C. Sleet and Jos. W. Cleek, of Beaver Lick, were selected as delegates to the Convention which meets at Lexington, Saturday, Sept. 27th, and were instructed to vote for a cut-out.

In a very interesting talk Rev. J. M. Baker, pastor of the Methodist churches at Big Bone and Hughes Chapel, explained the advantages of a cut-out of next year's crop, and what a great benefit the pool has been to the growers.

A telephone message from Verona precinct, which was not represented in the meeting, stated that Verona precinct was unanimously in favor of a cut-out.

Farmers of the burley tobacco growing section need to open their eyes to present conditions and when they do they will plant fewer acres in tobacco the next two years.

This is the third year of the burley pool and apparently everything is working along nicely, two more years are yet to run before we know the exact outcome of this term.

Tobacco growers know that there is a large amount of tobacco in the pool, and that unsold, on which is borrowed money and on which interest is paid with little or no prospect of a sale in sight. They know that a part of the 1922 crop is yet unsold. They know that the large tobacco companies are going to buy tobacco outside of the pool if they can and it seems that they have done this.

No sensible tobacco grower wishes to tie up his labor for years in one project, so it is about time to shift the gear—cut out the crop for one year and put a few acres in some other crop and grow fewer acres of tobacco. We think this would be the wise thing to do.

WALKING CLUBS

The Heart of America Walking Club, recently formed in Kansas City, is trying to make itself a nation wide organization. The dues are nothing and the only obligation is that the members each walk two miles a day in the open air. This is a fine organization.

It may be claimed that some of the people who are trying to promote the walking habit are dealers or makers of shoes, who would be glad to see shoe leather worn out. But even if so, they are performing a most useful service. When shoe leather is worn in good honest pedestrianism, it means that people are healthier and that they keep younger. There is danger in these days that many people will expect to be carried everywhere they go, and many of them need to recover use of their own legs.

DEPUTY SHERIFF UNDER CARE OF PHYSICIAN

Deputy Sheriff L. T. Utz has been under the doctors care for the past week, having had a recurrence of a former kidney trouble. He has been ordered to do no driving for a few days at least.

The Sheriff's force is rather depleted with the high sheriff suffering from pneumonia in a Cincinnati hospital and the chief deputy under the care of a physician.

Deputies Percival and Snyder would soon be on the job however in case of a serious outbreak, and, in such cases, would expect a prompt violation of the doctor's order by Deputy Utz. At last accounts Mr. Hume was improving steadily.

Hubert Rouse, U. S. Mail carrier from Burlington to Erlanger, was incapacitated for several days last week, due to an attack of lumbago. He was in bed last Saturday morning looking very unenlivened. During his illness, his duties were cared for by his son Franklin.

There is much tobacco in the patch that will never mature, and it looks as though only a half crop will be housed in Boone county. There is much of that has been cut green in cold weather.

Breaking Up Camp

"GET-TO-GETHER"

HOW MEMBERS OF THE GOOD-WILL-GET-TO-GETHER EXCURSION CAN HELP CITIZENS OF OUR COUNTY TO TRULY "GET-TO-GETHER"

As this is being written they are making elaborate preparations, by the time it is read they will have come and gone.

We have reference to the Northern Kentucky Good Roads Association and the Covington Industrial and Business Men's Club, who are coming out to see us, say "Howdy Folks" and get better acquainted or in other words a "Good Will-Get-Together" excursion.

With this excursion we are heartily in accord, we are in sympathy with the purpose of the trip, namely to get the citizens of our county, and those of our neighbors, to trade in Covington in preference to Cincinnati, which is only fair and neighborly. We endorse the Hotel project in Covington, in order that, if it is brought about, we can patronize our neighbors in this respect, and we refer to our past utterances on these subjects.

Now, in all fairness, we wish to express our views in these connections from another angle.

Our citizens are principally farmers. They must drive to Covington to practice these neighborly principles, which we both endorse. They are in the mud, and have been so for many years over a century. By means of an exorbitant land tax they have tried to build roads over which they might come to you, and, as you well know, they have failed. And now in the year 1924 they, at last see the dawn of a new era in bond issue, which provides that you, each gallon of gas that you use. We are willing to pay the 3 cents to come to you, why aren't you willing to pay it to come to us?

You may answer, "we are already paying it"—yes, but if the next Legislature removes the tax, who will pay the bill? Why, the farmer.

The Bond Issue Bill clinches the gasoline tax for thirty years, we are for it and it will carry, if you folks will be neighborly, practice a little reciprocity, and truly "Get-together"

TELEPHONE MEETING

PLANS DISCUSSED FOR THE ORGANIZATION OF COUNTY TELEPHONE SYSTEM

At a meeting in the court house last Tuesday evening of telephone users from different parts of the county, plans were discussed for the organization of a county telephone system, which would in turn take over the other different companies of the county, thus forming one good, strong company capable of rendering the best of service at a minimum cost.

There were about thirty men present, and while they were not in a position to speak for the companies whose lines they patronize, yet they were firm in their belief that a majority of the patrons of the different companies would support the enterprise.

A committee composed of J. M. Lassing, N. E. Riddell and B. H. Riley was elected to draw up a subscription paper, copies of which will be turned over to the different companies to be circulated among their patrons by duly constituted solicitors. These forms will contain a brief outline of the general plan of the company, and will be presented by a solicitor to every telephone user in the county.

There are at present operating in Boone county five telephone companies, namely: Waterloo, Rabbit Hash, Union, Hebron and the Consolidated, and these five companies have about 1800 patrons. At many places in the county there are three lines running parallel, which makes three times as many poles, three times as much wire, three times as many brackets and insulators, and three times as much maintenance expense as is necessary. And in addition some of the service is very unsatisfactory. All of it is unsatisfactory to the extent that is, if one desired to have direct connection with all his friends and associates in the county, he would be compelled to maintain five telephone boxes. Plainly that is very bad business, so think it over Mr. Telephone User and be ready for your solicitor when he comes to you.

There are three very different companies have managed to exist under these conditions, one company would certainly be successful.

There is no excuse for excuses. They weaken character and after a while make a person a walking apology instead of a man who has a right to hold up his head and have his voice count in council.

THREE CHANGES MADE IN BURLEY BOARD

Joseph E. Robinson, of Lancaster, Vernon Leer, of Richmond, and Martin Light, of McKinneysburg Elected New Directors.

Only three changes were made in the membership of the board of directors of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Cooperative Association by the district conventions which were held in the 22 districts of the Burley territory and in the majority of them resolutions endorsing the conduct of the Association by President and General Manager James C. Stone and his associates were adopted.

President Stone's home county of Fayette, in its convention not only endorsed him unanimously for director and for re-election as president, but declared its approval of the social service department, headed by Miss Elsiner, and requested Mr. Stone as director for the county, to vote to continue that department of the Association's activities as "the best known method of educating the members, their wives and children, to the benefits of cooperation." Coons was chairman and O. O. Carpenter Secretary of the Fayette convention.

The new board of directors is composed of the following members: First district, James C. Stone, of Lexington; second, Ed. Burke, of Paris; third, John E. Brown of Shelbyville; fourth, James N. Kehoe, of Maysville; fifth, C. O. Braves, of Georgetown; sixth, Geo. Roth, of Manchester, Ohio R. 1; seventh, W. Oliver, of Vevay, Ind.; eighth, Bedford Macklin of Forks of Elkhorn; ninth, Perry B. Gaines, of Carrollton; tenth, H. K. Bourne of New Castle; eleventh, Dawson C. Chambers of Walton R. 1; twelfth, Martin Light, of McKinneysburg; thirteenth, Chambers Perry, of Mt. Olive; fourteenth, Clark B. Patterson, of Mt. Sterling; fifteenth, J. M. Souley, of Flemingsburg; sixteenth, Joseph E. Robinson, of Lancaster; seventeenth, Bush W. Allen of Harrodsburg; eighteenth, Judge I. H. Thurman of Springfield; nineteenth, Vernon Leer, of Richmond; twentieth, Payton R. McKinnin of Bloomfield; twenty-first, J. D. Craddock, of Munfordsville; twenty-second, Hon. Elliott Northcott, of Glenwood, W. Va.

Directors at large for Kentucky, Ohio and Indiana will be chosen by the board of directors at their first meeting, which will be October 1, when the new board also will elect the officers of the Association for the ensuing year.

COUNTY ORGANIZATION. FOR BOND ISSUE CAMPAIGN COMPLETED

The county committee for the $75,000,000 bond issue campaign composed of B. C. Gaines, of Idlewild neighborhood, John L. Vest of Walton, and A. B. Renaker, of Burlington, met last Thursday night in the law office of John L. Vest at Walton, and perfected plans for the launching of a vigorous campaign during the next six weeks of time intervening from now until election day on the 4th of November.

Precinct chairmen were appointed and a speakers bureau, composed of J. M. Lassing, N. E. Riddell and B. H. Riley, was also chosen.

Mr. Renaker, chairman of the committee, issued a call for all precinct organizers to meet at Burlington on Thursday night September 25th, when, he says that plans will be completed for public speaking to be held in each precinct. The committee does not intend to let a stone unturned in their efforts to carry Boone county for what they believe to be a just cause.

GOVERNOR FIELDS

TO SPEAK IN BOONE COUNTY.

Plans are being laid for the reception of the Hon. Wm. J. Fields in Burlington on Monday, October 6th, at 7:00 p. m.

State Chairman H. L. Gourley has advised the county bond issue committee that he will arrange the Governor's itinerary so that he can come here from Williamstown, where he speaks at one o'clock, and address the voters of Boone county at Burlington in the interest of the bond issue.

An effort is also being made to have Gov. Fields stop at Walton for an address at 4:00 p. m. Whether or not this plan is successful, will be announced later, but he will positively speak at Burlington on Monday, October 6th at 7:00 p. m. Be sure to hear what he has to say on this important question.

Don't sit behind the steering wheel waiting for business to turn up. Crank up. Get in the game. Use the columns of our new newspaper as an additional salesman and turn that stock over before it gets rusty.

BACK HOME AGAIN

When Wilbur and Orville Wright made their flight in a heavier than air machine at Kitty Hawk, N. C., twenty-one years ago, they did not visualize the scene that was enacted in Boston when four intrepid American aviators received the first plaudits from their countrymen for circling the globe in an airplane.

Two decades is but a short time, yet the first airplane flight was less than a minute, and now traveling 23,000 miles in less than five months over portions of the earth where transportation is impossible is a proved fact.

The possibilities of the next two decades stagger the imagination. What the future holds for aviation few will be willing to hazard a prediction.

But America will lead in its development, because here it was born and here it has its greatest strides.

The natural ingenuity and resourcefulness of the sons of the new world will find expression in this enviable field of endeavor where fearlessness and the will to conquer the unconquerable count the most.

We all try to be somebody and only a few of us succeed.

WHAT DO YOU KNOW.

Faith is one of the greatest forces in life.

All theories are eventually proved false—from Columbus knocking out the scientific theory that the earth was flat, to Einstein proving that the parallel lines DO meet if indefinitely prolonged. The history of science is a history of exploded convictions—shattered faiths.

The controversy between religion and science, about the theory of evolution, simmers down to the problem of how much one is willing to accept "on faith."

The scientists claim that religion is based on faith rather than religion facts but overlook the fact that about 99 per cent of their knowledge is also based on faith.

Yet we all like the scientist, and about 95 per cent of what we "know" is accepted on faith alone. This also applies to our politics to our religious creeds and to our home life. We are what we are because—well, because our fathers or forefathers were—and someone told them.

Because of faith we unite in marriage. About half of us get along without appealing to the courts for separation—and half of that half would like to, or ought to.

The business of the world is transacted on faith. It may not be "good" business or "sound" business, but it has been a matter of education and custom.

Faith in our government makes it what it is. When that faith is shaken or destroyed laws will not avail. Faith is one of the mightiest forces in life.

TWO TYPES OF TEACHING

As America's educational machine starts up again, one reflects that the back of the education counts more than the book knowledge.

A teacher may simply be a good instructor who is trying to see that the students complete faithfully the requirements of the school. The majority of educators are of that type. It is a big job to work faithfully along those lines, and get the work done, since so many pupils are unwilling or indifferent.

There are some people in this profession, however, who are not content even with that excellent purpose. Their hearts yearn to see their young people accept the highest ideals. They try to interpret their lessons so that their pupils shall learn to admire all that is fine and noble and despise that which is mean and degrading. A teacher who gets results along that line is beyond price and performs a service which no amount of money, even if the salary equalled that given the most successful business executive, could fully compensate.

STATE ROAD CONTRACT.

TO BE LET OCTOBER 20

State Highway Engineer Ross was in Burlington Friday and, in a conversation with County Judge J. E. Riddell and B. H. Riley, County Attorney, informed them that the contract for the reconstruction of the Burlington and Florence pike would be let on October 20th, the specifications, according to Mr. Ross, call for a 16-foot surface treated road with a 3-foot shoulder. Of course this contract will not start until next spring, but the state will begin at once repairing and reinforcing this thoroughfare for the winter travel.

Reducing wages doesn't necessarily cut expenses too often it lowers efficiency. Try raising the wages of the men who do the best work. Give a substantial recognition of honest effort—and do it before some other employer does it for you.

FROM THE MOUNTAINS OF OLD KENTUCKY TO THE ERLANGER FAIR

The Corbin Times-Tribune edited by Hon. R. G. Williams of Covington, editorially, makes some very caustic statements in regard to the Erlanger fair and conditions in Kenton county generally. The Editorial in part is:

Another fair at Erlanger, Kentucky, has passed into history. For six full days and nights, what was dubbed a fair, had full sway in this little Sixth Class hamlet on the Western border of Kenton county. The question uppermost in the minds of those who attended it, why was it called a fair? Certainly it is not because of the premiums offered or the exhibition given, for, in this particular, it more resembled a fair than a three ring circus resembles a basket picnic.

The Floral Hall was shy of exhibits; the cattle barns, hog and sheep pens, where once the pure breeds were placed on exhibition, are no longer used to encourage and stimulate the breeding of pure bred live stock, an industry indispensable to the welfare of mankind. The products of the farm, home and factory had no place at this so-called fair. Persons interested in those things, for the encouragement and promotion of which this fair was intended by its founders, were conspicuous by their absence.

If it was not a fair as commonly known and understood, then what was it? The answer is easy. It was a running horse meeting, conducted under the guise of a fair—a subterfuge pure and simple, to escape the provisions of the law of this state creating the Racing Commission, the purpose of which was to regulate and restrict the racing of horses, in order to make it as legitimate and decent as possible. The crowd that attended was composed almost, if not entirely, of race track followers from the neighboring cities of Cincinnati, Ohio, Covington and Newport, Kentucky. They were on hand in goodly numbers. The Pari-Mutual method of betting was provided for those who were speculatively inclined. Spindle games, slot machines and almost every gambling device known to the professional gambler were also in operation. In fact facilities for violating the laws of the Commonwealth against gaming were abundantly provided, and extravagantly patronized, not only by the male adults, but by women and children also.

Another attraction not to be overlooked and one that played an important part in drawing the crowd, was the saloon, to which the thirsty patrons were permitted to repair, in order to quench their thirst. "Good beer," of the quality of the Prohibition days, was served to all comers, at fifteen cents per glass. It would be superfluous to say that the saloon did a land office business. It reminded one of the days of the licensed saloon.

Strange as they may seem it is nevertheless true that all of this law violation was carried on in the open, without the slightest molestation or interference, the six full days of the fair, and in the very presence of the sheriff, deputy sheriffs and other conservators of the peace. Indeed it was a veritable saturnalia of law violation carried on under the very nose, so to speak, of officials, whose sworn duty it was to take into custody the offenders and prevent the laws from being violated. Only one arrest was made, and that was of a pick-pocket, whose hand found its way into the pocket of an ex-deputy sheriff. His method of obtaining money, through sorrow that less gentle than the methods employed by the promoters of the game, was just as legitimate.

The conditions prevailing at this fair, bad as they were, are not one whit worse than prevails throughout the county.

THE CONSOLIDATED TELEPHONE COMPANY EXTENDING ITS LINES

Quing to an ever increasing demand for telephone service, The Consolidated Telephone Company has decided to extend its line to Waterloo, with the idea of going on to Rabbit Hash, taking in that section of the county. The plans have been completed and the building of the line will begin at once.

Anyone desiring phone service will please get in touch with The Consolidated Company at Burlington, Ky. The company is now in position to give good service, owing to the improved condition of its lines and an electric winder at the Burlington exchange and additional toll lines, connections with The Cincinnati & Suburban Bell Telephone Company and The American Telephone and Telegraph Company, thus giving direct connections with every part of the United States.

LOCAL HAPPENINGS

OLD BANK BEING MOVED

Workmen began moving the Boone County Deposit Bank from its foundation last Tuesday morning. This is a novel feature for Burlington—moving a solid brick building from its foundation and placing it on another foundation fifty yards from the present site.

This operation is preliminary to the building a new bank on the present location, which will begin as soon as the moving is finished.

The old building is being moved to the vacant lot between Blythe's store and the Boone House.

ATTENTION FOLKS!

The John R. Coppin Co. sent to this office, too late for publication in this issue, a very elaborate advertisement. We were able, however, to insert an adv. much smaller than the one ordered by them, which set forth in detail the advantages their store offers to citizens of Northern Kentucky.

This is truly a great store, fully the equal of any that Cincinnati offers, and we unhesitatingly advocate its patronage by Boone county people.

DON'T FORGET!

A meeting of the present parent-teachers association will be held at the school building next Monday evening. The meeting will be called at 6:30 p. m. on account of the protracted meeting in progress.

We want more members in this organization, and you do not have to be a parent or a teacher to join. The only qualification required is that you must be interested in the progress of your school.

Come to the school building next Monday at 6:30 p. m.

MEETING IN PROGRESS

Rev. Sam Allen, Christian evangelist, is holding a series of meetings at the Burlington M. E. church.

Rev. Allen, who has no church home here, is receiving the hearty cooperation of the other denominations represented in this town, and their attendance is helping to make the meeting successful.

POULTRY SHOW

At a meeting in the Farm Bureau at Florence, Sept. 24th, night plans were set for a big poultry show to be held Nov. 24th, 25th, and 26th. A committee consisting of Clem Kendall, H. L. Tanner, Ira Long, Goebel Stephenson, Roy C. Lutes, Milton Carpenter, Clyde Anderson, C. P. and Jack Kinsey and Geo. Miller are working on the programs and are putting out a catalogue.

The committee is promising good premiums which will interest every breeder in entering their birds in the show.

No beauty is more exhilarating than the beauty of the rising sun.

Those who fail to get up in the morning in time to see old Sol rise in all his glory misses one of the richest blessings of life.

Early to bed and early to rise helps to invigorate one for the day's tasks and puts into us the spirit of peace on earth and good will toward men.

Besides the early riser gets a royal start upon his day's work that those who sleep late cannot hope to do.

The fresh dew laden breeze, the song bird's melody, the welcome neigh of the horse, the low of the cow and was of the house dog's tail which greets the early riser along with the rays of the early morning sun amply repay him for his early appearance in the day.

The great gathering rose with a roar of approval and admiration, sons of the south and sons of the north mingling their tribute to the grey-haired men before them, as the two veterans clasped hands. To climax the heart-rending scene, National Commander John E. Quinn, of the Legion, himself the son of a North Carolina mother, towering up six feet and more, threw his arms around the shoulders of the two men and embraced them.

Formerly children were seen and not heard, but now it is difficult for the grown people to get a chance to butt in.

The farmers of Boone county are regarded with more respect than ever before, particularly just before election.

Continued success comes from not trying to cheat and fool the people. You won't if you do not cheat or fool yourself.

The people who buy worthless stocks are often very anxious for fear they will miss the opportunity to secure the same.

Most of the young crowd want to work with their heads, but the bulk of the work has to be accomplished with people's hands.

The girls of Boone county who are anxious about their love affairs, would come out better if they let their suitors do the worrying.

If a country boy is going to need more education, it is much better to find out that fact when he is 15 years old than when he is 30.

It is a mighty good idea to mind your own business, but the people also have got to mind the town's business if they want lower taxes.

A Chinese proverb, packed with significance and wisdom: "If you want to keep the town clean, let every man sweep before his own door."

We want men to do things, and what this country is to be twenty-five years from now depends on what we teach the young men today.

After seeing a man wearing a pair of those wide-bottomed pants, we apologize to the girls for anything, said about their apparel.—New Orleans States.

There is no mystery about successful advertising. It is simple salesmanship. If men would write their advertising exactly as they talk to a customer over the counter, they would get better results. The best sermon ever preached was for the benefit of one individual in the audience; the greatest song ever sung was for the benefit of one hearer; the best editorials ever penned are in reply to some single issue. Try it, my friend.

The tendency of boys and girls to lose their respect for parental authority is the occasion for some alarm regarding the future.

Many parents complain that as their children grow older, they cast off their obedience to the rules of conduct they once followed.

But all too often the child is not to be blamed.

The parent who does not demand respect and obedience in the beginning will not receive it in the end.

Humoring and coddling does not produce either. Instead, it creates selfishness, ingratitude and ultimate indifference.

It should be the purpose of the people who conduct cattle shows and county fairs, to emphasize the educational features thereof. These fairs furnish one of the best opportunities to spread ideas of scientific farming.

The majority of farmers are too busy to spend time taking courses at agricultural schools, or even to give much time to attending demonstrations. But if lectures and exhibits are given at these fairs, showing in a very clear way that certain correct and demonstrated methods produce superior results, the farmers who attend these events will listen to such demonstrations with respect, and apply the same methods so far as they can.

The unexpected cold weather with light frosts several nights, caused a good deal of uneasiness among tobacco growers, and some of them rushed up cutting and housing. So much of the tobacco in this county was late being planted, owing to the unfavorable spring, that the crop this fall has not matured so early, and some growers, fearing frost last week, cut their crops a little green. There will be considerable acreage in this section that from present indications, will not mature at all before frost, unless the fall turns off late.

The corn is far from maturity, as the cool nights have greatly retarded the ripening and it is not ready to cut, very little of it ever beginning to turn yellow.

THE AMERICAN TYPE OF BEAUTY

What is the American type of beauty? To the average American man the flower-like woman makes the strong appeal but beauty as the same modern man views it, is more than skin deep, and the doll-face creature posing for admiration in her bathing suit, or for pictures that a few years since would have barred the Police Gazette from the mails, is more apt to create contempt than masculine heart throbs.

The American type of beauty? There is none. Gibson's creations, Christy's and Fisher's are bred from commingled tribes, contributed by nearly every race and clime of the earth. The strain of Irish blood heightens the coloring of the American beauty; the French gives piquancy and charm; the Italian softens femininity—in short, this commingling makes the American beauty the happy possessor of the passion of the East, the poetry of the North, the lovely charm and languor of the South and the glorious independence of the West.

There is an old song about the power of sweet sixteen, but woman need not despair if she has passed the fateful milestone. Helen of Troy, who tired men with an unwanted passion because of her great beauty, appeared on the scene at the age of forty; Cleopatra was past thirty when she met Anthony; Annie of Austria at thirty-eight was called the most beautiful woman of Europe. Mme. Recamier, immortalized by great painters, was at her best between thirty-five and fifty, and the antique past gives any instances of the beauty of the mature woman.

Beauty has swayed great warriors, determined the action of and behind every tragic act every noble deed peers the face of a woman.

However, there is one thing lacking in the beauty of the American girl today.

The soul quality. The American girl, with all her glorious qualities, needs some of the serenity and power of old Greece to perfect her beauty.

It is "up to" the girl of the period to enoble her countenance thru the influence of ennobling thoughts. With fewer frivolities, a saner view of life, she will greatly enhance the charms which she already possesses.

THE REWARDS OF WORK

The appointment of Seymour Parker Gilbert at the age of 31 years to be agent general of the reparations commission, which will work out the Dawes-Young plan, is a lesson for every young man, because it shows the possibilities of hard work.

Young Gilbert started out early to work and his industry and application to detail soon brought him rewards that did not come to capable men far later in years.

After taking numerous college degrees, he became associated with a New York firm, where his ability was soon recognized. He was summoned to Washington to assist in the intricate transactions of the government, having to do with the foreign loans, and became the most trusted subordinate of Secretary Glass and Houston.

Gilbert is credited with having written the veto message which President Wilson sent to Congress, disapproving the legislative apportionment bill, which was sustained by congress.

When the administration changed hands, Secretary Mellon called for him the office of undersecretary of the treasury, in charge of fiscal affairs of the treasury department.

The amazing ability of this astounding young man to grasp details is explained by his devotion to work. While others of his age were wasting their time in the evening, he was at his desk working out the problems that fell to his office.

He regarded holidays as good days to work. He made very few excursions into the realms of gold and when he did perform some social obligation, he returned to his office and worked well into the night.

Any young man can accomplish as great results in proportion to his talents. No success comes without diligent and sustained effort.

This is the thing every boy will have to learn if he expects to do anything of consequence in his chosen field of endeavor.

HIGH SCHOOL HAZING

An Indiana boy was killed in a fight growing out of an effort to protect his younger brother who was the victim of a high school hazing.

With the opening of school, the practice of hazing the "Fresh" will be at its height.

In moderation, it would not be subject to condemnation, but the tendency of boys is to carry it to extremes.

When boys lives are sacrificed for a silly custom, it is time that some drastic methods be devised to put an end to hazing.

High school boys think it is an essential part of their education because their older college brothers do it, but it is far from necessary.

College boys have used some of the barbaric tactics that were once employed to put the freshman through his paces and high schools that have been suffering the custom to have continued each year will have to take similar steps.

An experienced husband is one who remembers his wife's birthday but forgets which one it is.—San Francisco Bulletin.

EFFICIENCY IN BUSINESS

North Dakota's flour mill and elevator project lost $627,362.28 during the eleven months it had been in operation up to July 1.

The loss for June was $69,711.12 and the mill has actually lost 87 cents on every barrel of flour produced.

This condition exists in spite of the fact that the mill is being operated at capacity in order to create a greater output and in an effort to put it on a paying basis.

It is the old story repeated. Public ownership has been proved a failure, yet there are still men who advocate that it is an improvement over privately owned industries.

Efficiency is sacrificed for the sake of lower operating costs and the fine hand of politics works its way in to the detriment of the business.

The true test of any business is efficiency in management and when that is lost through politics controlling the jobs, there is no hope of earning a legitimate profit.

In some states where the government ownership forces are seeking to gain the upper hand, executives of large corporations have been assailed because of the large salaries they receive.

This is nothing more than an appeal to prejudice, which is the chief stock and trade of the demagogue.

Executives of big business enterprises are employed because of their capability and usually there is considerable competition for their services, resulting in large salaries.

Privately owned business looks for the best, not the cheapest and public ownership proponents seek the cheap regardless of fitness for the position, because that is the only argument they have.

States that have tried public ownership of utilities should be a lesson for every state that contemplates such an experiment.

PUNCTUALITY AT SCHOOL

School teachers in most places would appreciate it very much if the parents would take a firm stand at the beginning of this school year, that their children must get to the school house on time. While attendance is no doubt reasonably punctual now, yet there is usually a chance for improvement. There are some youngsters who are natural dawdlers, and it is a hard thing for them to get there on the minute.

It is a fine thing for a school when all pupils who are not kept at home by sickness or other adequate reason, can be in their regular seats at the moment of beginning. Such a good start gives a teacher a fresh impulse of courage.

Also it gives a kind of impression of military precision, and children ought to work better under such conditions.

It would seem as if a condition of frequent tardiness must affect the morale of a school unfavorably, and perhaps lead the children to be slack on their lessons.

In another century or two the world will run out of diamonds. It already looks like a waste of time and money to try to fill a diamond flush.—Los Angeles Times.

OBITUARY

Mr. Charles Helm died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Yancy Helm, near Bullittsville, Thursday, August 28th, 1924, at the age of 85 years and 11 months. Mr. Helm had been in poor health for several years, but his death was caused from a fall which caused internal injuries. He was a life long resident of Boone county. He was one of ten children, only one brother survives Mr. Morgan Helm of Delhi, Ohio. Mr. Helm leaves three daughters, Mrs. C. N. Bradshaw, Mrs. Yancy Helm, and Miss Viola Helm, two grandsons Charles and William Helm, two granddaughters, Misses Isabelle Helm and Virginia Bradshaw, also a host of relatives and friends. He was a Confederate soldier with Morgan, and enjoyed the reunions of these veterans.

Mr. Helm will be missed in this community for he was a good citizen and a loyal friend. "I heard the voice of Jesus say, come unto me and rest, Lay down thou weary one lay down thy head upon my breast I came to Jesus as I was, weary, and worn and sad, I found in Him a resting place, And he has made me glad."

THE MARRIED WOMAN'S NAME

It is claimed that in recent primary elections, women who ran under their own names came out better in the voting than those who appeared under their husband's names. It is claimed that a woman named Mary Smith, for instance, would seem to have more individuality and win more votes if she would use her own first name, than if she ran as Mrs. John Smith or whatever her husband's name was.

Some day women may decline to take their husbands' last names, but insist on using their two names in hyphenated form. This would have the merit of clearness, as people would know what person was meant, which is not always the case when a married woman uses her own Christian name instead of her husband's.

Many such changes are possible, for the modern woman claims the right to be an equal partner in the work of the world and resents any suggestion of inferiority.

THE EFFECT OF THE DEFEAT OF THE BOND ISSUE

Under the law passed by the legislature the tax on gasoline is three cents per gallon. This will not be reduced whether the bond issue is approved or defeated. The tax for motor licenses will not be reduced whether the bond issue is approved or defeated.

If the bond issue is defeated, every dollar from these sources will go to the roads. If the bond issue is passed $25,000,000 of the proceeds of the bonds will be used for objects that must be provided for by the state, either through the proceeds of bonds or through increased taxes on personal property and real estate.

If the bond issue is defeated instead of $25,000,000 going to the payment of the state debt, such increase in buildings and facilities at the University that it will accommodate five or six thousand instead of two thousand students, for the erection of buildings at the Eastern State hospital for the insane and school of reform, and other necessary purposes, it will all go to the roads, and the money for those other purposes will have to be raised by increased taxes.

If the bond issue is passed—Kentucky is assured of prosperity. If the bond issue is defeated Kentucky will continue to lose citizens, for years receive no benefit from the tourist travel and be known as the tourist state.—Lexington Herald.

Little Helen Erickson (left), shown here with her sister Marion, is a puzzle to scientists. The girls, who recently arrived in San Francisco, are the daughters of Frederick Erickson, a mining engineer of Ecuador. Born in a mountain village of Ecuador near an ape-infested forest, the five-year-old Helen has proved from the time she was able to toddle that through peculiar guttural sounds she is able to make monkeys understand her language and obey her commands. She gave an impressive demonstration on board the steamer with a brown monkey owned by the chief steward.

MID-WESTERN CROPS

One-fourth of the wealth of the whole United States is situated in five mid-western states—Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Michigan and Wisconsin.

Middle-west crops are above the average. Prices are still high. The world grain crop is reported to be short.

Here is a combination of circumstances that can mean nothing but prosperity.

The wealth of the middle-west is largely confined to products of the soil. The weather started the growing season poorly, but made amends later and the soil has produced lavishly.

The American farmer should be looking into the future with optimism.

And he should be joined by all other business men, because just as the depression in agriculture has made itself felt in every line, so will the improvement be reflected in every field of business enterprise.

There are still a few folks who do their duty with hopes of booty.

THE SENTIMENTS

OF AUTUMN

The autumn has always been a season that interested people with a love for literary expression, and verse is almost as numerous as those of spring, a season which is supposed to set the versifiers scribbling with feverish energy.

Autumn tests a person's temperament. If one has a tendency to melancholy, he is impressed by the decline of the year, the feeling that the chill of winter are coming, and that vegetation is soon to perish. Many people become extremely melancholy at this time.

But if a person is naturally cheerful, autumn is the very high tide of the year. Then it is that nature's color reaches its most flaming pitch. The labors of the husbandman and the gardener attain their perfect result in abundant harvest. "Thou crownest the year, with thy goodness, and thy path drop fatness," wrote the psalmist. "It is better this to see the glory rather than be melancholy of the world."

THE TEXTBOOK COMMISSION.

Several months before Mr. E. P. Morrow left the office of Governor he was called upon, under the State law, to appoint a Textbook Commission, whose duty it would be to select uniform school books for the country schools. Mr. Morrow's selections were admirable, and the best informed and most disinterested educators in Kentucky agreed to serve.

The appointments of Gov. Morrow were loudly applauded, as they deserved to be. The newspapers now attacking Governor Fields were particularly commendatory, and some of them went so far as to accuse, without a shadow of proof, Governor Fields when he came in, of designs against the Textbook Commission. Governor Fields had no such designs. The Textbook Commission organized, and made its selections.

As we suppose was necessary, certain adjustments in school books were decided upon. The Post supports the Textbook Commission and is convinced it did the right thing. After all, hardly anything is more important than good textbooks. But the changes have caused some expense to the parents of many school children, and now we find the enemies of the Governor seeking to capitalize that incident by boldly charging that this Textbook Commission was appointed by Governor Fields. We are prepared to believe that some of the State papers making this charge have simply forgotten what had gone before. For others—certain malignant foes of the Governor—it is difficult to make such excuses. At any rate, the facts are as here given. Governor Fields did not appoint this Textbook Commission, and is not responsible for what it does.—Louisville Post.

The thing to bear in mind just now is that we have been through these "hard times" experiences before, and each time have emerged only to enjoy greater security and prosperity than ever before.

Our prediction is that before very many more moons there will be smooth sailing again. In the meantime let's keep cheerful and work hard.

FARMERS' INTEREST TURNS TO KING CORN

Extension men at the Kentucky College of Agriculture who have been traveling about the state report that farmers are showing interest in corn. The continued good price of this crop is giving them one of the few thrills they have had in the last three years. They realize that high corn will be followed by good prices for live stock, and dairy and poultry products.

Farmers who plan to plant more corn next spring are already looking into the seed corn situation, according to E. J. Kinney of the College. In part, Mr. Kinney says:

Selection From Field

"Selecting seed from the field just previous to the cutting the crop, or when the corn is ripe enough to cut, is by far the most satisfactory method of selection. Not only does this early gathering insure plenty of time for the ears to dry out thoroughly before freezing weather but it permits the selection of the most vigorous and healthy plants and from the stalks that most nearly meet the grower's ideal in regard to height, location of the ear, the angle of the ear, etc. Like produces like and continued selection for these characteristics will tend to produce a strain of corn in which all the plants approach the ideal sought for."

"In general we may say that the varieties of corn grown in Kentucky would be improved if we could secure more stocky and shorter plants, with the ears carried uniformly lower down on the stalk. Such a type of corn would be easier to harvest and be less likely to be blown down by strong winds. In addition it is desirable that the tips of the ears hang downward, as such ears shed rain better and are less likely to be damaged. Another desirable characteristic is uniformity in maturity. Only by field selection can we hope to influence the type of plant."

"Experiments have not shown that any particular type of ear is better than another, as far as yield is concerned. Thus the grower may suit his own fancy in selecting a type of ear. Uniformity of type is desirable, however, as an indication of careful selection and breeding. It is natural to select large ears for seed and there is some evidence that the selection of large ears may have some influence upon yield. Soundness and freedom from disease are the most important qualities to be sought for."

"Field selection is so much more desirable than any other method that it should be employed if possible. The next best time to select is when the first corn is husked. While good, sound ears can be selected at this time, one has no knowledge of the type of plant on which they were produced. The best ears can be gathered while husking and thrown aside, or the selection can be made while loading and unloading the corn. The first method offers the best chance of getting the best ears, however."

"When the crop is a good one it is an excellent idea to select enough seed for two years, as, in some seasons because of drouth or some other cause, it is difficult to find good seed ears. Gather a liberal supply, as one always finds ears that must be discarded when the corn is shelled and frequently fields must be planted twice."

"The subsequent care of the seed ears is even more important than the selection. To preserve its germinating power the corn should be bone dry before freezing weather comes; then no degree of cold will injure it. The problem is to store the seed ears so that they will be safe from injury from mice and rats and yet be in a position to dry out rapidly. On the average farm there is rarely to be found a rat-and-mouse proof seed house, and about the only way to protect stored seed from those active pests is to hang it up in the top of cribs, sheds, etc. Fortunately this method of storing seed corn cannot be improved upon, as far as supplying good conditions for drying is concerned. The ears can be strung on binder twine or hangers can be made of wire fence. If desired, a good type of hanger can be bought at a reasonable price. Of course there are various other ways of storing seed that will provide ideal drying conditions, such as drying racks, shelves and posts studded with nails upon which the ears are stuck. The problem is to have plenty of space between the ears."

"In Kentucky the use of artificial heat is not necessary, except, perhaps, in seed houses where large amounts of seed are stored. Even in seed houses a high temperature is not desirable. It usually takes about two months to ten weeks for corn to become dry, even under the most ideal conditions. When thoroughly dry the ears can of course be put into barrels, boxes or any convenient place."

There are penalties for horse stealing and for the theft of automobiles, and the trespass notices posted on farms are reminders that, in line with common sense, there also are laws against the raiding of farms. The manner in which the orchards and gardens and some farmers have been deplored by thieves traveling in motor cars, and on the public authority it is incumbent upon the public authorities to do their part to put a stop to it and bring the guilty to punishment.

KENTUCKY DAIRY SITUATION SURVEYED

One third of all the dairy cows in the state of Kentucky are losing money, a third is making up for what the first third is losing and the third is making profits for their owners, according to a survey of the state dairy situation, just completed by the Blue Valley Creamery Institute. Better feeding and better breeding is the solution of this problem, the Institute experts declare.

"The State of Kentucky," continues the report of the Institute "has dairy cows in milk on 76 per cent of her farms. In 1880 the state had 2.43 per cent of all the dairy cows in the United States; in 1924—2.24 per cent. In 1910 the state had 78 head of all kinds of cattle per one thousand acres of improved land. Now, in 1924 it has only 70 head. A few head more means more milk. Have they improved in 14 years? What will they be 14 years from now? These are the questions on which the Institute's experts will enlighten the farmers."

"Farmers want happiness and contentment. To get it they must make money. There are two ways of doing this—more for what you produce or lower cost of production. A quarter saved in the grain cost of producing a hundred pounds of milk by feeding better milk making rations, a dime saved per one hundred pounds of pork, or dozen of eggs is money ahead for the farmer. We don't need more cows, hogs or hens. We need better ones. More efficient animals mean lower cost of manufacturing one hundred pounds of milk, pork, poultry, beef, mutton and eggs."

"The average cow in Kentucky makes only 2,666 pounds of milk and only 1.3 per cent of all the dairy cattle in the state are purchased. Better feeding will raise production and lower costs per hundred pounds of milk. The daughters of good cows, sired by pure bred bulls, will increase that production and still further lower the production cost. The same is true with other animals. In 1919, the peak year, only 21 per cent of the entire state's income went to farmers. That is not enough," the Institute's experts point out.

There has been a rising tide of popularity in intensive farming. As agriculture is brought face to face with higher costs of production and farmers find that they cannot get by on higher prices alone, it has been necessary to turn to diversification. Deflation has made every banker and farm leader see these things.

COUNTRY SCHOOL TEACHERS.

A normal school authority made the statement the other day that the average salary of rural school teachers is only $729, and asserted further that there is a lack of appreciation of teachers on the part of the farmers. Lack of properly trained teachers is said to be one of the handicaps of country life. Figures of salaries of such teachers may be misleading, since in many cases they get their board at a low price. Considering this fact, also that the standards of dress and expense are not nearly so demanding in the country towns as they are in cities, it may be that many of these rural teachers are as well off financially as those who have city schools with larger salaries.

If such teachers like country life, if they appreciate the ties of friendship that they commonly make in a country town, they are apt to be very much disappointed if they go to some city and are lonely and little noticed.

However, many young women are teaching in country schools who have had too little education for such work. To secure competent teachers, the work of the rural schools must be made more attractive to them.

It helps a lot if the effort is made to provide them with pleasant homes at a moderate expense. When some public spirited family takes in a teacher and gives her a good home at a low rate of board, that family is performing a splendid service to the community.

Many teachers would be slow to give up such a home. But if they have to pay full rates for board and find it difficult to get into congenial homes, they may claim they have little inducement to remain in the country towns.

Many voters will wake up and be prepared to do their duty as citizens about the time after election when they hear that the result has gone against them.

JERSEY CATTLE SALE.

The first annual sale of the Boone County Jersey Cattle Club at the Florence fair grounds, Thursday, Sept. 25th, was a success in every particular, and while there were no record breaking prices, the 34 head sold for $3,060, an average of $90, which is a very good average considering that most of the offering ranged from baby calves to two years of age.

The top of the sale was Volunter's Bessie Leoni 429018, a Register of Merit daughter of Volunteer of America 111910, the bull that made Jersey history in the southern part of the county in the hands of Jesse, Omer Clark and Ben Weisenberger. "Bessie" is a very "milky" little cow with a record of 667 lbs. of butter, at once attracted the attention of the bidders, and in a lively, three torned fight between Mrs. A. M. Edwards, C. H. Youell and W. F. Tupman, Mrs. Edwards bid last at $230.

The outstanding bargain of the day probably was in the bull calf Raleigh's Spotted Arrow 233539, a straight Island bred calf, tracing twice to Viola's Golden Jolly, who sold for $12,000, and twice to Noble of Oakland's who sold for $15,000.

This calf is "typical" enough for anyone and has production gallop in his pedigree, but no one seemed to appreciate this, so Mr. A. G. Mcullen, who knows a good thing when he sees it took him in at $65.

There were several breeders present from the neighboring states of Ohio and Indiana, also from other parts of Kentucky, among whom were Mr. Frank E. Snyp, of Springfield, Ohio, president of the Clark County Jersey Cattle Club, Mr. S. A. Muff also of Springfield, Mrs. Anna C. Givan, of Lawrenceburg, Indiana, Mr. J. H. McDannell, Warsaw, Ky., and of course everyone was glad to see "Bill" Sutton, with a group of buyers from Hopkins county, where he is now County Agent. Mr. C. C. Macison, county agent from Aurora Ind., was there with a buyer in the person of Mr. R. G. Kyle.

Mr. S. A. Muff was the largest buyer, taking to Ohio nine head. While Mr. Snyp didn't buy any at auction, he succeeded in getting a grand-daughter of Viola's Golden Jolly from Messrs. S. B. Ryle and Sons at private treaty. Mrs. A. C. Givan took two mighty good ones to her farm near Lawrenceburg, Ind.

Mr. B. E. Aylor, of Burlington, Ky., purchased three nice heifers for a foundation herd.

REGULAR MEETING

The local Parent-Teachers' Association held its regular meeting at the school house last Monday evening at 6:30 p. m., with "Mr. Enthusiasm" that ever-present, though invisible, co-worker playing the usual leading role.

More new members were enlisted and further plans for the betterment of local school conditions, discussed. Time for meeting was limited due to church services at 7:30. People need but to ascertain the good this organization can and will do for the school, before they will enlist in this work.

Judge Robert W. Bingham, publisher of the Louisville Courier-Journal, who recently stated that our State Reformatory was in good condition, has been challenged by Gov. Fields to spend a night each in adjoining cells in this Reformatory. Gov. Fields even went so far as to name the date in his challenge.

R. E. Berkshire, Atty. Garnett W. Tolin, Galen Kelly, Howard Kirkpatrick and Stanley Eddins, went to Covington last Wednesday night to hear Hon. A. O. Stanley speak in the interest of the Democratic ticket.

RADIO ON FARMS

Washington.—Rapid increase in the use of radio on farms during the past year is shown in a special survey made by the United States Department of Agriculture. It is estimated that there are now more than 270,000 radio sets in use on farms, as compared with 145,000 a year ago.

The survey was made among the country agricultural agents. Reports from 873 county agents placed the aggregate number of radio sets in their counties at 108,710, or an average of 130 sets in each county.

Projecting the average of 130 to each county for all of the 2,850 agricultural counties in the United States yields an estimate of 370,500 radio sets in use on farms throughout the country as a whole, as compared with a similar estimate of 145,000 sets a year ago.

The radio market news service of the United States Department of Agriculture has been developed rapidly during the past three years, until now it is possible for farmers in practically all parts of the country to receive daily market quotations reports on agricultural conditions.

CORN PRICES WILL HOLD UP

Corn prices should show no sag during the next year with the forecast for the coming crop indicating a drop to at least 2.576 million bushels, the smallest yield since 1918. This is 469 million bushels less than last year's crop and nearly 539 million bushels below the five year average.

A crop of 2,576 million bushels is about 339 million bushels below the average domestic consumption of the last five years. To keep demand within limits of supply exports are being reduced. In the last 12 months they have averaged less than 25 million bushels. The present crop and price situation indicate that some corn may be imported. This may tend to keep the price level slightly lower than otherwise.

In the corn year 1913 and 1914 approximately 7,578,000 more bushels of corn were imported than exported. This was a record unlike in corn history, as exports usually hold the balance of the trade. Already 6,000,000 bushels have been contracted for Argentina, the chief corn exporting country, supplies the corn needs of Europe. In view of the present European needs, the Foundation points out that little corn will be available for export to the United States, in spite of the fact that Argentina has the largest surplus in history.

The most recent estimates by private crop analysis predict a bushelage of only 2,000,000,000. This would make the 1924 crop the smallest since 1913, when the total production for the 1923 crop, which was the smallest yield in a quarter of a century of corn history.

HAIL INSURANCE PAYS—

"HAIL RODS" ARE WORTHLESS

The weather Bureau of the United States Department of Agriculture is frequently asked whether there is any known method of preventing hailstorms. The answer is emphatically negative. Many million dollars' worth of ammunition has been expended in Europe in bombarding the clouds for the purpose of averting hailstorms. Quite an elaborate technique has been developed, entailing the use of special types of mortars, bombs, and rockets. Shortly before the World War the practice prevailed widely in France of erecting hail rods, or so-called "electric Niagaras."

These were, essentially, large copper lightning rods installed on high buildings or on steel towers especially constructed for the purpose. In the early part of the nineteenth century smaller hail rods, consisting of metal-piled poles, were set up in European fields, vineyards, etc., on a very extensive scale. None of these expedients ever had any plausible scientific hypothesis back of it, and the merits popularly ascribed to them were undoubtedly wholly imaginary. It is understood that the popularity of these practices has greatly declined in recent years.

The only protection the farmer has against damage to his exposed crops from hail is hail insurance. This form of insurance has been practiced on a large scale in Europe for more than a century and in recent years has made rapid progress in this country.

MOURNED AS DEAD

The parents of Richard Loeb, sentenced with Nathan Leopold in Chicago to life imprisonment for the murder of little Robert Frank, are reported in news dispatches to mourn their son as dead.

He has gone from them forever. Though he does not have to suffer the physical pain or the horror of knowing that he must die on the gallows, this young intellectual faces a bleak life ahead.

But was not he—and Leopold too, practically dead so far as his parents were concerned before being arrested for the brutal slaying of an innocent boy?

Everyone sympathizes with these parents, and yet wonders if they really knew anything about their boys, who their associates were or how they spent their time.

Put were the Loeb and Leopolds vastly different from the average modern parents? How much time do they give to their children?

It's a dangerous system—raising children by proxy, and so many parents discover it too late, to their sorrow.

There are some things that money won't buy. There are some things that you can't employ other people to do.

There are some relationships in life that can't be evaded; they must be assured or allowed to go by default.

All of the genius and wealth on earth can not provide a substitute for the responsibility of parents for their children.

If the press of social engagements or business crowds out the time to which children are entitled, the price can't be paid with money in position in life.

It's too big.

NOTICE TO THE PUBLIC.

I will not be responsible for no debt or debts that my wife, Mabel Louiden, made or makes after June 1st, 1924.

BEAT THIS RECORD IF YOU CAN.

The game between Hebron and Burlington was the last game played in the County League, having been postponed from earlier in the season.

Easily the feature of this, the first game for the League was the showing of the Burlington team, which transcended all records known to the baseball world, when it failed to win a single game during the entire season of eighteen games, as well as five games played outside the League, a total of 23 games without a win, and Manager Weaver of the Burlington team says he challenges any team anywhere to show a clean record than this one.

But we must give Mr. Weaver credit for his tenacity, which we think is worthy of special mention, for did you ever read or hear of a manager "sticking" with a team thru a losing streak of twenty-three straight? We contend there is not a manager in professional baseball, whatever salary he is drawing, that would have the nerve to surpass this record.

Mr. Weaver's countenance now bears an almost forgotten smile, he appears 20 years younger this week, and little do we marvel at the change.

A GENERAL "CUT-OUT"

We have heard but few arguments against the "cut-out" of the 1923 crop of tobacco in this county, and but one of them, in our opinion, was meritorious.

Most of the farmers, however who advanced this argument actually favor the omission of next year's crop. Their contention was simply that they feared a "cut-out" by Kentucky growers would simply cause the other burley growing states to increase their acreage thus nullifying the efforts of Kentucky to advance the price of tobacco already grown.

The action of the convention at Lexington last Friday, however, removed this fear from the minds of our growers, when it voted the "cut-out" with the understanding that the other six states take the same action. In other words there will be a general "cut-out" or none at all.

Those informed on the question claim that a "cut-out" in the other will bind Kentucky, thus bringing a general "cut-out" or none at all.

PARENT-TEACHERS

ASSOCIATION HOLDS A SIXTH DISTRICT MEETING AT VISALIA, KY.

We have at hand an interesting letter from Mrs. Van H. Weaver, of Covington, the efficient publicity chairman of the Sixth District Parent and Teachers' Association, in which she urges the organization of more of these clubs in our county, and further urging these clubs to join the Sixth District organization.

We wish to say that we are heartily in accord with Mrs. Weaver's plan, because we are interested in the work, not only as a newspaper, but personally as well, and will be pleased to publish the club notes from time to time, at Mrs. Weaver's request.

Mrs. Weaver enclosed the following account of the last Sixth District meeting from the Cincinnati Enquirer:

Members of the Parents and Teachers' Association of the Sixth Congressional District held a meeting yesterday at Visalia Ky., where they were the guests at a chicken dinner of members of the Parents and Teachers' Club of the Visalia school.

Fifty-five delegates from eight counties attended the meeting which was held in the J. O. U. A. M. Hall of Visalia. The opening address was made by Mrs. John Taylor, Erlanger, Ky., President of the association, who explained that the aims and objects of the organization are to get better schools, improved homes and create a better community spirit especially in the rural districts.

A resolution was adopted which recommended that the Federated Mothers' Clubs of Kentucky take up the problem of obtaining free text books for all school children in the state.

Prof. J. H. Gosey, of the Visalia school, spoke of the needs of rural schools. Geo. Gray, Visalia, drew a comparison of the schools of fifty years ago with those of today. He also told of the improvements that should be made in the facilities for education in the future.

Mrs. Van H. Weaver, Covington, emphasized the necessity of providing free school books and told of the hardships imposed on poor families who were required to purchase new books for their children each year. Mrs. Geo. Shouse, Crescent Springs, Ky., Vice President, and Mrs. Wm. Lockbaum, Treasurer of the Association, also spoke.

Mrs. Frederick Rasch, Covington, explained what had been accomplished toward the betterment of school conditions in the state through the efforts of mothers' clubs.

The following counties were represented: Kenton, Campbell, Boone, Grant, Pendleton, Carroll, Trimble and Gallatin.

An interesting musical program was given following the business meeting.

COMES NOW THE BALMY DAYS.

It must bring joy to the reader of the country press to find in between paragraphs after paragraph of drab, no vitality interesting, local news, such little gems of description as the one which follows. It was found almost successfully hidden in the Falmouth Outlook:

"The azure haze which drapes itself softly about the hills of Pendleton county heralds the approach of autumn. The verdure with which the landscape has long been vested is already fledged here and there with the gold that glows beneath a brilliant sun, forecasting the autumn shades that are shortly to clothe the earth in gorgeous splendor. The soft air, more crisp, is fruit-scented; is the breeze from the orchard wafts the pleasant odor of ripened fruit. The squirrel's laughter amid the rustle of leaves proclaims his activity as he bestirs himself in anticipation of winter and the breeze whispers softly that October is here."

Farm work is moving along very good in this county. Most of the tobacco is in and many silos have been filled and farmers have been busy getting small grain seeded on the tobacco and sil corn ground. They have learned that rye or other pasture during the winter increases the chance of a healthy profit on lambs and further that ground which does not have a cover crop washes badly and thereby loses soil fertility. It is quite likely that every cultivated piece of ground in this county will have some kind of small grain for a cover crop.

Church goes were given a delicious treat last Monday evening when Mr. Winston Kaufman, of Cincinnati, gave a beautiful vocal rendition at the revival service. Mr. Kaufman is a nephew of Mr. W. A. Gaines, whom he was visiting a few days last week. He is widely experienced in church singing.

DEMOCRATIC TICKET

For President JOHN W. DAVIS of West Virginia
For Vice-President CHARLES W. BRYAN of Nebraska

For U. S. Senator
A. O. STANLEY

For Congress
A. B. ROUSE

There is no doubt in the mind of any one that Boone county will poll at the November election her usual Democratic majority but we should increase that majority so that our Congressman Hon. A. B. Rouse will receive an increased majority from the county of his birth. Mr. Rouse has represented his people bravely, fearlessly and efficiently. He is opposed by a Republican candidate and one from Covington by the name of Bonhott, who will be on the Lofollet ticket, as there was no other place for his name on the ballot. Bonhott was elected to the last legislature, being on account of political trouble of his opponent. The records of the legislature show nothing that would entitle this candidate on the tail of the Lofollet ticket to any political advancement.

Farmers in Adair county are conducting a contest to see who can grow the best acre of tobacco. The awards will be made by association graders when the tobacco is delivered next winter. All contestants will deliver their tobacco on the same day when a demonstration will be given. The purpose of the contest is to determine the best methods of producing large economical yields, according to County Agent F. C. Walker.

A total of 237 Jerseys and 101 Holstein-Friesians at the recent Kentucky State Fair in Louisville made one of the best dairy cattle shows seen in the State in years, and indicates increased interest in dairying in the state.

There are plenty of politicians shaking hands with the voters, but what is needed is more business men and old residents shaking hands with newcomers and making them feel contented.

It is estimated that 15,000,000 tons of manure, worth about $25,000,000 go to waste in Kentucky annually. This sum is equal to about ten times the value of all commercial fertilizers used in the state.

When old George Washington and other patriots performed their heroic acts, it did not probably occur to them that many of our citizens would not bother to vote after that great privilege was given them.

The politicians are blaming each other for everything, but they have not yet settled the question as to which party is to blame for the dry weather and the near approach of Mars.

Kentucky exported $8,700,000 worth of tobacco during April, May and June, which was nearly $4,000,000 more than it exported during January, February and March.

A decrease of about 7,000,000 pigs in the spring crop in the corn belt has tended to place the hog industry on a normal basis, and to make for profitable prices.

There are 12,000 silos in Kentucky. Many will be filled this year for the first time in several years, due to a poor hay crop and high priced corn.

The white lights of the cities are very fine, but they are a very poor substitute for the good old home made pie produced in Boone county.

Claimed that only 20 per cent of the American people brush their teeth. This makes a big opportunity for the false tooth business.

So far the automobile speeders have not shown any anxiety to have their number plates made any more easily visible at a distance.

The people who won't go to church because a collection is taken, ought not live in any country where taxes are levied.

Political oratory may be tiresome to the voters, much as the alarm clock sounds very obnoxious to the sleeping citizen.

Gov. Fields will speak in Burlington on Monday night, October 6th. We are expecting a very large crowd to hear him.

However, the people who forgot to vote, rarely forget to eat when the time comes.

We publish herewith an editorial by Mr. Keen Johnson of the Anderson (County) News.

The editorial is directed at the inconsistency of the Louisville Courier Journal and Times in their effort to defeat the bond issue in Kentucky. The Anderson News says:

Consistent Inconsistency

"The only thing in which The Courier-Journal is consistent is in its inconsistency. While urging the defeat of the $75,000,000 bond issue for roads and schools out in the state, they give editorial endorsement to the issuance of $10,750,000 worth of bonds by the city of Louisville for the construction of sewers, buying of public parks and elimination of grade crossings.

The bond issues which they term "meritorious" for Louisville means the assumption by that city of a much larger debt in proportion to population than that against which this influential newspaper warns as it seeks defeat of the $75,000,000 issue.

Every argument which the Courier-Journal advances against the $75,000,000 bond issue may be brought with equal force against the $10,750,000 bond issue that it recommends be voted by the citizens of Louisville.

There is as much possibility of the bond issue being extravagantly expended and graft resulting in proportion from the Louisville bond issue, sanctioned by The Courier-Journal as there is in the $75,000,000 bond issue which this same influential newspaper condemns.

The interest charge on the $10,750,000 bond issue is advised to vote will be just as heavy in proportion as will the interest charge on the $75,000,000 bond issue which The Courier-Journal with striking inconsistency asserts should be defeated.

The need for sewers in Louisville is no more imperative than the need of roads in Anderson county. Those sewers already constructed in Louisville have been built by two previous bond issues, this influential Louisville newspaper tells us, nor does it condemn those bond issues as having been bad business. It rather commends them and urges their success as a reason why a third bond issue should be voted for a similar purpose.

Pay as you go has not been the method by which Louisville has built its sewers because they would not have yet had sufficient sewers in the city to meet its most imperative needs had such a plan been followed. Pay as you go, which The Courier-Journal asserts is adequate for road construction, for the improvement of the educational system of Kentucky and the rehabilitation of its charitable institutions, this same newspaper admits is inadequate to provide sewers for Louisville.

The Courier-Journal advocates the Louisville bond issue, that sewers may be built that Louisville may "justify its claim as a civilized, progressive city; yet opposes a similar step by the commonwealth of which Louisville is the metropolis.

The inconsistency is surpassed only by that inconsistency which urges the Davis, Democratic nomination for president, be elected, and that his hands then be tied by sending a second Republican senator from Kentucky to the United States Senate to thwart the constructive program of legislation which Mr. Davis sponsors.

The Courier-Journal may be amused at the temerity of an inconsequential country newspaper that has the audacity to point out the inconsistency which destroys its argument. This newspaper, admitting its insignificance and acknowledging the influence of the Courier-Journal, again calls attention to the fact that it is at least consistent in its editorial policy. This newspaper, when the submission of a bond issue for road building was urged during the Morrow administration, followed the Courier-Journal in its advocacy of that measure. We believed their argument in favor of such a step logical and sound. We still believe that argument consistent and are consistent enough to reiterate it.

THE LAW SPEAKS

The law has spoken and Nathan Leobold and Richard Leob have been sentenced to life imprisonment for the murder of Robert Franks, 14 years old, in Chicago, May 21, and in ninety-nine years in prison for kidnapping the Franks boy.

The sentence was pronounced by Justice John R. Caverly after attorneys for the defense and state presented evidence in "aggravation and mitigation" of the punishment. Not a word will be agreed with the punishment given the youthful slayers, but courts have been set up for passing on the guilt or innocence of violators of the criminal laws, and those who disagree will have to abide by the verdict.

Those who were so convinced that Leobold and Leob should have been sentenced to die in the gallows, would have been the last to have shed the blood of the two young men on their hands.

The judge considered the evidence and based his decision on his idea of how the best interests of society would be served. It was not affected by the passing whims or prejudices of the moment.

In India the wedding feast lasts 24 hours, but over here the guests are lucky if they get ice cream and cake, at the present prices of wedding feasts.

We publish herewith an editorial by Mr. Keen Johnson of the Anderson (County) News.

"BEFORE AND AFTER TAKING" THE MODERN GOOD ROAD TREATMENT

These photographs show the same stretch of road before and after improvement. It is easy to understand from this picture why good roads make such a difference in the life and financial condition of the farmer. Bad roads isolate him and his family, making marketing difficult and putting a high barrier in the way of education for his children. The $75,000,000 Bond Issue will go far toward providing Kentucky with first class hard surface roads. A federal government estimate shows that $50,000,000 to be spent on the State highway system will be of immediate direct benefit to 80 per cent of the farming population. A vote for the bonds means a vote for progress.

That the various elements of the Democratic party are harmoniously united for the presidential fight this year has been apparent to all observers for some time.

A significant expression of this point was recently published as an editorial in the Shelbyville News, a paper which was formerly unfriendly to Senator Stanley. The editorial in part follows:

The News wonders whether the voters of Shelby county who heard Congressman Gilbert's speech at the court house last week, or read the outline of it which was published in the last issue of this paper, grasped the full significance of his personal tribute to Senator Stanley and his authorized statement from Senator Beckham that he would regard the defeat of Mr. Stanley as a "public calamity."

They certainly did not, unless they recalled the time, not so many years ago, when Beckham and Stanley were the leaders of rival factions in the party and Gilbert was a strong Beckham adherent. In those days neither faction could or would say any good in the other; it was war to the knife and knife to the hilt. But since then the three have served together in Congress, and closer contact, as it usually does, brought about a better understanding. What ever Mr. Stanley's failings as an executive may have been, his record as a legislator, his sturdy honesty, his unflinching devotion to Democratic principles, his brilliant oratory, was his admiration and now they declare that his defeat would be a "public calamity."

His sincerity in this declaration is not to be questioned. Neither is under any personal or political obligation to Mr. Stanley and so far as party loyalty is concerned, he could have been satisfied in less extravagant terms.

If his sincerity is granted, only one other question remains to be answered. Who is in the better position to speak authoritatively as to Mr. Stanley's usefulness in Washington; Mr. Beckham and Mr. Gilbert who served with him in Congress and observed his work at close range, or captious critics from afar whose judgment is biased largely by personal prejudice?—Shelbyville News.

The politicians are urging us to pull together in support of the party, and some of them are complying with this suggestion by pulling the people's legs.

The surest and safest way to get your pay raised is to do things you are not told to do.

VACCINATING CHILDREN

AGAINST SMALLPOX

Smallpox does not exist in communities where the inhabitants have availed themselves of the protection of vaccination. If it were not for vaccination smallpox would today be as prevalent in Kentucky as it was a hundred years ago. Some parents seem to think that it is not necessary to have their children vaccinated because there is so little smallpox in their immediate communities. If vaccination were not continued, within one generation smallpox would again become a dread plague taking heavy toll of human life or leaving countless victims scarred and marked. The law of Kentucky says: All parents, guardians and other persons having care, custody or control of any child or children shall have the same vaccinated. This law was written for the protection of the child and parents should co-operate by having their children vaccinated before they start to school.

At one time vaccination left big, ugly scars and sometimes children did have sore arms and were sick. This was due to two causes—first and foremost, to infected arms and second,—to the vaccine used. Today by modern scientific methods a vaccine is made which will NOT make an ugly scar and will give absolute protection against smallpox. Children must be taught that they cannot run or scratch their arms when vaccinated because if they do, they will infect the arm and make a big scar. The stories told of arms lost because of vaccination is all bosh; many of these stories have been traced and not one person found in the state who has lost an arm because of vaccination.

If a child has been vaccinated and does not have a scar with tiny pit marks in it, he should be re-vaccinated. Vaccination should be repeated every seven years; if the revaccination does not take there is every chance that the person is immune to smallpox, if it does take, the second vaccination was necessary for protection.

Round-Up Queen on Her Royal Chair

Miss Joate Sedgwick, queen of the Lexington (Ore.) Round-Up, broke the precedent of years when she selected two husky cowpunchers for personal attendants instead of the customary maids of honor.

Grabbing at Straws.

When we received the Lexington Herald of Sept. 26th, "we had our pen in hand," tritely speaking, ready to express our opinion on the manner in which the opponents of the bond issue are "grabbing at straws" in a "drowning" effort to defeat it.

They have now forsaken the "bugaboo," they were shaking in front of the farmer, that the bonds were a mortgage on his farm, upon the recommendation of a Wall Street emissary, who tried, but failed, to dictate the framing of a Kentucky bill. We herewith quote the able editor of the Lexington Herald on the subject:

"It is amusing to note the glee with which the opponents of the bond issue, who have based their opposition to it on the ground that it may possibly at some time in the distant future require the imposition of an additional tax because it is a mortgage on the homes of the state, exploit the statement of the Investment Bankers Association, now in session in Cleveland, that the bill withdrawn does not impose any such mortgage and that, therefore, the bonds will not be good."

Every intelligent man who will ascertain the facts will know that there is no foundation for any such contention. There is no lawyer in the Investment Bankers Association that is the superior of Judge Alex P. Humphrey or Alex Barrett, who considered carefully the question raised by the New York emissary of the Investment Bankers Association in drafting the bill. More than one representative or emissary of the Investment Bankers Association made representations about the bonds while the bill was being drafted. And the greatest danger that they could point out so far as we could ascertain from correspondence and conversation with them, was that the bonds as provided for in the bill passed by the legislature might be a little more difficult to sell, and might sell from a quarter to a point lower than they would sell if the recommendation of the Investment Bankers Association was adopted in full.

Every intelligent person will know that if the bonds are authorized by the vote of the people they will be as good as a gold certificate from the United States treasury. The proceeds from the tax on gasoline and motor licenses will more than provide for the interest and sinking fund, and there will be no possibility of there ever being the necessity for the imposition of any other tax.

Somewhat the same objections were raised by the same persons to the bonds issued by the state of North Carolina. Yet the bonds of North Carolina have been sold on the basis of less than 4 per cent, as we recall approximately 3 1/2 per cent. The bonds of Kentucky will be just as good as the bonds of North Carolina or any other state.

It is not because those who oppose the bond issue have any fear that the bonds will not be good that they exploit the denunciation of the Investment Bankers Association which is meeting in Cleveland. It is because they want to confuse the public mind and beloud the real facts as they have endeavored to do ever since the bond issue was submitted to the people."

Total Paid Out	$215,714.61

With $32,138.80 State Aid paid to the Sheriff, and in anticipation of about $60,000.00 due the county from the State Aid Fund, contracts or agreements were made to construct or repair several other pikes, including the Burlington and Florence pike at a cost of $14,352.05; East Bend Road, at a cost of $17,181.25; bridges on the Burlington and Idlewild pike at a cost of over $10,000.00. The total payments for these contracts and the final payment on some of the roads set out under the bond fund, amounted to over the $200,000.00 and were made out of the County Road Fund. Making a total spent by virtue of the Bond Issue of $275,000.00 to $300,000.00.

The sum of $60,000.00 was never paid to the County, because the Fiscal Court and the State Highway Commission entered into an agreement, by which the State in consideration of said sum together with a donation by the citizens of this county, agreed to construct a concrete highway, and relieve the county of the maintenance of the Covington and Lexington or Dixie Highway through Boone county.

It is estimated that the Fruit Packers' Association will pack 50,000 bushels of apples in Henderson county this year. Last year, the first season the association operated 30,000 bushels were handled. The organization has nine members in the county, and is making good strides toward developing a standard pack, much superior to the old methods by individual growers, according to County Agent Donald W. Martin.

It is estimated that milk production in the United States last year was 7,000,000 pounds more than in 1922. Consumption of dairy products, however, greatly increased. The per capita consumption of butter was a half a pound more than for the previous year.

WOMEN'S SHARE OF FARM WORK

Mr. R. R. Eastman, editor of the American Agriculturist, interestingly discusses the question of women's work on the farms. He asserts that "too many farm women grow old before their time; too often, their environment on a farm has taken out of them much of the joy of living, so that not only have they suffered, but the men and children have lived that which God gave them in their women folk to cheer them in the many discouragements of life."

The cheaper free labor of women folks on the farm has been one of the chief reasons for the low prices of farm products. Our fathers have too often given away the fertile soil in the too cheap products sold to the cities. And to this gift they have thrown in for good measure, that more precious commodity, the free labor of their wives and children.

JAMES WILLIAM ADAMS

A shadow was cast over the community of Florence when the Death Angel visited the home of Mrs. Susie Adams on the evening of September 18th and took from her, her son and only child James William Adams.

He was given the best of medical attention and the most devoted care during his long illness, caused by Bright's disease. No better example of a mother's fond love and devotion was ever known than that of the mother, who so carefully reared him from childhood to young manhood.

As a child we knew him best. He was unusually bright, and early in life showed great ability both as an artist, and a musician.

Emerson said: "The world travel the world over to find the beautiful, we must carry it with us or we find it not." His was a life of beauty, joy and gladness that won its way into the hearts of all who knew him.

His was a child he called the name Mother with straightened shoulders and an air of pride and we know that he adored the one, who loved him so dearly. Then again in the springtime of young manhood, as he neared life's close he still called the name mother—calling with the assurance that she could ease his every pain and lead him gently to the door of another world.

Funeral services were conducted at Florence Christian church Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock by Rev. Nutter, of Walton.

The large concourse of friends and floral offerings gave evidence of the esteem in which he was held. He was laid to rest in beautiful Hopeful cemetery. Sorrowfully we turn away, leaving him resting under the beautiful floral offering—but down deep within our hearts we feel that he is not dead—but lives again in a better and fairer world.

BASE BALL

Hebron and Burlington engaged in the final conflict of the season last Saturday at the local park, Hebron winning in ten innings by the close score of 3-2. As on a previous occasion Burlington had Hebron shut out until the ninth, the score being 0 to 0 at that juncture. O. Acra, Hebron's star hitter, the first man up in this inning hit one on the nose and it rolled through S. Acra, Burlington's right fielder, for three bases. Hebron scored two more in the tenth, but xxx base hits by the Brady brothers failed to produce but one tally in Burlington's half and it was Hebron's game 3-2. The feature of the game was Hogan's hitting and pitching.

The people who are too tired to read the political news and go to the polls will be still more exhausted when lawmakers elected by public indifference do some foolish things.

GIVE ALL THE BOYS A CHANCE

Interest in the "World Series" is not confined to adults. Many a school boy's knitted brow is only a ruse to conceal his thoughts. Instead of Euclid propositions, his meditations may be on his base ball heroes and their chances for victory. And why not? Play, games and athletics are a recognized part of the school's physical education program. These activities offer, without doubt, one of the best opportunities for the development of good conduct and healthful habits. Are their possibilities realized?

The teacher-coach should, by example and attitude, inculcate the ideals of fair play. Pupils should learn to despise everything tricky or mean, to abide by the rules and the spirit of the game, to strive to win by their own superior athletic prowess, and to recognize it appropriately in others. They should learn to be sportsmanlike. This implies, when winners, the lack of undue boasting, and when losers, the first in congratulating their successful opponents.

Well-planned athletics contribute immeasurably to physical fitness, happiness, honesty, cooperation, consideration for others, sense of fair play, and character. Each and all of these are worthy goals. Should this highly desirable type of education be confined to the few already physically fit?

Undue concentration on "the team" may well be supplanted by interesting the pupils in the organization and development of a number of play groups and teams within the school. Inter-class games and contests between the school's teams are highly desirable and to be preferred to inter-school contests if both can not be provided. Well-directed participation by the many is essential to the greater good to the greater number.

A MOST SAD DEATH

It was indeed a severe shock to everyone to hear of the recent bereavement of Mr. and Mrs. R. T. McGlennon, of Hebron.

After an illness of but ten days duration their little four-year-old son Robert Jr., passed away Saturday night at their home at 154 S. Second street. It was useless to attempt to describe one's feelings when a death such as this occurs within our circle of friends. It is difficult to imagine a sadder calamity than to lose an only child, and especially at such an attractive age in his life. We certainly extend all the sympathy possible to the stricken family.

Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon at 2 p. m., in the Hebron Lutheran church.

Jennie Zellers, of Burlington, and Ferdinand Blackburn, (colored) of Erlanger, were married at the home of Con Zellers and wife Thursday evening, Sept. 25th. A number of their friends and relatives were present. Quite a number of useful presents were received.

Work on the Burlington and Florence pike began last Monday morning by the State Department under O. R. Porter, who was connected with state road work at Falmouth last year. Work on the ditches was in prospect for the first week.

What has become of the old-fashioned father who thought a bicycle was good enough for his son to ride back and forth to high school?

Don't forget to hear Gov. Fields at the court house in Burlington October 6th, at 7:00 o'clock p. m.

POOR PLACE FOR EDITORS

There is something about life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness in the United States that should have a special appeal for newspaper editors.

In Turkey there is a "prairie law" which permits you to shoot an editor when he annoys you.

A deputy coined the phrase when he clamorously described his justification for the slaying of another deputy, who wrote unkindly of him in his newspaper.

He refused to stand trial and said he would continue to shoot all editors who "write against him."

Now the Constantinople government is panning to pass a law for the protection of editors, and it will not be a "prairie law," if the power of the Turkish press is power more than in name only.

ENGLISH STATIONS TO RE-BROADCAST RADIO PROGRAMS

One of the many interesting features of the International Broadcasting tests scheduled for the week of November 24-30 is the probable re-broadcasting of French, Dutch, German and Swiss radio programs by the stations of the British Broadcasting Company according to an announcement made by Arthur H. Lynch, editor of "Radio Broadcast" magazine arranging the International Tests. The nine stations of the British Broadcasting Company will have special programs arranged for the benefit of American radio listeners during the tests, but Capt. West, Assistant Chief Engineer of the British Radio concern, plans to give the American listeners additional thrills by re-broadcasting Continental programs.

Political Eye-Openers

Making investments in government might be the bookkeeping way of doing the heavy contributions of Privileged Millions to the Republican Campaign fund.

In 1920 over eleven millions were spent to elect Harding and Coolidge. The pot was furnished by those who expected favors in return. They got them.

William Wrigley, chewing gum king, was a big contributor to the G. O. P. fund. Off came the tax on chewing gum.

The Rockwellers, John D. Sr. and Jr., gave $25,000 publicly; how much privately is not known. Crude oil was left on the free list despite protest of independent companies.

R. B. Mellon, brother of the Secretary of the Treasury, gave $25,000. The Aluminum Trust, owned by the Mellon family, was exclusively benefitted by the increase of duty from 2 to 5 cents on aluminum.

Henry F. Lippitt, former Republican Senator, gave $10,000 and wrote the cotton schedule of the tariff bill. He is a cotton manufacturer.

The Pattersons of Dayton, cash register manufacturers, gave $35,000. No other country in the world makes cash registers but the Forney-McCumber tariff put a 25 per cent duty on them.

George Eastman, kodak king of Rochester, chipped in $5,000. The answer was a one to three cents a foot duty on films.

More evidence of Republican pro-pity—American Woolen Mills running at 40 per cent capacity.

Bethlehem Steel at 30 per cent capacity.

Wage reductions by Waltham Watch Company.

Shutdown of Smith & Wesson.

Laying off 15,000 anthracite miners in Pennsylvania.

"If the Constitution is to endure," John W. Davis informs the noble champion of that instrument, Harry W. Daugherty, "the first requisite is that men who hold office under it shall be honest and faithful to their trust. Its real enemies are not the Reds and Bolshevists . . . whose shadows frighten you, but corrupt and impotent public officials and their associates."

High prices for what the farmer needs becomes double affliction by low prices for what he sells. The year book of the Department of Agriculture shows that bacon, beans, flour and lard were cheaper in January than a year before. Last year it cost more to raise wheat and oats than the farmer could get for it.

No wonder 348 banks west of the Mississippi failed during the first six months of 1924.

Farming implements are on the free list, gleefully announce Republican speakers in farming districts. That's so, but there are no farming implements cost MORE today than they did a year ago.

These speakers forget to say that every imported article used in manufacturing farm implements is subject to high tariff. That's why farm implements cost MORE today than they did a year ago.

The tariff on the farmers' tools amounts to over $100,000,000 a year.

EDITORIAL SUGGESTION

What Thinks Dawes of Dawes?

As soon as Dawes of the Altitude Men satisfies himself that he has saved the Constitution and preserved American institutions, he will, no doubt, wish to reply to the questions propounded by the La Follette forces, touching upon his own qualifications as a champion of law.

1. Is it true that the bank of Chicago of which he is the responsible head "secretly transferred to Bill Lorimer on October 21, 1912, without the knowledge or consent of its Board of Directors" the sum of $12,000,000?

2. Is it true that because of the possession of this money he secretly obtained Lorimer was able to secure that this was paid in capital, thus meeting the requirements of the banking laws and getting a charter for the Lorimer bank?

3. Is it true that the failure of the Lorimer bank resulted in losses to depositors and also thousands of people who had deposited money in the bank?

4. And is it true that the Supreme Court of Illinois forced the bank, of which Dawes was president, to make good a portion of the same stock it had enabled Lorimer to borrow as paid in capital?

The public knows what these things of the Klan, of Labor, of Farmers and of La Follette, but it is a pity that interest some idea of what a back of Dawes in this connection.

LEGION NOTES

Presentation of a portrait of the late Woodrow Wilson, twenty-eighth president of the United States and commander-in-chief of its forces during the World War, was one of the features of the opening session of the sixth annual convention of The American Legion at St. Paul, recently. The portrait, presented by the Department of Virginia, will be hung at national headquarters of the Legion at Indianapolis.

While the great audience stood at attention, John J. Wicker, Jr., department commander of Virginia, presented the portrait officially. Then Dr. Kate Waller Barrett, of Virginia, past national president of The American Legion Auxiliary, spoke an eloquent tribute to Woodrow Wilson the man, the statesman and the crusader for humanity.

Miss Alma Forker, of Bakersfield, Calif., sang "There is no death." A bugler played the lingering notes of the soldier's last farewell and the memorial services for the dead of the World War came to a close.

One of the most impressive episodes of the sixth national convention of The American Legion held recently was the appearance on the same platform of Judge Eli Torrance, past commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the United Confederate Veterans, S. R. Van Sant, of Minneapolis, also a past, personal aide to General Halleckman during his visit to the convention.

Tribute to the forces that wore the blue and the forces that wore the gray in the memorable struggle of the Civil War was the keynote of the address of both Judge Torrance and General Halleckman, each of whom had high admiration which was shared for the foe of other years and the unity of heart and purpose which both Union and Confederate soldiers followed the same path to glory.

The public knows what these things of the Klan, of Labor, of Farmers and of La Follette, but it is a pity that interest some idea of what a back of Dawes in this connection.

R. E. BERKSHIRE, M. C. B. C. C.

THE COUNTRY TOWN SPOKESMAN

In past years, the country districts have suffered because the country towns were not adequately represented in the state legislatures and in Congress. There were frequently but few rural people in such assemblies who could talk in an intelligent and convincing way making the small town point of view seem rational to the city folks.

What is needed is for the leading people of the country towns, the folks who have the facts and figures of country life at their tongue's end, to be willing to take their turn in accepting political nominations, so that they can present the rural point of view, and make the cities listen to reasonable claims on the part of the country folks. If people of that type in any locality are not willing to accept public office, the result is likely to be that people will get office whose intelligence and persuasive powers are not sufficient to enable the rural point of view to command respect.

OLD TIME DANCES

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ford, who are creating a very interesting reproduction of old time life at the Wayside Inn, at Sudbury, Mass., are to learn some of the old time dances such as the quadrille and lancers. Perhaps many others will thereby be influenced to learn these beautiful old dances.

These older dances used to create a very fascinating picture. A group of people, all doing the same thing at the same instant, gave a kind of pictorial effect that is missing in the irregular and often grotesque dancing of the present time. The crowd of the crowd through the various evolutions, gave an impression of movement to a ball room. The young crowd would say that the old dances were too stiff and formal, but they helped people to get social polish and dignity.

THE TEACHER'S RECEPTION BY THE COMMUNITY

The September number of THE COMMUNITY LEAGUE NEWS of Virginia, which has just reached the Bureau of Education, suggests, among other work for League members during the month, the following: "Plan a reception for the teacher or teachers. See that the teacher has a comfortable boarding house." This is excellent all-around advice. The people, as well as the school trustees, should assume responsibility for the provision in the community of a living place for the teacher which is at least as good as that from which she comes, which is accessible to the school house and which offers her privacy and comfort during the school term. Usually the teacher is not familiar with the resources of the community. She should be directed to a good living place on her arrival if possible, but not then, later.

In addition to finding a good living place, the teacher should be made welcome in the community, not only when she comes, but during her residence in it. She should be made to feel that she is looked upon as a real personage, one who, whose services are valued and whose presence is cordially appreciated. Such a reception will help the teacher to do her work with enthusiasm and courage, an achievement which is eminently worth while to the community. It still greater importance, this cordial attitude, wholeheartedly expressed by the adults of the community, will instill respect, esteem, and consideration for the school and the teacher on the part of the children which will prove of inestimable value to their progress during the school year.

The Federation of Mother's Clubs (P. T. A.) met at Vinton, Ky., Friday Sept. 20, and had a bountiful chicken dinner. After the noon hour they proceeded to transact business for the betterment of our schools. This P. T. A. meets the last Friday of each month, and would like to see Boone County represented. Eight counties were represented at Vinton and we want old Boone to be there and do her best. Next meeting either be at Erlanger or Covington. You will be notified.

Don't fail to hear the Governor Monday night, October 6th, at Burlington or in Walton at 4:30 p. m.

(By Peter Keegan)

Special Correspondent of the RECORDER

ONLY A MONTH more of the presidential campaign and then the election! At this writing none of the campaign managers are sure of anything, but all have high hopes. Personally, if we wanted to bet on the result we wouldn't know where to place our money. There is still time for almost anything to happen in the few short weeks intervening before the election. Hardly anyone expects LaFollette to win, but he may get enough electoral votes to throw the election into the House of Representatives. If he does that he will count it as a victor.

THE MONTH of October should see all the presidential candidates on the stump, although the active campaigning of President Coolidge will not be so extensive as that of LaFollette and Davis. The President has not wanted to leave the White House at all for stump speeches, but his managers are insisting that he go into the Middle West for at least one and perhaps more speeches. LaFollette is gaining ground in the Middle West and the Republicans want to check him if they can.

GENERAL PERSHING is still one of the "big guns" at the War Department despite his retirement from active service. He is retaining his old offices in his capacity as Chairman of the World War Battle Monuments Commission and does not hesitate to tell his former associates and subordinates what he thinks of their military policies and the way they are running the Army now that he is out of it. After a man has spent more than two score years soldiering, it is hard, Pershing finds, to become a private citizen again.

IF EDWARD N. HURLEY had not been a Democrat his plan for settling the four billion dollar French debt to the United States might have received a warmer reception among Administration officials. Hurley is the next member of the American debt commission. His plan, which would have resulted in the United States buying French industrial securities with part of the money received from France in liquidation of the debt, was ripped up one side and down the other as soon as it saw the light of day. Administration officials finding nothing in it, so they said, that would warrant approval by the Government.

THE SUPREME COURT meets next month, its docket loaded with cases. Among the most important of these concern the power of the Senate in questioning citizens and examining into their private business affairs, these questions having been raised in connection with the oil and Department of Justice investigation last winter. The test case for persons charged with contempt of the Senate will be fought out with M. S. Daugherty of Ohio, brother of former Attorney General Harry Daugherty, as the defendant. Daugherty got in bad when he refused to permit the Wheeler-Brookhart committee to examine the books of his bank.

BY EFFECTING STRICT economies the Government should get through the present year spending nearly a hundred million dollars less than was required last year for operating expenses. The Budget Bureau is watching with an eagle eye for any extravagances by the Federal departments, and is striving to show a surplus of unprecedented size when the year ends next June.

THOUSANDS OF REQUESTS are being received by the War Department from cities throughout the country for the Douglas cruising airplanes used by Smith and Nelson in flying around the world. Chicago and New Orleans are claiming priority rights as the ships were named after those cities. The Government has not decided what will be done with the planes, but probably will place them in the National Museum here for the enlightenment of future generations on the first circumnavigation of the globe by air.

Charges are made that the Department of Health in New York City has been conducting experiments with fourteen different toxins and antitoxin mixtures in the public schools, and that further experiments are contemplated. The Board of Aldermen will investigate before granting the increased appropriation asked for.

VERDICT

FOR COUNTY IN SHEEP KILLING CASE

County Judge N. E. Riddell convened a special session of court last Thursday at which he heard the case of Boone county vs. Hazel Popham and Lutie McMullen.

In the trial of the case it developed that during July 1923 Glen Crisler had several sheep killed by dogs and he presented his claim against the sheep fund for Boone county for the amount of the damage amounting to $71.50 which was paid out of that fund. The claim for the fund showed that the sheep were killed by the dogs owned by Hazel Popham, Lutie McMullen and William Nixon and under the law the County Attorney must collect the damages paid from the owners of the dogs. Boone County Attorney for and on behalf of the county filed suit against the owners and they defended on the ground that their dogs did not kill the sheep, but that they had been killed some time, and that they were badly decayed, while the evidence for the plaintiff was that Mr. Crisler saw the dogs with one sheep down and several others dead and the dogs were beaten off of the sheep by Mr. Crisler, who went for the owners and returned in a short time and the dogs were in the same field with the sheep. The case was submitted to a jury composed of Edward Rice, J. M. Eddins, A. C. Porter, Hubert Rouse, C. E. Birkle and John Stephenson, who after hearing all of the testimony returned a verdict against the owners of the dogs for the sum of $71.50. The county was represented by County Attorney E. H. Riley and the defendants Popham and McMullen by Attorney S. W. Tolin.

HOW TIMES CHANGE.

Who can remember the time when a fellow in need of a shave and haircut had only to take a squint along the curb for a red, white and blue barber pole? Or, when a fellow could satisfy his appetite in a lunch room, buy his spectacles of an optician, buy his daily rations at a grocery and butcher shop, take it home to a cottage and have it cooked by a long-haired wife, buy his clothes at the clothing store, have his watch fixed by a repairman, have his physical ailments cured by the family doctor and be buried by the undertaker?

But "them days have gone forever." If he is not adept with a safety razor, he must hire himself to a tonsorial parlor or masseur to get rid of a few days' growth, and there he finds those full of women folks waiting their turn with the champion bobber.

Once upon a time a hand-me-down and a derby carried a dummy on the flag stones outside the clothing store, and look up a santorial arcade for a two-pants suit and a four-in-hand. When a man wanted a "ham-and" in those happy, bygone days, he never thought of looking up a restaurant, a cafe, a cafeteria or a roof garden.

Butcher shops and grocery stores suited our respected ancestors and they thrived on the fare, but modernity must call them delicatessen shops and markets. A watch repairman was a watch repairman but now he is a horologist, and the modern jeweler is a lapidary. An optician was an optician, but in these days he is an optometrist.

A couple of decades ago a mortician was just an applan undertaker. In the succeeding years he has been described as an embalmer and a funeral director.

Time was when a cottage was a cottage, not aungalow, a balcony was just a balcony like the budding Romeos and Julietes used, not amezanine floor; an automobile was an automobile, not a coupe, sedan, landaulet, brougham or berlin; socks were not hosiery; ties were not cravats; dressmakers were not modistes; doctors were neither surgeons, specialists, pathologists, aleopaths, homeopaths, osteopaths, chiropractors and chiropodists.

There may be a reason, but what is it?

MISTAKEN DEPTHS

A news item from Champaign, Illinois, reports that one hundred wild ducks broke their necks diving on a wet concrete pavement upon which the moon was shining after a rain, mistaking it for a lake or pond.

How much the ducks were like the great majority of the people, figuratively breaking their necks for their own selfish pleasures, and overlooking the real joy that comes from serving others.

The ideal of service as the foundation of a business or the motive of a life is the first essential of real success, but it is lost sight of in the shallow water in which most of us paddle around.

The bee has commenced to "buzz" in the minds of several prospective candidates for county offices, the election of which does not take place until August, 1925.

The Campaign Is On

"Birth of a Nation"

TO BE SHOWN BY THE PARENT-TEACHERS ASSOCIATION

The Burlington chapter of the Parent-Teachers Association has secured the film "Birth of a Nation" to be shown at Burlington and Petersburg for the benefit of the local school.

This, as everyone knows, is a wonderful film, and should be seen by every man woman and child in this section of the county. It was recently shown at Florence for three successive nights, and the house was packed at each showing. The committee has secured this film for five successive nights in order that everyone may see it. It will be exhibited for three successive nights at Burlington, beginning Tuesday, October 22, 1924, and including the following Thursday. Then it will be taken to Petersburg where it will be shown on Friday and Saturday nights, Oct. 24 and 25.

Although this film has been shown for many years, instead of fading, its popularity has increased, and today it is the best drawing film being exhibited.

The Parent-Teachers Association has many improvements they desire to make and, to raise the funds necessary, they are bringing this great film to the people of these two communities.

KENTUCKY IS A GOOD PLACE TO "MARRY A FARM"

If you want to "marry a farm," Kentucky offers splendid opportunities. Almost six per cent of the Bluegrass farmers have acquired their lands by matrimony, according to the Sears-Roebuck Agriculture Foundation, based on a survey made by the United States Department of Agriculture.

Kentucky and its neighbor state Tennessee, are almost as good hunting grounds for the land-eyed suitor as the five north Central states, Kansas, Nebraska, Iowa, Illinois and Minnesota, known as the "Farm Marriage" group. In these states an average of 8.4 per cent of the farm owners have taken a farm along with a wife. Over six per cent of the plainmen of Texas are indebted to cupid for their farm.

Of the 845 farmers interviewed in Kentucky and Tennessee 81.2 per cent purchased their farms, less than one per cent were acquired by gift and none by homesteading, 12.3 per cent inherited them. This survey included 74,495 acres in the two states. For the United States as a whole, 79 per cent of the farm acreage has been acquired by purchase, 15.3 per cent by inheritance, 3.3 per cent by marriage and 2.4 per cent in other ways, principally by homesteading. These percentages vary according to location and the type of farming.

MRS. B. B. ALLPHIN.

The news of the death of Mrs. B. B. Allphin which occurred at Albuquerque, New Mexico, on Monday of last week, mention of which appeared in last week's issue was a shock to her many friends in Burlington where she lived for several years and was loved by all who knew her. She was Miss Pink Williams before her marriage in 1883 to B. B. Allphin, and was born in Gallatin county.

Her remains were brought to Walton, Friday evening, where she resided before going to Mexico about six years ago in search of health. Funeral services were held in the Christian church at that place Monday morning at 10 o'clock and the large crowd in attendance was an attestation of the love and esteem in which she was held by the people of that place and surrounding community. The body was taken to South Fork and laid in its last earthly resting place in the cemetery at that place.

Reception

TENDERED VERONA PARENT-TEACHERS ASSOCIATION BY LOCAL CHAPTER

The local members of the Parent-Teachers Association entertained as their guests last Saturday afternoon about fifteen ladies of the Verona organization.

An informal reception was held at the school house, where a short, but entertaining program was rendered. After several short talks, including a very interesting one by Mrs. Jennings, Assistant Principal of the Verona High School, the assembly was entertained with a Tennyson program by a number of the Burlington school children, under the very able direction of Mrs. C. E. Hook, the efficient instructress of the seventh and eighth grades.

After the program lunch was served and enjoyed by those present, numbering an average sixty, inclusive of children.

A few weeks ago the Burlington Association was entertained by the Verona folks, and Saturday's entertainment was an effort to return the courtesy. Burlington folks are very enthusiastic over the prospects for good results of their work in this organization, and do not hesitate to say that the teaching force of this year, taken as a whole, is in excess of any had for years. Patrons say that, Prof. and Mrs. Hook, Mrs. Elder, and Mrs. Olive with Miss E. H. Huey, complete a faculty that is hard to beat any where.

The guests from Verona, including Misses Isabel Durbin and Miss Bees Cooper, of Burlington, who are teaching there, were as follows:

Mrs. Grover Ransom.
Mrs. Arch Noel.
Mrs. W. L. Renaker.
Miss Ethel Macrandner.
Mrs. Marshall McCandless.
Mrs. O. K. Powers.
Mrs. Will Cotton.
Mrs. J. T. Roberts.
Mrs. Jennings.
Mrs. Miranda Vest.
Miss Lizzie Vest.
Mrs. James Wason.
Mrs. J. N. Powers.
Mrs. James McManama.
Mrs. C. V. Johnson.

THE FIRE ON THE HEARTH

Philosophers and poets have always loved the fire on the hearth which autumn brings to many of our homes. The hearth-stone has not been kept up in many dwellings, and many modern ones have no such open fireplace. But there are plenty of people left who value highly this feature of the old homes.

The low blazing fire with a flame dancing before the backlog, starts currents of reflection, and it promotes intimate conversation and reminiscence. It emphasizes friendship, and it invites the neighbors and associates to come in for an hour of thoughtful talk.

The open fire is dreamy and restful, and the strife of the world seems far away as the red coals glow. Perhaps if more of our people loved these family and friendly gatherings before the open fire, there would be less of the mad rush for wealth and sensual pleasure.

COUNTY AGENTS TO MEET IN LEXINGTON

One hundred and fifty Kentucky county agents, home demonstration agents, college extension workers and others interested in agriculture, at their annual conference here the latter part of this month, will hear about the methods employed by the New York College of Agriculture in improving country life and the business of farming. T. R. Bryant, assistant director of the Ky. College of Agriculture extension service, has called the annual conference of county agents and other extension workers for October 28-31, at the University of Kentucky.

POOL ARRANGES TO MAKE BIG SAVING IN HANDLING CROP.

STORAGE AND RE-DRYING FACILITIES TO BE READY FOR NEW CROP WHEN SEASON OPENS—OFFICERS RE-ELECTED

Directors of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association, in their first session for the year, last Wednesday, elected officers and approved arrangements made by the Executive Committee for the re-drying and storage of the 1924 crop by authorizing the construction of between 20 and 30 new storage houses at points where there are re-dryers, with a view to saving many thousands of dollars to the growers in the re-drying and handling of the new crop.

Additional re-dryers at Carrollton, Carlisle, Mayville and Cynthiana, it was stated, will enable the Association to save a considerable sum which it was necessary to pay out last year in order to handle the tobacco as rapidly as delivered to the Association.

The new storage plants will be 200 feet in size, of modern construction, with best obtainable roofing, and so built as to prevent excessive loss to the growers from the shrinkage of stored tobacco.

Work on the new storage houses will start immediately and they are expected to be ready by the time the growers are ready to deliver the new crop of tobacco.

It was said at the Association offices that this is regarded as one of the biggest moves yet made by the Association in the interest of the members, as the saving effected is likely to run close to a million dollars in re-drying and storage charges, and it will enable the Association to take care of all the 1924 crop delivered to it.

The directors also authorized the construction of rental of plants in Tennessee sufficient to take care of the crop of members in that state.

The officers, all of whom were elected unanimously, are:

President and General Manager, James C. Stone, Lexington.
Vice Presidents, James N. Kehoe, Mayville, and Bush W. Allen, Harrodsburg.
Secretary and Treasurer, H. Lee Early, Lexington.
General Counsel, Aaron Sapiro, Chicago.
Members of Executive Committee, in addition to president and two vice presidents, H. K. Bourne, New Castle, and Judge Robert W. Bingham, of Louisville.

Rev. Sam Allen

CLOSES UNION REVIVAL SERVICES LAST SUNDAY NIGHT AFTER TWO WEEKS OF SPLENDID PREACHING

Certainly a unanimity of regret pervaded the capacity, yet overflowing house, which heard Rev. Sam W. Allen preach his farewell sermon of the Union revival last Sunday night. Rev. Allen's excellent preaching, and Mrs. Allen's equally splendid singing, have completely captivated the Burlington people, and one need not to have attended the Sunday night service to have had ample proof of this contention. While each service was well attended, there were several nights when numbers were turned away, but Sunday night being warm the windows were thrown open permitting all to hear.

Rev. Allen is a Christian evangelist, but in this town received the unstinted support of both Rev. Adams and Rev. Gillespie, and their respective Baptist and Methodist congregations. The entire meeting was conducted at the Methodist church, with a single exception of Sunday morning last, when all heard Rev. Adams deliver a splendid sermon at the Baptist church.

Rev. Allen wife and son left Monday for Robinson, Ky., where they immediately begin another series of meetings.

During the meeting Mrs. Geo. A. Porter united with the Baptist church, while Henry Seikman, Elmer Goodridge and Miss Marie Underhill united with the Christian church. Mr. Seikman intends to place his membership at a Bullittsville, while Mr. Goodridge and Miss Underhill will associate with Bellevue.

Notice.

The Consolidated Telephone Co., expects to complete its line as far as Waterloo by October 15, and all those desiring service on the new line are requested to have their poles ready for their side lines, in as much as the company wishes to have the line completed before bad weather sets in.

Shelby Cowen, of Covington, visited home folks in Burlington, Sunday afternoon.

IN INTEREST OF BOND ISSUE

GOVERNOR ADDRESSES RECORD CROWDS AT WALTON AND BURLINGTON IN THE INTEREST OF THE BOND ISSUE

Governor Wm. A. Fields crossed the southern boundary line of Boone about 1:30 o'clock Monday afternoon on his pilgrimage in behalf of the $15,000,000 bond issue.

The Governor made his way to Walton where he addressed his first public audience in this campaign. He spoke from the pulpit of the Walton Christian church, where a crowd had assembled which filled every available space, with standing room at a premium.

His address occupied about two hours and was highly entertaining and edifying, very much enlightening many folks on this important matter—especially those who had never before heard a speech on the subject.

This meeting finished, the Governor was entertained at supper by Mr. Vest, after which the committee from Burlington composed of County Chairman, A. B. Renaker, J. B. Hume, County Attorney, J. T. Utz, ordered his excellency still farther north for another address at the county seat.

The assembly which greeted the Governor at this point surpassed any crowd that ever before attempted to gather at this court house. Every seat was taken an hour before the speaker arrived, chairs were taken from every available point in reach of the building, both jury rooms, and every inch of other standing room was taken, until the Governor, when he was introduced by Judge J. M. Lassing, looked upon a vast sea of upturned faces, ninety per cent of which were enthusiastically for the bond issue before they trekked out through the court room door.

A safe estimate on the crowd would be 600 in the court room, on a room 600 to 800 in the jury corridors and on the outside, unable to hear the state's chief executive.

The Governor has now spoken in the topmost county in the state, geographically speaking, and people here now think it will be topmost in votes cast for the bond issue on November 4th.

After the speaking the Governor was escorted by his intimate friend, Congressman A. B. Rouse and Judge Sam Adams, of Kenton county, to Erlanger, from where he will go to Bedford tomorrow to continue this campaign.

Hebron High School Notes

Work at the new school building is progressing nicely. The first chapel was held on Monday morning. The Juniors and Seniors furnished the program, which consisted of Bible reading, recitations, current events and singing. The Freshmen and Sophomores will give a program on Monday morning, Oct. 13, 1924.

The boys' and girls' basketball teams have been organized and are ready to schedule games with other teams in the county.

An athletic association was organized last Friday. About twenty-five scholars joined and the dues, which are twenty cents a month, will be used to pay for all kinds of athletic equipment.

A piano was purchased and delivered at the school building last week. The piano taken in Lexington was used to buy the piano and song books. Mrs. Alice Dye is giving music lessons at the school every Tuesday.

The Seniors have chosen their class rings.

William Anderson and Edwin Walton are attending the air races at Dayton, Ohio.

BIRTHDAY CELEBRATION.

On Sunday September 28 several friends and relatives assembled at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Smith in the Petersburg neighborhood to assist Mrs. Smith in the celebration of her 73rd birthday.

Owing to the inclemency of the weather many who had planned to participate in the celebration were unable to be present.

The arrangements had been carefully planned without the knowledge of Mr. and Mrs. Smith, and they were greatly surprised when the guests began to arrive in a downpour of rain with well filled baskets of eatables and numerous useful presents. Those present were E. A. Grant and family, J. E. Gaines and family, W. C. Gaines and family, C. J. Hensley and family, John Burns and family, W. A. Smith and family, Wilbert and Gladys Smith and Miss Helen Schmidt, and Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Smith. An enjoyable day was spent by all present.

ANNUAL FIELD MEETING FOR POULTRY RAISERS

Farmers and poultry raisers from all parts of the state have been invited to attend the third annual poultry field day meeting at the experiment station farm here October 15th, according to announcement sent out by Prof. J. Holmes Martin, head of the poultry work at the College of Agriculture. Four hundred farmers attended the meeting last year, and a larger number is expected this year.

The forenoon will be spent in visiting the experimental farm, looking over the birds in the experiments, inspecting the different breeds, and studying the heavy layers. There will be several 200-egg hens on display, as well as U. K.'s Belle, a Barred Plymouth Rock hen which has laid 21 eggs in 10 1/2 months, and still laying. Prof. Martin and other members of the college staff will discuss poultry problems.

In the afternoon, Dean Thomas P. Cooper of the college will welcome the visitors, and T. S. Townsley, 2 Missouri poultry raiser, will speak on pullet production and selection. Mr. Townsley is a graduate of the Purdue University in Indiana, and was in extension work in Missouri before engaging in commercial poultry raising.

THE COUNTRY TOWN CROWD.

Many people from the cities used to say in former years that they enjoyed going out to the fall cattle shows, since they liked to see what they considered the rustic appearance of the country crowd. They poked fun at the "Rubes," as they called them. They would sometimes take snap-shots of these worthies, to make fun among their own friends.

The country districts have moved a long way from those days. The country fair is a very different looking proposition. We read of stilt shows being held at some of these fairs, and whether held or not, all the people who attend them buy their clothing of merchants who are served by the most progressive wholesale dealers, and they get the same general line of stuff that is sold in the cities. A country crowd looks about the same as a city crowd today as far as clothes go, and country people as a rule may be neater and feel the necessity of taking more pains in their personal appearance.

There is a cleanliness and wholesomeness about the country crowd, seen at one of these events, that is in marked contrast with the city crowd. City conditions, indoor work, etc., give those folks pale and drawn faces, but the country countenance is round and healthy looking. The country girl is a rule, and she need not resort to artificial things to give her the appearance of vitality.

There is a substantial vigor in both women and men in the country crowd, which gives evidence of splendid power and ability to do things. One mingles with such a crowd and gains the impression of ability to do a lot of work and overcome difficulties. Mingling with such a group of people gives one confidence that they will in due time settle the problems and remove the obstacles that have hampered the progress of agriculture in this country.

WELL EARNED PROSPERITY

One of the reasons for the firm business confidence that now exists, even though this is presidential year, lies in the fact that our present prosperity and our bright future prospects are based on the products of the soil. That is real American prosperity, substantial and well earned.

Money is plentiful, credits are high and unemployment is at a minimum. These are the groundwork for the belief prevailing that the business tide is coming in rapidly.

There is ample ground for the premise that times are better because of the improvement in agriculture.

The middle-west's wheat crop is probably the best ever grown, exceeding last year's crop by 119,981,000 bushels. At the average farm price of August 1, this crop had a value of $135,509,000 greater than the value of the 1923 crop. This enables the farmer to re-establish his credits and to become a big factor in the buying market.

The corn crop gives promise of exceeding the record established by the wheat crop. If weather conditions continue favorable, despite the poor start, the yield will average good and the price that is in prospect will be a further aid in putting the farmer back on his feet financially.

Dollar corn is now predicted and many force even higher prices for the great midwest crop, that is doing its part in the great movement to restore the tiller of the soil to his rightful position.

VOTING IS A PRIVILEGE

Voting should be regarded as a privilege rather than a task.

The duty of every good citizen is plain—he should give expression to his mature judgment at the polls.

The way the popular vote has declined in numbers during the last decade indicates that far too many people have given into the temptation to believe that a few votes more or less will not change the result.

They fail to recognize that the grand total is made up of single votes cast.

One voter can speak as decisively and as effectively as another.

A full and free expression of the popular will can not be expressed with half of the voters staying at home.

The tendency to remain away from the polls is dangerous and its growth is a peril that is besetting our representative form of government.

It behooves everyone to qualify for voting according to the law—and then vote.

Just as we go to press word was received that Mrs. Fannie Snyder, who was taken ill at W. W. Carpenter's last Sunday, where she was visiting, died early Wednesday.

EVERLASTING AND FOREVER

The wonders of the wireless continue to increase. Marconi has recently carried on a conversation of nearly six thousand miles with South America, again demonstrating the imperishability of sound and visible images.

It is a physical law, indisputably proven and capable of easy and perfect demonstration, that no sound or motion is ever lost. A friend speaks; we hear the words vanish in the air; but the sound is only gone beyond our hearing—somewhere in the universe, far and forever beyond our ken, those words are flying through space, and will continue to move on and on down the corridors of the ages as long as time is.

It is the same with all motion—our every action is recorded imperishably somewhere in the outer world—everlastingly toward infinity.

As fast as light travels, scientists tell us that the light from the brightest star in the heavens has been a year and a half reaching our eye, and if the star were to disappear tonight, its light would continue to stream through space for a year and a half before we would be conscious of its extinction.

If an observer of a strange race, on another planet than ours, whirling somewhere out in imitable space, an unconceivable distance from our world, was to look at this earth through a telescope of miraculous power, he would behold not us and our present day doings, but the personages and activities of centuries ago.

If the strange observer in the far distant sphere, was also equipped with a microphone of corresponding power to his telescope, he could hear the speech of the actors he saw on the world stage.

All the words that have been uttered since the world began exist somewhere, and their ghosts haunt the universe forever.

The Biblical assertion that a man's words and deeds live after him, is amply verified by science.

There's hidden truth in the ancient myth of the Recording Angel.

IS IT THE OTHER FELLOW OR YOU?

There are many men and women in business and out of it, who absolutely refuse to admit, even to themselves, that they are to blame for things that don't happen to them right. They are never wrong! It is always the fault of somebody else, or of fate, or fortune or chance or circumstance or any other old thing that can serve as an excuse.

Once in a while such a person has counteracting qualities which enable him or her to win. But as a class, self-excusers are self-defeaters. They fight their own shadows and cleave empty air.

Many a local merchant insists that his town is "different." The successful advertising methods of another town will not apply to him. But as a fact, that is a circus act—artificially the same posters and in the same manner in every quarter of the nation. They find no difference in communities or people.

If a business or venture does not prove profitable one way, it will be another, and some other fellow will do it—and has done it. Too many of us persist in attempting to educate people to his idea of what they should read, drink, wear, or believe.

The self-excuser is also very much in love with himself. When he does one little thing he thinks everybody should applaud the performance. But this is a busy world, and humanity does nothing of the kind, and the landscape is dotted over with tombstones erected "in memory of it."

There are all sorts of courage in the world, but the best and bravest: courage of which we know, is for a man or a woman to sit down calmly take an inventory of faults, weaknesses and other detrimental qualities, then start in to eliminate them just as one would pluck weeds out of the garden. Excuses are useless. Analyze but don't explain or apologize. Just get the thing done.

THE COUNTRY'S TURN

Henry Ford is one who believes that a change is coming in the tide which for so many years has swept millions of people out of the country towns into the large cities. He thinks that the overhead expense of living in such centers has become unbearable. The cost of maintaining interest on debts, of keeping up water, sewage and sanitary systems, police, etc., has become so great as to offset the profits of residence in such communities.

He believes there will be a tendency in the future for industries to move out into the country where labor is steady and the production costs are low, that the farmers will go into the factories when farm work is dull, and back to the farms when factory work is slack.

How far such changes can take place in the near future is a question, but there seems little doubt that many of the city industries will move out into country towns for lower priced land, for intelligent labor that is less given to strikes, and for workers who can afford to labor at moderate wages because living costs are low.

The drift into great cities has been deplored by social economists, because it is manifestly healthier, and less exhausting to the nervous systems of men and women to have homes and do work in quieter and less congested scenes.

It seems an abnormal and unnatural condition of things when such a terrible crowding exists, that every inch of city land comes to have a high value, while in the country land and all the facilities of comfortable living are to be had without limit. Some day the tide will turn from the cities, and the advantages of conducting production in country towns will become evident to the business world. There have been signs in recent years that that tendency has already begun.

NAVY DAY

Navy Day will be observed this year on Monday, October 27th, in pursuance of a custom established several years ago. "The objects of Navy Day," said Commander Marion Eppley, who has just arrived in Washington to conduct the nationwide observance of the day, "are to pay a tribute to the past and present services of the Navy to the nation, and better to acquaint the American people with what the Navy means to them."

"To know the Navy," Secretary of the Navy Wilbur said, in promising the cooperation of the Navy Department in the Navy Day observance, "is to believe in it. The Navy welcomes the most minute and searching scrutiny." People who live in or are visiting seaboard towns will be given an opportunity to inspect the nation's warships when Visitors' Day will be declared on all vessels, which will be sent all of the larger cities along the Atlantic, Pacific and Gulf coasts. The Navy League plans to conduct a campaign of education on the Navy throughout the interior through the press, radio broadcasting stations and other agencies.

News of the death of Richard I. Bruce, Jr., his home in Chicago, last Wednesday, was received in Burlington, last Saturday. "Stringtown Days Revived"

CINCINNATI AUTHOR JOINS HIS BOOK CHARACTERS IN RELIVING WEDDING DAYS OF FIFTY YEARS AGO

The following taken from Tuesday's Cincinnati Enquirer will be of interest to Boone county citizens:

A world-renowned man of science sat in a dining room in the Hotel Gibson where two of his boyhood friends, brothers, had met to celebrate the golden anniversary of their wedding to sisters.

And thus were reunited not only friends, but three characters from the pages of "Stringtown on the Pike," a portrayal of Kentucky life in the peaceful, hospitable days of a half century ago.

For the man of science was Prof. John Uri Lloyd, author of the book, and the men who celebrated their golden wedding anniversary were Albert C. Souther, 73 years old, and Frank E. Souther, 75 years old, boyhood playmates of the Cincinnati scientist, and author, who stepped from the book and lived again with him the scenes he had depicted in the chapter, "Old Corn Juice."

It was 50 years ago yesterday that the "Souther boys," of Florence, Ky., married sisters, Miss Rose Althea Ashby, and Miss Anne E. Ashby, belles of Cincinnati, Ky. John Uri Lloyd, native of Florence, and lifelong friend of the Souther, was one of the witnesses to the wedding.

Following the ceremony the Souther boys brought their brides to Cincinnati and to the Gibson House for a honeymoon.

As the fiftyth anniversary of their wedding approached they conceived the idea of living again the days of their honeymoons. Thus, yesterday they again visited the place of their honeymoon, now the new Hotel Gibson. With them came the twin sons of Albert C. Souther, Dr. Charles T. Souther, assistant corner of Hamilton County, and Chester A. Souther, of the General Motors Company, Detroit, Michigan, and their sons' wives.

At the hotel they were met by Prof. Lloyd and Mrs. Charles Mitchell, who had been a member of the bridal party 50 years ago.

To celebrate the fiftyth anniversary of their parents' wedding the sons last night gave a dinner at the hotel. Fall flowers in all the glory of autumn coloring were scattered in profusion about the room. Tiny baskets of gold held bon-bons and golden marriage bells dangled from their handles. In the center of the table was a huge golden wedding cake bearing the figures 50 in gold.

After the dinner the party, following again in the footsteps of the bridal party of 50 years ago, visited the Grand Opera House.

The Souther boys and their brides of yesterday are to remain in Cincinnati for a few days, visiting once more the scenes they witnessed 50 years ago through the eyes of youth and love.

Then they are to return to Florence and their happy days of laughter, love and merriment.

2,500 IN CLUB CAMPS

Nearly 2,500 Kentucky farm boys and girls, members of junior agricultural clubs, were this year given outings or vacations in club camps conducted by the College of Agriculture, the State Y. M. C. A. and the State Board of Health Camps were held in 34 counties in which boys' and girls' club work is being carried on by county agents or home demonstration agents. Many of the camps were provided by local people, through donations of enterprising farmers and business men. The camps were open at all times for inspection, and it is estimated that a total of 35,000 people visited them.

Dr. Will R. Chambers, a former well known citizen of the Petersburg neighborhood, but who about twenty-two years ago located in Los Angeles, California, was visiting his mother, Mrs. Laura Chambers, of Petersburg, and his brother C. Scott Chambers, of Walton, several days the past week. He was in Burlington, Monday, meeting with friends of years gone by, and while in town made the Recorder office a pleasant call. He left for his home Wednesday accompanied by his mother, who will spend the winter with him in the "Golden Gate State."

Master Commissioner Sales

R. E. Berkshire, Master Commissioner, made five sales at the court house door last Monday. The old hotel property in Burlington was purchased by J. M. Lassing and J. M. Eddins for $33,000; a house and lot in McVillie by Willard Ryle for $525; a house and lot in Walton by Bertha Moxley Fullilove for $3,300, and the other property sold was claimed by the three banks holding mortgages thereon.

P. E. Bruce, of near Petersburg, and John Sommers, of near Richmond, two of the Recorder's good friends were transacting business in Burlington, Tuesday. They paid their respects to the Recorder office.

While attempting to cross the ferry Boat on the Ohio shore Tuesday morning at Anderson Ferry, Capt. Geo. Kottmeyer hit an obstruction and could not make the lower landing and backed the boat out and made the landing on the upper side of the ferry road, and upon making an investigation it was found that the cause of the trouble was a new Ford coupe. The coupe had been run in the river or the brakes had failed to hold it about 15 feet of water. The steering wheel was locked. The anchor was dropped and the coupe pulled out of the river by a truck. The owner of the coupe is not known.

Newspapering, Like Old Gray Mare, Ain't What It Used To Be—Grandon
Newspapermen of the present day, accustomed to electrically operated linotype machines, presses, paper cutter, and to the use of gas-fuel metal pots and other applications of this fuel in newspaper work, don't know much about problems that faced their predecessors, believes D. W. Grandon, editor of the Sterling, Ill., Daily Gazette.
"Fifty years ago," declares this editor, "weekly newspapers were printed on the old Washington hand press. Ninety per cent of these weeklies were just able to live, and changed ownership frequently because expenses were larger than income."
"Half a century ago it would take two men, working steadily, much harder than most men work today, an hour to print two pages on one side of 240 sheets of newspaper. Today, even on the small daily, two men could turn out 20,000 copies of a sixteen-page paper, printed and folded, in an hour."
"With the old Washington hand press, it would require 666 hours of hard work to do that job. On an eight-hour basis it would take 83 days to print one edition of 20,000 copies of a 16-page paper. It would take the life time of two men to print one Sunday edition of some of the big city papers. The progress made has been staggering."

SCHOOL FIRES
Fatalities in school building fires for the most part attract only local attention, but a chance flame or spark that might be the means of wiping out many youthful lives, is an ever present menace that should be guarded against by school authorities.
As the season is here for the firing of furnaces and stoves in school buildings, it behooves those who have this work in charge to be ever on the alert for fire.
Though fire-proof construction of school buildings is followed now, there are still many virtual fire traps in use. And although old buildings are being replaced by more modern ones, the average for the U. S. is five school fires every day in the year.
Fire drills are almost universally practiced in the public schools, but they must be regarded as supplementary precautions, not primary ones; they merely reduce the consequences of fire that never should take place.
The financial loss and interruption of school work are of importance, but the most serious feature is the loss of life among children.
Permitting a fire hazard to exist in a school building is little short of criminal.
"God's Acre," a plot of land which received its name because its products will be sold and the proceeds used for the advancement of religion, is without a boll weevil on it. The issue is true of the remainder of the ten-acre plot which was planted by Robert Blackwell, of Albany, Georgia, who decided that he would reserve one acre for God.
The United States is using her war time explosives for building roads and clearing lands. When the war closed she owned 100,000,000 pounds of T. N. T. and "pyrotol" explosive, which she has been giving free to the states building highways and the settlers who need it to clear their land.

If there is going to be more enthusiasm in this campaign, the candidates and others having bars will have to loosen up.

The people who can't remember to vote, might go to Russia or Africa, where they will not have to be bothered about such duties.

Motorists are asked to have their brakes tested, but none of them should think that the proper place to do it is a crowded street crossing.

Not merely do many railroad trains have to plough through snow in the winter, but they have to knock automobiles out of the way at the highway crossings.

Many people who are afraid of hard muscular work will evidently have to spend their lives in an office chair, but they should look out that they do not fall off into the wastebasket.

After paying $100 for repairs on his automobile, the motorist sometimes wishes he had had a chance to pay $50 in taxes to keep the roads so they would not shake his car loose.

Claimed that some rooms in modern houses are so small that you can't swing a cat in 'em, but fortunately the humane societies are now opposed to cat swinging so it doesn't have to be done.

When advertising has built up such wonderful retail business in the cities, who can doubt that country merchants can gain equally good results from advertising, proportionate to the size of their field.

The growth of a business today does not depend on the size of a town. When people can go so easily from town to town to trade, it depends upon the amount of money and the skill used in advertising.

Our ancient ancestors were forced to run the gauntlet by the cruel Indians who hacked at them with their tomahawks, but they might not think it was much worse than crossing crowded streets filled with automobiles now.

The use of electrical energy in agriculture has been developed to a higher degree by the farmers of Venetia, in Northern Italy, than anywhere else in the world, where one group of three hundred and thirty tillers of the soil use ten million kilowatt hours of current a year.

American history does not tell us of any her candidate for President who delivered his message to an audience that paid to hear him. La Follette's pan of "pay as you go" seems to be producing financial results, at least, Senator Wheeler tried it at Pittsburgh with equally good results. Now that the style has been started, a constitutional amendment may soon be in order to abolish all individual campaign contributions and compel candidates to charge admission. At least it simplifies checking up of income and expenses.

"WITHOUT A PAPER"

Not that we are complaining about the "knockers," for we realize that "knockers" are the life of any enterprise, however foolish this assertion may seem. What we mean by a "knocker" is one who is continually finding fault unjustly, and without offering a logical remedy for the fault of which he complains.

Of course we realize that there is that class of people who offer sensible criticism, then follow it up with a well-timed suggestion for a remedy of the error, whatever it may be, and it is this last named class of citizens that we try to keep in the minority, for the real "dyed in the wool," habitual "knocker" does not hurt anyone, or any business, because people, as a rule, pay no attention to him.

One just, well-timed criticism hurts your business more than all the knocking in the world, for the world knows the difference.

Now, you may say we are "squealing before we are hurt," and we hope you are right, for indeed this paper may have no "knockers," though our conjecture would be that we have plenty of them. In fact we are so certain of it that when we read an editorial in the Grant County News on "Without a Paper," we could but think, how those very "knockers" would miss the county paper if its publication should be suddenly stopped. Read what the Grant County News has to say about conditions as they would surely be "without a paper."

Imagine, if you can, a community like Williamstown without a newspaper. That is a big task for your imagination, to be sure, for every county and practically every small town in America has a local paper. But let us see how much we would miss the well if by some trick of fate the water were to run dry.

First, we would have no way of keeping informed on what is taking place in the community. Old friends might die, others meet with good fortune, but we would have to wait until news finally passed from word to mouth.

Second, we would have no medium for putting over plans looking toward a better town in which to live. We might want to call a meeting of the citizens of the community to consider some matter of vital importance, but it would be difficult to get information broadcast. We might want to hold a fair, or community exhibition of some kind, or might even want to get a turnout for an entertainment, but what success would we have if there were no local paper through which to tell the public all about it?

Or suppose you wanted to conduct an auction sale, dispose of some surplus of merchandise in your store, or inform the public about a new service you have already to offer. Would you find it so easy without a local newspaper?

There is also something else more important than all this. The newspaper means most to the community because it furnishes its citizens with a common body of ideas on what is best for the town and its citizens. It airs grievances, jealousy, envy and ill feeling, and by bringing these little fevers in the life of the community out into the sunshine, it cures them.

Without a local newspaper Williamstown and every other small village would become a community divided against itself.

SHALL YOUNG PEOPLE STUDY LATIN?

In former years most young people who sought a high school or college education, were required to study Latin. During recent years there has been a marked revolt against such a requirement. Many people now feel that the study of the classic languages is not valuable for the ordinary person.

Nevertheless, an investigation made by the American Classical League shows that there are still 40,000 students in Latin classes in the schools of high school grade. Also a great number of college girls and boys are studying it. It is a most remarkable thing that a language which has not been used by any race or nation as its ordinary means of communication for 1500 years should yet be studied by more than 1,000,000 American young people.

Is the time wasted that is devoted to study of a form of speech that will never again be heard on the streets of any city? If not, just where do the gains come in?

No pupil should take Latin unless he is a good student, with an aptitude for learning from books. The people who are going to work with their hands and workers of that kind are more needed today than the other kinds, will not usually gain anything from studying Latin.

But if people are going to depend upon head work, upon their ability to write good letters and express themselves well in forceful English, they had much to gain from Latin study. Latin is the greatest tool of human experience, and the person who can use it with fluency and keen discrimination of the values of words, has a source of great power. The discrimination between words which one learns in studying Latin Greek is a great help toward this forceful use of English speech.

Necessity is responsible for many new words in our dictionaries. There are legitimate coinage and ill-palatable. The latest is "eureumaviate," used in characterizing the army airmen exploit.

Wild Flower Millinery for Winsome Buds

All the little buds in the rosebud garden of girls have to be battered, and blossoms that gladden the earth have counterparts anywhere in apparel, they are to be found in millinery. Here is a winsome bud—sometimes called a flapper, wearing a wildflower hat—as pretty as the wee, crimson-tipped flowers that Bobbie Burns loved and sang of. It is a scratch felt—in any color—and it is very becoming. And one can see in the eyes of the little maid that she loves it.

Honeymoon
The tradition of keeping a "honeymoon" is of ancient origin. Honey-mead was drunk by the better order of Teutonic peoples for a period of 30 days following the marriage ceremony. At the time the Hun drank so freely of wine mixed with honey that he had a marriage and funeral ceremony all in one. The custom of journeying to Niagara falls, or like spot, is a modern addition and interpretation.

MRS. SUSAN ADAMS

HOLDING BACK

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK,
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

MRS. DAYTON was looking over her discarded clothing, and her husband's, to see what might with safety be disposed of without loss or sacrifice to herself or to her family. She had listened recently to an appeal and she wanted to seem charitable and generous and yet not yield entirely to her emotional impulses.

"Here are a couple of vests of your pa's and an old brown skirt of mine," she said to her daughter, Minerva. "I think I'll send them to the committee. They are of no possible use for anything else, and I hate to give away anything that I could use."

"Why don't you put in that gray suit of father's?" Maggie asked. "And your last winter's coat? You'll never wear them again, and they would give some needy person good service." "They seem too good to give away," Mrs. Dayton replied. "and, besides, I'd thought I might cut them up and braid them into a rug; the gray and the blue would go beautifully together. Mrs. Jackson had one in her bedroom last week that pleased me very much."

Mrs. Dayton forgot that she had a trunk full of braided rugs already that she had no place for. It was just the old habit of holding back, of never being quite able to make the surrender. The suit would hang in the closet until it was moth-eaten, the coat would pass from one closet to another, or they would be made into rugs for which she had no use, while down the street there were men and women and children with hardly a rag to hide their shivering, naked bodies.

When Gifford reported to the office the amount of his assessable property he could not quite bring himself to make a clean breast of it.

"I don't believe the other fellows tell the truth," he explained to an intimate friend, "and I can't afford to be skinned." He wasn't quite honest. It is a custom many of us follow. This holding back. We do not give ourselves over to a principle with complete abandon. When we give over we do it grudgingly. When we tell our wives we love them we say so, too often, with reservations. We are afraid to be overenthusiastic, overgenerous, overkind.

"CLINIC"

The free "clinic" is one of the most beneficial of the institutions set up in recent times. The word "clinic" is derived from the Greek through, the French "clinique" which means "reclining." The clinic patient, properly speaking, is one who is confined to bed and who is treated in the presence of students of medical classes.

SILVER DOLLARS

The United States treasury department has started a movement to encourage the wider circulation of silver dollars.

We are heartily in sympathy with it. Why shouldn't silver dollars have circulation, we ask? What's more essential to the life of a silver dollar than circulation?

They lend weight to a man. They give him standing—that is if he has too many in his pocket he can't get up, once he sits down, and therefore he has to stand.

Silver dollars are works of art when carefully polished with quality silver polish.

They are so much easier to throw to the birds than paper money.

One can always take a nice collection of silver dollars with him and spend them with easier conscience because of the relief that comes from being freed of a heavy load.

By all means give us silver dollars. That's about the brightest idea that has come out of Washington since congress adjourned.

SUNDAY SCHOOL AGAIN

Many of the Sunday schools which have suspended their doors have again rounded up their scholars, distributed their "quarterlies," and the buzz of instruction proceeds at the regular hour. Many youngsters will claim that they attend only because their parents require it, but probably most of them would turn up at the usual place if they had their own way.

The youngsters are satisfied to attend the public day schools, because they see it is essential to their success in the world. But they are not always mature enough to see just what the Sunday schools do for them.

They would not like to have their homes in some town where there were no Sunday schools. They could not leave their bicycles standing on the road without their being stolen and base balls would belong to the boys who could lick the other kids. They would better realize what Sunday schools do to protect the rights of the boys and girls.

MAKING CATTLE SHOWS PAY.

Many of the county fairs and cattle shows do not make money, and the difficulty of keeping them running is a worry to their promoters. Many others could be more useful if they could increase their net income, so they could pay for educational features that would promote more scientific farming.

It would help wonderfully, if the business men and other people of a community having fairs, that need a larger income, would contribute their services free to carrying on the work of a fair, and perhaps high school students would be willing to give their services, so that the expenses of the show could be made very low.

This plan for running fairs is meeting with success in some localities, and is relieving the financial difficulties of some shows that used to have trouble in paying expenses.

AN OBJECT LESSON

The object lesson our people have had in watching a man like Owen D. Young work out the European reparations tangle in the capacity of a private citizen has helped crystallize the American mind in favor of more business and less politics in governmental affairs.

Commenting on the work done by Mr. Young, President Lowell of Harvard said: "Owen D. Young, a master builder, through a wilderness of a highway on which the nations may travel and find the road to justice and peace."

Politicians can talk about plans to help the farmer, but American business men in working out the Dawes plan and securing its adoption have done more to furnish markets for the farmer's produce and stabilize agricultural conditions for America and the world than law ever been done before in the world's history.

That's business, not politics.

In 1923 the overseas trade of the world totaled $46,000,000,000, of which the United States had 17 per cent., an increase of 6.5 per cent. over 1913.

ARE ROADS KENTUCKY'S ONLY NEED?

There has been so much agitation over that part of the bond issue which applies to roads that some are prone to overlook that feature of the bill providing for our educational institutions, among which is listed our State University.

It is a deplorable condition that exists when a Kentuckian, and especially a Lexingtonian, opposes a measure such as the bond issue, which provides that $5,000,000 be spent on our State University in five years, and that same individual offers no remedy for the crying needs of that institution.

The Lexington Herald tells us how some Lexington people are fighting the bond issue in the face of these facts. It follows:

A short time since men and women who recognized the inestimable value of Transylvania University inaugurated a campaign to raise $1,000,000 endowment fund for that historic institution. They apportioned to Fayette county $100,000 of this fund, and the citizens of Fayette county responded to the appeal by contributing over $200,000.

There is no institution in America that has a more honorable record than Transylvania. It has been of inestimable service not only to Lexington, to Fayette county and to Kentucky, but to all the Union. In the dim days of the 'eng ago it held aloft the beacon light of education and in many crises led the intellectual life of America. There is no amount of money it could ask to continue its work and maintain its high standard which should not be promptly and cheerfully given.

There is now a project before the public upon which depends the future of the University of Kentucky; by the decision of the voters of Kentucky on November 4 it will be determined whether the University of Kentucky will have such increase in buildings and equipment as to accommodate the youth of Kentucky who desire to attend that institution or whether it must put a limit upon the attendance and refuse to admit hundreds of Kentucky boys and girls who seek a college education.

Under the bond bill the University of Kentucky will receive in five years $5,000,000, which will be expended for additional buildings and equipment, making it possible for it to more than double, probably triple, the number of students who can obtain an education in its halls.

Lexington and Fayette county contributed over $100,000 to the fund, of $1,000,000 asked for Transylvania University. Neither Lexington and Fayette county nor any community in the state will be charged any more in taxes to provide $5,000,000 for the University of Kentucky.

If the bond issue is passed $5,000,000, the interest on which and the redemption of which are provided for through the tax on gasoline and the fees for motor licenses, will be devoted to the University of Kentucky. That $5,000,000 will be spent in Lexington in the next five years and the attendance of the University increased over 100 per cent.

Yet certain Lexingtonians are fighting vigorously, some venomously, the bond issue. And not one of those who oppose the bond issue offers any plan by which the needs of the University of Kentucky can be met.

Not a single opponent of the bond issue dares to answer, or even to discuss, the direct challenge to point out what can be done to meet the needs of the University of Kentucky if the bond issue is defeated.

Yet some individuals and a newspaper are fighting to the limit of their ability and influence to prevent the passage of the bond issue and so prevent the University of Kentucky from obtaining the $5,000,000 that will be obtained under the bond issue.

What answer will those persons and that newspaper make to the youth of the State who, if the bond issue is defeated, will be deprived of an education in the University of Kentucky?

What defense will those persons and that newspaper make if the bond issue should be defeated and the heard of trustees of the University of Kentucky be compelled to

THE CASUALTIES OF HAND-SHAKING

American politicians are supposed to prove that they are fit for the responsibilities of office, not simply by showing up their record of achievement, and by intelligent discussion of the problems of office, but by the physical endurance they manifest in shaking hands with thousands of people.

In our eagerness to clasp the hands of conspicuous leaders, we add much to their burdens. This was illustrated when John W. Davis, Democratic candidate for president, got one arm badly lamed as the result of too enthusiastic handshakes.

It should be remembered that presidents and presidential candidates are not athletes selected for gruelling physical tests. Their fitness should be judged on other grounds than their ability to turn into human pumphandles.

Her funeral was held at the home of her daughter Mrs. Porter of Covington Thursday afternoon. She was laid to rest in Highland cemetery by the side of her husband who passed away a few months ago. The family have the sympathy of this community in their loss.

POULTRY

RECENT METHOD OF FEEDING CHICKENS

A new system for feeding chicks has been substantiated by the University of New Hampshire for that previously recommended by that institution.

When the chicks are taken from the incubator and placed under the brooder stove, they should be given a drink of a mixture of sour milk or buttermilk in which have been beaten up about three eggs yolks per quart of milk.

This mixture should be accessible for the first 24 hours they are under the brooder stove. For the next seven days they should be fed five times a day with a sufficient amount of chick feed—which may be a mixture of equal parts of fine cracked corn, fine cracked wheat, and steel-cut oats—to last ten minutes. As soon as this mixture is eaten, they should be given a sufficient amount of an egg-and-mash mixture to last them about ten minutes more, made with 12 egg yolks to each one and one-half pounds of mash, and mixed thoroughly to produce really a crumbly mixture. Enough of this mash should be fed to provide one egg yolk to each 30 chicks daily.

The second week this feeding should be continued if a sufficient supply of eggs is available. Toward the end of the second week the regular laying dry mash may be given an hour both morning and afternoon, increasing the length of time until it is constantly before the chicks.

The eggs used in this mixture may be those taken out of the incubator on the seventh and fourteenth-day tests. They will add materially in the development of the chicks and will prevent less weakness to a large extent. If no eggs are available, a pint of cod liver oil mixed with 100 pounds of mash may be substituted for the egg-and-mash mixture.

From the time the chicks are three weeks old, they should be fed three times a day with equal parts of mash and chick feed.

Why Does Sour Skim Milk Encourage Hens to Lay?

A year ago the Idaho College of Agriculture, through the department of poultry husbandry, started an experiment to determine the cause of the high production secured from laying hens that were given an abundance of sour skim milk. A study of the analysis of sour skim milk showed it to contain 90.77 per cent water, 0.10 per cent fat, 3.03 per cent milk sugar (lactose), 0.5 per cent lactic acid, 3.5 per cent protein and 0.79 per cent milk ash or salts. It was assumed that water alone was not the stimulating factor. The fat content seemed too low, and the distribution of carbohydrates did not point to milk sugar as a possible source of the problem. A comparison was made of rations containing lactic acid, milk salts, protein-free sour skim milk and sour skim milk. The results showed conclusively that lactic acid in the same solution as in sour skim milk is valueless for egg production. Besides both milk salts and ash entirely failed to stimulate increased egg production. The results all seem to indicate that it is the valuable part of sour skim milk. For two years, the protein-free sour skim milk has not given as satisfactory production as the sour skim milk. A further study is being made into this interesting problem. Pens are now being compared in which rations containing milk curd, milk case, protein-free sour skim milk and sour skim milk are given.

Green Feed Problem

Where the hens have free range, the problem of green feed takes pretty good care of itself, especially if clover or alfalfa fields are convenient. But bare yards are a nuisance. They are only a nuisance, however, at a time when eggs can be manufactured cheaper than at any other time of the year, but they bring about disease and encourage a general filthy condition that is detrimental to present and future flocks.

Poultry Facts

Market all broilers as early as possible.

Take good care of the growing stock and feed well.

Cull or kill the chicks that are lacking in vigor.

Range and exercise is especially desirable for poultry breeding stock.

Sour skim milk or buttermilk kept before the chicks at all times will help prevent diarrhea.

Egg production is uneven throughout the year, being heavy in the spring and summer and light in the fall and winter.

Teach the chicks to roost early. This can be started when the chicks are about a month old. Place the roosts about eight inches above the floor.

Both colony and community poultry houses are in common use, each type having special advantages and disadvantages very much like the similar types of hog houses.

PARENTAL RESPONSIBILITY.

Parents are at fault in more than ninety per cent of the accidents in which children are killed or injured by automobiles, the coroner of a mid-west city has discovered. In the remaining ten per cent, motorists were speeding or driving carelessly.

This same average may not prevail in all parts of the country, but it is probably about representative of the average city or town.

No one condones reckless or careless driving of automobiles, but there are accidents which the driver can not avoid and which are due entirely to the irresponsibility of children.

Death or injuries that may make them life-long cripples should ever be held up before children as the danger that lurks in the street, in the form of automobiles, that may crush their little bodies and break their bones.

They can not be turned too frequently in this manner. They should be taught never to cross a street without first looking both ways. They can not be too cautious. The responsibility is clearly upon the shoulders of parents.

130 RADIOS TO THE COUNTY.

No section of the public has taken to the idea of radio with greater avidity than the agricultural community. The United States Department of Agriculture, which has just completed a survey of the use of radio sets on farms finds that there are now more than 370,000 radio sets installed on farms, as compared with 145,000 a year ago. The average is 130 sets a county. The large audience of "listeners in" on farms derives not only entertainment but valuable information on crop conditions and market quotations. The radio market news service of the department is having a definite and salutary effect on the distribution of farm products, according to market experts, and through it the farmer is enabled to ship his crops where and when he can secure the best price. Through this service farmers in every state receive daily market quotations.

HOW DOCTORS TREAT COLDS AND THE FLU

To break up a cold over night or to cut short an attack of grippe, influenza or sore throat, physicians and druggists are now recommending Calabats, the nasealea Calomet tablet, that is purified from dangerous and sickening effects. Those who have tried it say that it acts like magic, by far more effective and certain than the old style calomet, heretofore recommended by physicians.

One or two Calabats at bed time with a swallow of water—that's all. No salts, no nausea nor the slightest interference with eating, work or pleasures. Next morning your cold has vanished and your system feels refreshed and purified. Calabats are sold only in original sealed packages, price ten cents for the vest-pocket size; price ten cents for the large family package. Recommended and guaranteed by druggists. THE DAUNTLESS WORLD FLYERS

A remarkable feature of the round the world flight is the indomitable courage, the lasting cheerfulness of the flyers.

They, who literally poughed thru seas of fog and mist, passed through regions of cold, over hot sands, through constantly changing and dangerous currents of air, come down smiling.

Who of us have not felt the lone liness when away from home and friends even for a day or a week?

Under favorable and comfortable circumstances? Perhaps in an auto jaunt across the state, or in an adjoining county, we have wished but to be back at our own fireside.

Yet these brave heroes battle with the elements, gas, motors, gravity, with uncertainty of route and location, in order to promote the cause of aviation and thereby place their country in the foremost ranks of aerial adventure.

The names of these men will go down in history with deserving gratitude on the part of the American people; and the whole world will join in respect to their heroism.

COTTON TRIED OUT IN HICKMAN COUNTY

Hickman county, Ky., farmers are in the midst of picking their 6,000 acres of cotton which they grew this year, in an effort to add another cash crop to their farming program, according to E. J. Kilpatrick, of the College of Agriculture extension service, who attended a tour of farmers in that county. There is evidence that the crop will be profitable this year. Mr. Kilpatrick said, as much cotton was seen that was well matured. Several fields were inspected which will make half of a pound to the acre, which, at 20 cents a pound, would return $50 an acre, or $25 for each the landowner and the tenant.

Many Hickman county farmers grew five acres or more of cotton each this year, and a few as much as 200 acres, and several 100 acres or more. The larger growers obtained Negro tenants from Mississippi, who did the work for half of the crop. A six-stand gin has been erected at Clinton, and another one at Oakton, Hickman county.

Cotton replaced some tobacco this year, and, if profitable, will be grown more extensively next year, farmers told Mr. Kilpatrick. It would add another cash crop, and in a measure take the place of wheat, which was once extensively grown in the county, but abandoned when yields became so low that there was no money in it.

Farmers on the tour saw the results of variety and fertilizer tests made under the supervision of County Agent G. W. Bacon, and also heard S. A. Robert, superintendent of the West Tennessee experiment station, tell about cotton experiments at Jackson, Tenn. He spoke enthusiastically about cotton in Kentucky, and recommended the growing of Trico and Express, two early varieties. Fertilizer tests in Hickman county showed the best results from the use of 200 pounds of acid phosphate and 100 to 150 pounds of nitrate of soda per acre, according to Mr. Kilpatrick.

PREVENTION RICKETS

Rickets is a disease occurring in children under two years of age in which there is softening of the bones causing bowlegs, protruding abdomens, due to relaxed muscles and nervousness with sensitiveness to touch. Rickets is a deficiency disease, the cause being lack of sunlight and a diet lacking in lime salts and fat vitamins.

In the prevention of rickets there are three essentials: First, the baby must be strong and well at birth. To insure this the expectant mother should have prenatal care and healthy diet every day before the baby is born and during the nursing period should include plenty of green vegetables and milk. Second, the baby should be breast fed, because rickets is less frequent in breast-fed babies. If the mother does not have sufficient milk she should continue to nurse the baby and supplement the feedings with modified cow's milk. Third, the baby must have fresh air and sunlight. He needs it as much as the plant and flowers that become pale and wither if denied sunlight. A certain amount of direct exposure to the sun's rays is needed to prevent rickets.

Specialists and the Bureau of Child Health advise that every baby, after three months of age be given five drops of Cod-Liver Oil twice a day after feeding. This may gradually be increased to one-half a teaspoonful three times a day after feeding. Plain Cod Liver Oil is best for babies—it may be given in orange juice or fruit juice or plain, for children do not object to the taste, usually they like the oil. If given in small amounts at first there is practically no danger of upsetting the digestion. Cod Liver Oil is rich in the phosphorus and lime salts which are so necessary for bone growth, therefore it is valuable as a food and used as such in preventing rickets.

The Henderson county apple crop is estimated at 70,000 barrels, valued at $280,000. Ten thousand sheep were treated for stomach worms in Grant county this year. Five hundred cows were treated for tuberculosis in Muhlenburg county, in August, and not one reacted. A total of 1,500 have been tested in the county, with only two reactors. H. L. Nance, a Ballard county fruit grower, expects to harvest 10,000 bushels of apples from 35 acres of trees. A car load of purebred Hampshire and Southdown rams were recently distributed among farmers in Hopkins county. Kentucky has 10,000,000 hens, or more than all the New England states combined.

THE POST'S ANSWER

We quote an editorial from the Kentucky Post, entitled "Boone-co. Roads," in which the editor quotes and criticizes one of our editorials of recent date. It follows:

"Boone County Roads"

Boone county citizens have an idea that the passage of the $75,000,000 bond issue will mean that Boone-co. will get some good roads. The citizens are to be commended for wanting good roads, for good roads mean prosperity, but the Boone county citizens should do a little figuring on their own part and see how many miles of good road their county will get out of the bond issue.

Governor Fields is promising all counties to complete all the roads on the primary road system, when he knows that of the money which is supposed to go for roads that the average number of miles of road in each county will be something like 10 miles.

The Boone County Recorder chides Covington for its opposition to the bond issue in the following language:

As this is being written they are making elaborate preparations, by the time it is read they will have come and gone.

We have reference to the Northern Kentucky Good Roads Association and the Covington Industrial and Business Men's Club, who are coming out to see us, say "Howdy Folks" and get better acquainted or, in other words a "Good Will-Get-Together" excursion.

With this excursion we are heartily in accord, we are in sympathy with the purpose of the trip, namely, to get the citizens of our county and those of our neighbors, to trade in Covington in preference to Cincinnati, which is only fair and equitable. We want to build roads over in Covington, in order that, if it is brought about, we can patronize our neighbors in this respect, and we refer to our past utterances on these subjects.

Now, in all fairness, we wish to express our views in these connections from another angle.

Our citizens are principally farmers. They must drive to Covington; to practice these neighborly principles, which we both endorse. They are in the mud, and have been so for many years over a century. By means of an exorbitant land tax they have tried to build roads over which they might come to you, and as you well know, they have failed. And now in the year 1924 they at last see the dawn of a new era in road building, in the form of the bond issue, which provides that you folks help us a little—three cents on each gallon of gas that you use. We are willing to pay three cents to come to you, why aren't you willing to pay it to come to us?

You may answer, "We are already paying it"—yes, but if the next legislature removes the tax, who will pay the bill? Why, the farmer.

The bond issue bill clinches the gasoline tax for thirty years, we are for it and it will carry if you folks will be neighborly, practice a little reciprocity, and truly "get-together."

The Post Again

The bond issue is opposed in Covington and throughout the state because it will not do what it is promised. It will do it. It will not build the roads the people of the state must have, but it will simply give the people of Kentucky a chance to pay out something like fifty millions of dollars in interest.

Boone county will stand a better chance for good roads in the pay-as-you-go plan than Covington business men will use their influence at any time to make the department heads see the light of day. A direct road from the Dixie Highway to Louisville through Boone county is the next project to be considered in Northern Kentucky. Covington and the Northern Kentucky Good Roads Association will certainly help to obtain this object. But we don't have to vote bonds of a floating debt to get it.

"Figuring On Our Own Part."

In the first place we will say that in answer to this desire to say but little. We certainly can not say less than the editor of the Post, Mr. Susong, has said.

Mr. Susong takes a mean liking to the citizenship of Boone county, when he infers that they cannot figure on their own part. Our citizens have "figured on their own part" to the extent that they had rather trust what they can read from the bond bill in "black and white" than the support Mr. Susong's editorial offers, when he says he will try to make the "department heads see the light of day."

In our experience with the department heads they have always seen the light of day very readily. The bond bill plainly provides what Boone county will receive in the event of its passage, and we are trusting that, and not any promises that we have never heard Governor Fields make. Mr. Susong says the Governor is promising completion of the primary system. We have never heard of those promises.

Mr. Susong has certainly thrown up his hands in complete surrender when he mentions the interest we will have to pay as his principal objection. We are aware of the fact that we must pay interest when we are paying money. Boone county has, or is paying, interest of $200,000 in bonds and Kenton $500,000. The only difference being that this interest was paid by a general property tax, and the bond bill provides that the gasoline user pays the other. From Mr. Susong's statement he no doubt prefers the property tax.

We deny that we were "chiding" Covington as Mr. Susong asserts. We were only appealing to them for their aid.

Mr. Susong has exercised about as much judgment in his opposition to the bond issue as he has in his support of Bornhorst as a candidate for Congress against a man of the calibre of A. B. Rouse.

INDUSTRIAL CLUB LETTER

We received the following letter too late for publication in last week's issue of the Recorder. This letter is an answer to Mr. Henry Jenisch, Industrial Club President, by Mr. A. B. Renaker, chairman of the Boone County Good Roads Committee. The letter follows:

Boone County Recorder,

Dear Sirs:

Thank you very much for your copy of The Recorder of the 25th and I particularly noted the "Get-Together" article that you have marked.

I am in touch with a great many of the Covington people and especially with the business and professional classes and think it is only fair to say in justice to them that I have never heard anyone of them make a single objection to that part of the seventy-five million dollar bond issue which is to be used for good roads. Covington and I say say Kenton county stands for good roads everywhere. They have proven that by bonding themselves to the extent of one-half million dollars a few years ago. Their objection to the proposed seventy-five million dollar bond issue, as I understand it, is largely on account of the six million dollar floating debt rider, their contention being that if this six million dollars is paid what is to prevent Frankfort from immediately beginning to contract another floating debt?

Some, too, for one reason or another, object to some of the proposals regarding the disposition of the balance of the nineteen millions of dollars but never a word against the fifty million for good roads. It is unfortunate, from the standpoint of good roads, that the fifty million for good roads was not put on the ballot separately. Had that been done I am confident Covington would have stood by it almost unanimously.

I want to say further that I have never heard a single complaint about the 3c gasoline tax. They all pay it freely and gladly.

There are also some who believe that Kenton county and other counties like situated, who have bonded themselves to build good roads, should have been reimbursed at least partially for money so expended. In fairness I think that that should have been done, however, I feel that the people of Covington are broad enough to overlook that and will not let it influence them in voting on the issue. All of us fully appreciate that Kentucky needs good roads and also believe that all of us are willing to pay for those roads. This whole discussion and the final analysis being simply a question of how to pay for them. Whether by a direct tax as, for instance, the gasoline tax, or a bond issue.

After all is said and done it might be illustrated by the story of two men who want to go to Lexington; one goes via the L. & N. the other via the Southern; both reach Lexington so, after all, what difference does it make?

Very courteous letter Mr. Jenisch has written us, for which we thank him, and in our few remarks in answering it, we intend to be equally as courteous.

Mr. Jenisch mentions two leading features of the bond issue, which he says are objectionable in the main to the business and professional classes of Covington men.

In speaking of one—the $6,000,000 floating debt—we wish to ask Mr. Jenisch this question: Do you think, Mr. Jenisch, that officialdom at Frankfort will be more liable to contract additional indebtedness simply because the $6,000,000 debt has been changed in form? In other words, we do not think the $6,000,000, and we will have renewed our note to that amount, will incite our officials to become more reckless and incur additional indebtedness. Some of us, in renewing our personal notes, would have been in a bad predicament, had our banks turned us down on that ground.

The next point has already been discussed quite publicly and freely, and at this time we cannot discuss that very fully for lack of space. That point is, so Mr. Jenisch says, that some Covington people oppose the distribution of the remainder of the $25,000,000. This is the "bond issue of contention" and which the main fight is centered around and we will speak of it fully in a later issue.

Mr. Jenisch closes with an illustration that is rather amusing to us. He says that either road we travel whether "bond issue" or "pay-as-you-go" we will ultimately reach our goal. Right here is where we differ widely. One of these roads he mentions we call the "pay-as-you-go" road, the other the bond issue road. We have been traveling the "pay-as-you-go" road for 130 years, Mr. Jenisch, and we have found out that it doesn't take us anywhere, not even as far as Lexington.

W. B. WILSON URGING ELECTION OF DAVIS

Former Labor Secretary Calls Democratic Candidate Friend of Farmers and Workers.

Washington, D. C.—William B. Wilson, first Secretary of Labor, who served from 1913 until 1921, is urging the workers of the country to support John W. Davis and Charles W. Bryan, Democratic presidential and vice-presidential candidates, because of their long record of friendliness and helpfulness to labor. The following formal statement of Mr. Wilson's reasons for the working people's preference for Mr. Davis was issued by the former Secretary in Washington several days ago:

DAVIS AND BRYAN FRIENDS OF LABOR

By W. B. WILSON

Former Secretary of Labor, 1913-1921
Information reaching Democratic headquarters shows that large numbers of officials and members of labor organizations are giving their support to Davis and Bryan because of the unequal labor record of the Democratic Party and the fact that the Democratic platform is the most favorable to labor of any presented in this campaign, and that both of the candidates have clear labor records.

More than a month ago the statement was given wide publicity that it all of the public career of John W. Davis not a single word is cited or can be cited antagonistic to the rights of labor. In the face of a strenuous campaign where even matters of minor importance are magnified, no one has been able to point to any official act of his that in the slightest way tarnishes a record that has been consistently favorable to labor.

In the light of these facts as they become generally known and the knowledge that citizenship is personal and every individual must be responsible to his own conscience and judgment for the proper exercise of the franchise Davis and Bryan are daily growing stronger with the wage-workers of the country and the great mass of the common people.

Farm Incomes Shrink; Living Costs Mount

Agricultural Producers Lose Fifteen Billions of Capital Investments During Harding-Coolidge Regime; Official Report Shows.

Washington, D. C.—Proof of the disastrous effects of the deflation of agricultural prices and values begun by the Republican Congress in 1930 and continued under the first year of the Harding-Coolidge administration is furnished in a recent official report from the Department of Agriculture, over which presides Secretary Wallace, himself a Republican and member of President Coolidge's cabinet. The following is an extract from this report:

"As a means of gauging how the agricultural depression affected farm standards of living in the four years since 1919-1920, the departments points out that in this period whole-sale prices of all commodities declined only 25 to 30 per cent., retail prices of 22 food articles declined only 30 to 25 per cent. and living costs declined only 13 to 15 per cent., while the farmer's income declined as much as 60 to 72 per cent. The department also notes that, besides suffering this great decline in current income, the farmers experienced a deflation of property values by which the worth of capital investments owned by farm operators dropped from $48,500,000,000 to $33,422,000,000, a shrinkage which would indicate that the farmers' share in the country's total agricultural property receded from 61 per cent. to 56 per cent."

The same article presents the result of a survey made of 16,000 owner-operated farms for 1923, showing that, allowing $70 for the value of the labor of the farmer and his family, the farm showed an average net balance to the farmer for the year of $270, or 15 per cent. on the average value of the farm real estate and its improvements, a "return barely sufficient to pay interest charges," and leaving practically nothing as a return on the farmers' own capital.

"VICTORY VOTE FOR DAVIS"

Democratic Women Start Work To Get Feminine Voters To Polls.

Washington, D. C.—A drive to reach the hundreds of thousands of women voters who have made no political affiliation and have never cast a vote for president, has been started by the Democratic National headquarters in Washington, D. C., under the direction of Mrs. Halsey W. Wilson, of New York, who has for two years been director of education and is widely known as an organizer and director of Schools of Democracy.

FARMERS PAY TARIFF

Duty On Steel Costs Them $100,000,000 On Agricultural Implements.

New York—High protective duties on steel, and unlawful combinations of manufacturers and sellers of agricultural machinery and implements have operated to increase the cost of this equipment on farms. H. E. Miles, chairman of the Fair Tariff League, a protectionist organization, is authority for the statement that the Republican tariff makes the "cost of farm implements at least 10 per cent. above honest protection and likely 15 per cent." He says that this excessive "protection" on steel adds a total of $100,000,000 a year to the prices farmers have to pay for their machines and implements.

SOY BEAN SUPERIOR FOR DAIRY CATTLE

One of the best home-grown feeds that can be grown anywhere is soy beans, a crop that should be known on every dairy farm. The soy bean may be combined advantageously in many systems of crop rotations. It is especially adapted to short rotations that take either an entire season or a part of a season following some grain crop. In the Southern states the crop is adapted to practically the same places as cowpeas, says W. J. Keegan, dairy husbandman at Clemson college, who believes that soy beans should have a prominent place on every dairy farm in the state. The feeding value of soy-bean seed, which contain from 30 to 40 per cent protein, is very high and compares favorably with other concentrated feeds. The growing of soy-bean seed will enable the dairy farmer to produce at a moderate cost at least part of the high protein concentrates necessary for milk production. Soy-bean seed contain a higher percentage of digestible nutrients than cottonseed meal, linseed meal or wheat bran.

Soy-bean seed ground into meal has been found a most excellent feed for dairy cows. The Massachusetts agricultural experiment station compared soy-bean meal and cottonseed meal, using the same ration otherwise. The quantity of milk produced from the soy-bean ration was slightly higher. At the Tennessee station in a similar comparison of the two feeds, the yields both of milk and butterfat were about 5 per cent greater for the soy-bean meal.

In the South, as a feed for dairy cows, perhaps soy beans in hay form is the most valuable. As compared with hay from other leguminous crops, soy-bean hay is equal or superior to any, not excluding alfalfa. Soy-bean hay can be much more readily and easily cured than cowpea hay. The chief value of soy-bean hay lies in its high content of digestible protein. In feeding value it is superior to red clover or cowpeas, and as indicated by comparative feeding tests, is equal to alfalfa for milk production.

Spring Freshened Cows Are Not Meeting Favor

Custom says, "Freshen your cows in the spring." Her arguments are: Feed is cheap in the spring; cows will go out on luxuriant pastures, take care of themselves, produce a lot of milk and all their owners need to do is to milk them and make money. Custom argues that it costs too much to feed cows and raise calves during the winter months, and that expensively equipped barns, ventilating systems, etc., are necessary where winter dairying is followed. These are all the arguments custom advances and she refuses to listen to the many objections to spring and summer dairying, a few of which are as follows:

Although it is true that it is much cheaper to produce milk in April, May and June, so is it true that the price secured for milk in those months is extremely low—not once in a while, but always.

Spring-freshened cows have only three good months to work.

July and August bring droughts, dry pastures, heat, flies and busy harvest. If there are any worse factors for turning cows dry, they are not readily apparent. These factors do turn cows dry, rob them of flesh and condition and they are largely accountable for the very low average production of milk.

Spring-freshened cows are dry when fall comes along with high prices for milk and its products, or they are so nearly dry that all that can be afforded is just to winter them as cheaply as possible and look forward to spring freshening when they will again give a lot of milk for three months when milk is cheapest.

Dairy Hints

Provide covered salt boxes in the shade and easily accessible.

To prevent being overrun with flies, clean the premises daily in summer if possible.

Select new dairy animals to be shown at fairs next fall and begin fitting them.

The young spring calves should be placed in lots or pastures which have abundant shade and clean fresh water. They should also be provided with salt the same as the milking herd.

"Hard times" is a meaningless phrase to farmers who keep cows, sows, and hens and a good garden.

Consumption of dairy products in this country has increased 17 per cent in the last seven years.

Kindness may be sentiment, but it pays in handling cows. It may not cause them to produce more abundantly but it surely makes the job of getting what they do yield more pleasant.

Political Eye-Openers

Is the Republican party ashamed of its record of corruption in the Cabinet?

Not so you can notice it. There is no repentance in its attitude. Its sole strategy in combatting this tale of dishonor is dependence on the short memory of the public.

Have the people forgotten this record of shame of the party's leading representatives?

Evidently the G. O. P. thinks so. It is flaunting its scarlet letters of shame in defiance or disregard of public opinion.

The behavior of the administration at Washington shows that it believes its iniquities have been forgotten. It is now proposed to HONOR, instead of to disgrace one of the authors of the nefarious Teapot Dome compact. Secretary of the Navy Wilbur, and President Coolidge want the Senate to make a permanent Rear Admiral out of John K. Robinson.

Who is Robinson? He's the naval officer who originated the plan to drill the oil out of the reserves. He's the only officer in the navy who approved of the Teapot Dome leases. He's a native of Michigan, the home state of Edwin Denby, forced out of the Cabinet because of the Teapot Dome.

Robinson learned of Teapot Dome from the son of Doherty who said he expected to make $100,000,000 out of the leases. Doherty was a junior officer in the navy under Robinson.

Unless the Senate makes him a Rear Admiral to stay Robinson's rank will revert to that of a captain soon. Promoting this officer is no more logical than it would be to restore Fall, Denby and Daugherty to the Cabinet.

Honors for two.

One the originator of the scheme to despoil the public domain; the other passively acquiescing in it. Gold medals commemorating the thefts of 'Forbes from the Veterans' Bureau are next in order.

The United States senate used to be called a "rich man's club." Maybe that's why Fred M. Sackett of Louisville wants to get in. He is said to be the wealthiest man in Kentucky.

This reputation of senatorial wealth got a lot after men like the Farmers of the West and A. O. Stanley of Kentucky termed the "richest man intellectually but the poorest financially" in the Senate by Senator Thomas A. Caraway of Arkansas, got into that body.

Of Senator Stanley's opponent it might be possible to reverse this description if he landed in that august chamber. He would help in restoring the term, "a rich man's club."

The tariff commission is going to make an investigation into the duty on aluminum.

The Aluminum Trust is owned by the Mellon family, of whom Andrew W. is secretary of the Treasury.

For a number of years the Aluminum Trust had tremendous profits. In the Republican Fordney-McCumber bill the tariff was increased.

So were the profits. These exorbitant dividends come from your kitchen.

SOME BUSINESS EVIDENCE

(From the Chicago Journal.)

The Fordney-McCumber Tariff Bill was approved September 21, 1922. The next day one of the largest retail merchandising concerns in Chicago published an advertisement which said, among other things:

The signing of the new Tariff Bill will increase immediately the value of hundreds of imported articles. . . . The figures we quote below must be understood to be only approximate, for this advertisement goes to press too early to obtain the final schedules. But advances there will be.

Then, getting down to what Gen. Daves would call brass tacks, the advertisement noted items as follows:

Women's outside black cashmere hose, approximate tariff advance 10 per cent.

Women's black mercerized hose, approximate tariff advance 40 per cent.

Men's split-hole cotton hose, approximate tariff advance 40 per cent.

All-Indian patterned table cloths, approximate tariff advance 25 per cent.

So the list ran, item after item. Literally hundreds of articles were mentioned and the approximate tariff boost given.

There is no political evidence of the highest value. The men who wrote and published these advertisements are business men, not politicians. They were speaking of their own business which they know from basement to attic.

LENI LEOTI RYLE

Leni Leoti Ryle, daughter of Jas. and Mary Stephens Ryle, was born July 22, 1872, in Cass County, Missouri, entered into rest, October 6th, 1924.

On April 6th, 1899, she was united in marriage to Samuel N. Shinkle and to this union were born six sons and three daughters, George Elkan, Henry Greyson, William Porter, Bolivar, Ira, Wallace Clois, Charles Maynard, Mary Luther Surface, Samuel Leslie, and Blanche Faye, who with their father remain to mourn the loss of this loved one. She also leaves two brothers who are saddened by this death, Leoy and Boon Rogers Ryle, and 13 grandchildren. United with Big Bone Baptist church in 1887, at the age of 15 years, and in 1917 transferred her membership to Petersburg church. Being an invalid 12 years, she could not attend church, but her life was so lived that all who knew her, knew that her trust was in God. She has enshrined in the hearts of her loved ones a motto—"Patience" which will be remembered throughout their lives. She has gone to her Heavenly home to receive a crown, but oh how she will be missed in the earthly home—Mother, kind loving, and true, a vacant place that can never be filled, but sweet is the thought that every day we can meet again where there will be no parting, no tears.

"Let not your heart be burdened, ye believe in God, believe also in me."

CARD OF THANKS

While our hearts are heavy with sorrow over the loss of our beloved wife and mother we do not forget to thank our many friends who in a measure helped to lighten our burden by the many kind and loving ministrations shown us in this our greatest hour of need. We wish to thank the many friends and Sun Beam Girls for the beautiful floral offerings. Rev. Carter for his words of comfort and Mr. Siler for his tender and efficient manner in conducting the funeral.

FARM BUREAU NOTES.

Mr. A. H. Long, Secretary of the Kentucky Farm Bureau, was in the county several days the past week in the interest of the Farm Bureau and met with great success in securing new members to the organization.

Co-operative marketing is not a panacea for all the farmers' ills. It has been made a catch word for political fishing. And there are many crimes committed under its protection.

True co-operation in business, whether it is the business of buying or selling, means exactly what the word indicates—"a working together."

The latest effort of the Kentucky Farm Bureau Federation is the one now under way to establish a co-operative purchasing association which is to be organized under the Bingham Co-operative Market Act.

If properly handled, this should succeed and will deserve to succeed. The programme is a very ambitious one, however; to organize a branch in every county.

It will be interesting to see how this works out in comparison with the co-operative stores and buying and selling agencies of the Farmers Union. Both the Union and the Bureau have good ideas, but it depends chiefly upon the man who carries out these ideas, how efficiently they serve the farmer.

THE ACTIVITY OF THE WOMEN

It is wonderful the way the women folks are taking hold of the movements for better country conditions. In South Dakota, for instance, during September the women had charge of community programs and other demonstrations in 300 rural towns, including little plays, community songs, and other features to illustrate community progress ideas. Most of these women must have had active household duties, which seemingly would take all their time. But they have evidently concluded, that if they can push certain measures in a country betterment, they will all become more prosperous, able to have more labor saving tools, there will be more money in farming and local business. In the end they will not have to work so hard and will have more things to do with. That is good sense and foresight.

W. H. Barlow and wife, and son Perry, wife and daughter, of Pleasant Valley neighborhood, were the guests of J. M. Barlow and L. C. Weaver and wife, last Friday. It being Mr. J. M. Barlow's 77th birthday, Uncle Harry brought over a load of provisions to help pull his brother through a long hard winter. Mr. W. H. Barlow passed his 78th mile post through life's journey last August and his many friends were glad to see him looking so hale and hearty.

The old-fashioned idea of being economical and doing without unnecessary things, was as well as it ever was.

BOND CAMPAIGN

NOW IN FULL SWING IN BOONE COUNTY—SPEAKING EVERY NIGHT

County Chairman A. B. Renaker and J. M. Lassing, with a coterie of so-called camp followers, set out immediately following the opening addresses of Governor Fields at Burlington and Walton, to spread the gospel of the Bond Issue.

Judge Lassing is a very eloquent speaker, and, judging from the talk one hears after he speaks, a very convincing one. The drive last week included speeches at the following points: Verona, Tuesday Oct. 7th; Union Wednesday Oct. 8th; Beaver Thursday Oct. 9th; Bellevue, Saturday Oct. 10th; Rabbit Hash Saturday Oct. 11th; Constance Monday Oct. 13th; Petersburg Tuesday Oct. 14th.

At Verona, the first point in the swing around the circuit, Judge Lassing was assisted in the speaking by Mr. Jno. L. Vest, while at Beaver Lick Prof. McCarty of Walton, also helped out with a short discourse. Splendid audiences greeted the campaigners at every point, which would indicate that the people are taking a great interest in the question they will be called upon to decide in November. There were no less than a hundred people at any one of the places visited, while at Beaver Lick, where the committee attended church prior to the bond meeting, there was a capacity house to hear the discussion.

COSTLY NEGLIGENCE

Negligence in driving automobiles, which causes them to run into railroad trains is going to prove costly, because railroads have announced that they expect to retaliate; that instead of being on the defensive as in the past, they will be the complaining parties at the bar of justice.

Not so long ago the Great Northern railroad won a verdict for damages against a resident of Great Falls, Montana, who drove his automobile into a freight train, smashing the side of a freight car. The amount collected was small but the railroad values the judgment as a precedent and expects to press suit of similar character where the motorist is at fault.

Though railroads are frequently at fault in running trains through towns and cities too fast, every fairminded person will admit that they have done much to teach the motoring public caution. It has availed them little, and while they will not lessen their efforts to save lives and themselves damage suits, they can not be blamed if they retaliate in kind.

With millions of automobiles in America, the problem of keeping them off the railroad tracks becomes more and more perplexing. If the railroad companies, in threatening to collect damages and thus touch a vital spot with the automobile owner, can reduce the number of accidents at railroad crossings, they will perform a service not alone for themselves, but for the motoring public as well.

Every other means having failed, the railroads will not be censured for taking this course. The reckless driver, instead of receiving sympathy, will have to show cause why he should not be held responsible for his acts. This may cause him to think twice when he approaches a railroad crossing.

A bill was passed at the last session of the legislature in Maryland which gives the women the right in that state to own merely that she is "over twenty-one" when registering to vote. She will not be compelled to give her name, age, unless she is

A JOURNEY TO TENNESSEE

The night of August 30th, about 9 o'clock, I was waiting with my grandfather for the train to go to Tennessee. When the train came we got on, went to the Pullman car and to our berths. We got up about 6 o'clock looking at everything there was to see. We were getting near Chattanooga, finally we arrived. We got our breakfast. We went out of the hotel and a man came up and asked us if we wanted to go to Chickamauga Park. We agreed to go. So we got into the bus and went across the state line into Georgia. We went to Fort Gresham where we saw soldiers and horses. Then we saw the prison house where they kept prisoners during the world war. Then we went on to Chickamauga Park. This park has 500 cannons and over 2,000 monuments. We saw the Snodgrass house where Gen. Thos. had his headquarters. We then went to Missionary Ridge, here General Bragg had his headquarters. We went from there to the National cemetery. It has the graves of 13,000 of Union soldiers in it. We went to Indian relics. The guide took us to Umbrella Rock. From there you can see seven states and you can see the Tennessee river for 30 miles. We came back to the bus and it took us to the hotel. That night we took a walk to see the little General, a little engine used by the Andrews Raiders in the Civil War. It was all polished up. Then we went back to our hotel and the next day we returned home. While we were on the train I saw many more mountains and towns. When we got back to Boone county I decided that was the best for me.

DON'T LET THE CONSOLIDATED TELEPHONE MOVEMENT DIE

Some weeks ago a very interesting and enthusiastic meeting was held in Burlington for the purpose of considering a plan for the organization of a single telephone system in this county. Those present at this meeting voted unanimously for the plan. A committee was elected for the purpose of drawing up a subscription paper. This was done in fact everything has now been done except (and this is a big word) obtaining the signers on these lists.

Those circulating these papers are allowed $2.00 for each subscriber for $100 in stock obtained. There should now be a number of workers in the field movement, not alone for the $2.00 per subscription, but for the great benefit this system would bring to this county. An active man should make amply enough at this work to repay him for his time and efforts and no one is barred.

We understand the Hebron Co. held a meeting recently, and that every member present subscribed for one share of stock in the proposed company.

Nothing can, nor will defeat this movement, except a lack of application and co-operation.

JOHN J. HOWE

TO SPEAK AT WALTON IN THE INTEREST OF THE DEMOCRATIC TICKET

County Chairman Ben F. Stanifer, has announced that Hon. Jno. J. Howe, of Carrollton, and Miss Alice Hallam, of Covington, will speak at Walton on Friday night, October 17th, at 7:30 p. m., in the interest of the Democratic ticket, both State and National.

In making this speech Mr. Howe will be supporting his rival in the August primary, Hon. A. O. Stanley, who defeated him for the Senatorial nomination. Many of the prominent Democrats of Boone county have expressed their gratification over the fact that Mr. Howe has so heroically buried the political hatchet, and come to the front for his party in the hour of battle.

Mr. Howe is an ardent supporter of Davis and Bryan and those who attend the speech will no doubt hear a very convincing argument for the National ticket, as Mr. Howe is beyond question one of the very best orators in the State.

Mr. Stanifer urgently requests everyone interested in the State and National election to attend.

QUICK RESPONSE

TO SUNDAY NIGHT FIRE ALARM AT A VERY INCONVENIENT TIME

Just as most people were going to bed last Sunday night, (a very inconvenient time to be disturbed) the alarm was broadcast that the Smith's house about a mile out of town on the Petersburg pike, was burning. Fortunately for Mr. Smith some people were still on the streets and they were on the job and had the conflagration extinguished before some knew that it had started.

That old maxim "early to bed and early to rise" may be alright, but if everyone in this neighborhood had practiced it last Sunday night, Earl Smith's home would have been in all probability, lying in ashes the next morning.

It seems that some creosote which had accumulated in the furnace burning wood, had caught fire and burned through the flue into another room, catching the wall paper. These thin flue-stops are very dangerous, and should be made of heavier material.

ATTENTION, "WOOD-CHOPPERS"

It has been reported to this office that on the Kirtley farm in the East Bend neighborhood there is a hedge tree measuring 14 feet five inches in circumference. According to our calculation this tree is something over 4 1/2 feet in diameter, and is certainly some hedge tree. It would afford an excellent opportunity for the Modern Woodmen lodges of this county to work out some of their "goat wood-choppers." From what we know of the comparative texture of hedge trees, and Woodmen axes, they could "chop" for some time.

MRS. FANNIE SNYDER

DIES AT HOME OF N. W. CARPENTER NEAR BURLINGTON

Mrs. Fannie Snyder, widow of the late Orlando Snyder, of Petersburg, died last Wednesday morning, October 8th, at the home of her nephew and niece, Mr. and Mrs. N. W. Carpenter, of near Burlington.

Mrs. Snyder, whose home was in Petersburg, had been visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Carpenter for a few days when she was suddenly stricken with heart trouble on Sunday, from the effects of which she died on Wednesday.

Mrs. Snyder attained the age of 74 years before she was finally called to her reward. She was married to Orlando Snyder at Bellevue in 1884.

She is survived by one daughter, Mrs. E. K. Wehling, of Petersburg, two sisters, Mrs. Alice Snyder and Miss Amelia Corbin, of Burlington, and one brother Ben Corbin, of Erlanger. Her beloved husband preceded her to the grave many years ago. Besides these she leaves a host of other relatives and friends to mourn her departure.

Funeral services were conducted at the Petersburg Christian church by Rev. J. L. Carter last Friday afternoon at 1 p. m., after which interment took place in the Petersburg cemetery.

CARD OF THANKS

In this manner we wish to express our sincere thanks to the neighbors and friends, who were so generous with their help and sympathy in the sorrow we recently experienced in the death of our beloved sister, aunt, and mother Mrs. Fannie Snyder. We also want to thank Rev. Carter and Mr. Chambers for the services they so efficiently and affectionately rendered, as well as the donors of the beautiful flowers.

The time of the falling leaf is here, perhaps later than usual, because the season seems to have been below the average in frost, rain and wind, but there is a shower of leaves in the streets and the fall sweeping, raking and burning is under way.

Deputy Sheriff Percival seated Ira Rawlings last Thursday near Walton, charged with transporting moonshine. At the time of the arrest Rawlings had five gallons of moonshine in the automobile that he was driving. It developed that the machine belonged to Rawlings son and that he had owned it for two years. Ira Rawlings was fined $200 and 30 days in jail by the County Judge at the trial held Saturday morning.

At the "Pay-as-you-go" meeting held in Burlington last Thursday it was stated that if the bond issue was carried in Kentucky that the Boone county road fund would be required to pay the bonds and interest. That statement is propaganda, and simple and was not based on the facts. The county road fund belongs to Boone county and the State Court of Boone county will not allow the State to take the road fund.

GOOD "GUESSER"

Is Mr. Meredith, of Greenville, in His Opinion of What The Bond Bill "Really Means."

When the RECORDER took its stand for the Bond Issue, we did so after carefully considering the bill from all angles and taking into consideration, not only what we thought was the best for Kentucky, but what was best in our opinion, for Boone county. We have endeavored to keep the "TRUTH" about the measure, as we view it, squarely before our readers from the start, which we consider our duty.

Therefore when Mr. Hubert Meredith, one of the leading opponents of the Bond Issue, came to our town we thought it our duty to hear him, which we did. From a lawyer we expected to hear a statement of facts, supported by a logical argument against the bond plan. Of course we expected to hear criticism, but we expected to hear constructive, not destructive, criticism.

Not only did Mr. Meredith fail to base his argument on facts, but based it on his opinion of the meaning of the bill, when the Court of Appeals decided unanimously, that his opinion as to the validity of the bill as erroneous. Mr. Meredith says they had the last "guess" and "guesses" against him, but we think that the word "guess" is the wrong word, since some of the best legal minds in the state, five Democrats and two Republicans, decided against him without a dissenting voice. If any "guessing" was done, Mr. Meredith must have done it, and since his "guess" about the validity of the bill was so erroneous, we have a right to believe that his other "guesses" about the bill are also in error.

In answer to Mr. Meredith's statement that Gov. Fields does not say how the $75,000,000 will be paid, we will say that this is so ridiculous that it is not deserving of comment. If one will but read the bill he will see that the retirement of the bonds is plainly provided for in plain and unmistakable figures.

When he says that provision of the bill which provides for the payment of the state debt, does not state the exact amount, and thereby leaves room for "graft," he again proves that he is "guessing," for the bill plainly states that only such number of bonds will be sold as is necessary to accomplish the purpose for which they are to be sold. Therefore, if the state debt amounts to but $5,000,000, for example, then the remaining $50,000,000 in bonds set aside for that purpose would not be sold.

The complaint with that section providing $5,000,000 for the State University, and other similar sections, was that nothing said as to how it was to be spent. The bill says $1,000,000 per year may be paid to the Board of Education for the construction, reconstruction, and repair of the State University buildings. Mr. Meredith thinks it folly to allow the Board of Education to disburse this money, and though he did not suggest how the bill should have read, in order to correct his complaint, it should have contained an itemized account of where each penny of each year's appropriation was to be spent which is obviously impossible.

His allegation that $66,000,000 would be spent in interest is not founded in fact, and plain arithmetic will prove our contention. Figuring the interest at 5 per cent it could not possibly be more than $59,202,500, and we have reason to believe that the bond can be sold at 4 1/4. If it is right in this the interest would amount to $49,525,250. In this case his misrepresentation in interest alone amounts to $16,474,750, which equals more than two years of total state revenue.

He said that Gov. Fields and others were promising the completion of our entire primary system in five years, which is another gross misrepresentation in so far as Boone county is concerned, for we have heard every bond speech that has been made in this county by either Gov. Fields, or anyone else, and to our positive knowledge nothing of the kind has ever been promised. Gov. Fields, however, did say that our primary system, as left by the 1922 Legislature, could be completed out of the $50,000,000. Mr. Meredith based his contention that "but one-eighth of our primary system could be completed, on his own assertion, (possibly another guess) that the cost would be $50,000 per mile. This contention to anyone is obviously ridiculous.

It was also said that Gov. Fields would promise a negro school in every town to get the negro vote. We have a number of negroes in this section and the Governor made no such promise.

He made one seriously misleading statement when he said that every county must raise its school tax to the limit in order to derive any benefit from the high school appropriation. That portion of the act pertains to pauper counties which, for lack of funds, have had no school for as long as three years in some sections. Although Boone county's schools are not as fine as we would like for them to be, we realize that that class in the state are much more numerous than we, and they are entitled to the same benefits that we are entitled to.

oners were stacked eight deep in the prison cells at Frankfort. Mr. Meredith possibly "guessed" at this also:

As to the bankers bartering away their support in the hope of getting vast deposits without interest, we will state that no state funds are deposited in any bank, at any time, or under any law, without a 4 per cent interest being paid by that bank on the deposit.

Mr. Meredith's contention that our surplus revenue over and above what it requires to retire the bonds each year, could be used merely to repair the few miles of the primary system which had been constructed during the five year period, and that we would soon have a vast amount of money in the hands of the State Highway Commission, which would be unavailable for any purpose, except for "Honest Bill" and his gang of "promissory politicians" to barter away to various banks for votes and favors, is certainly founded on another one of his "guesses" as to the meaning of the law.

Had Mr. Meredith consulted his law books more thoroughly in this particular he would not be out attempting to "scram" this erroneous opinion of his down the throats of the people, who are not as well versed in the law as the Court of Appeals.

We quote in part from that section of the law, from which he draws his personal conclusion that the "excess will pile up" in a vast unavailability fund in the hands of the Highway Commission. The bill says in part:

"If there should be received in any fiscal year from the sources aforesaid, and from any tax hereby directed to be levied, any sum in excess of the amount necessary to pay the interest due on said bonds for that year and to create that year's proportionate part of the sinking fund herein provided, said excess shall be paid to the State Highway Commission, to be used by it for the maintenance of the primary system of state highways, which is defined by section 5 of the Act of March 16, 1920, as amended by the Acts of 1922 and the Acts of 1924, and such excess in any such year . . . shall be made to said sinking fund of the receipts from the aforesaid sources and taxes."

Mr. Meredith's error is in the interpretation that he places upon the word "maintenance," and running true to form Mr. Meredith has "guessed" wrong again, according to a decision of the Court of Appeals in the case of Hanlon, county attorney, et al. vs. Cleary, county judge, et al. in 142 Ky., page 46, wherein they interpreted the term "to provide for the good condition, of highways," not as broad a term as "maintenance," meaning any reconstruction necessary to keep a road in condition to withstand the travel that goes over it, stating that it never was the intention of the Legislature to leave road officials helpless in the matter of providing good and suitable highways for the use of the citizens of the Commonwealth.

Judge John D. Carroll, the first to raise this question in regard to the word "maintenance," was a member of the Court of Appeals at the time this case was decided, and concurred in that opinion.

Mr. Meredith also made the statement that if the Bond plan were adopted by the voters of Kentucky that a large part of the bond fund would find its way into corrupt channels and that we would have graft everywhere, yet he told his hearers that under the Pay-as-you-go plan we would have more money for road purposes than under the bond plan. Therefore we would have more graft under the "Pay-as-you-go" than under the bond plan. He even insinuated that the fund under the bond plan for the benefit of the Charitable and penal institutions would be grafted when it has been conceded by all who are in a position to know, even by Mr. Meredith himself, that the personnel of the State Board of Charities and Correction who would have charge of the expenditure of that fund is composed of the very highest type of Kentucky men and women. These statements are without merit and can only be classed as propaganda. According to Mr. Meredith, nothing could ever be done for fear of "graft."

Mr. Meredith very eloquently said that the poor unfortunate in the asylum had his sympathy, yet he offered no remedy for the same. So in case of fire at the asylum the poor brainless inmates would first have Senator Porter's fire escapes by which to save themselves, then if their inactive brains failed to suggest to them the meaning of the fire escapes, and their bodies were burned in the flames, they would then have Mr. Meredith's "tender sympathy."

Mr. Meredith poured forth a volume of debating invective, insinuating the corruption of "Honest Bill" Fields and his "gang" on the State Board, insulted our highest legal tribunal, the Court of Appeals, by saying that they handed down "guess work" decisions, then "fed" a lot of unfounded propaganda to an intelligent Boone county audience.

If our people want to believe whatever "guess work" misstatements of facts by this disgraced attorney, that we have not discovered, in preference to the word of prominent Boone county attorneys and gentlemen then that is their privilege and we will accept their word.

HOGS RIDING TO MARKET "IN STYLE"

Ninety per cent of the hogs marketed at Indianapolis from within a radius of 50 miles ride in motor trucks, according to the U. S. Bureau of Public Roads, which has opened an office in Chicago and is studying the motor truck hauling data on this territory. Many hogs ride 75 to 100 miles to the same market, and the Daily Drivers Journal of Chicago reports that all markets show increasing live stock marketing by this method. The "good roads" being laid everywhere leading to these great live stock markets are opening up more rapid transportation and greater choice of markets. Illinois farmers, for example, may choose East St. Louis, Peoria, or Chicago if they live close to a hard road, choosing the market that the radio or the daily paper tells them will give the best price for their hogs or lambs.

SUBSTANTIAL GOODS

A clothing dealer was saying the other day that a man came into his place and showed him an overcoat which he bought in another city three years ago, and which had faded considerably, though it had not been worn a great deal. The dealer remarked that that was what the public would get until it insisted on having goods that had absolutely substantial qualities. This dealer said he had some time found fault with agents of wholesale firms because some stuff they put out did not have more permanent colors. But they replied that the American people did not seem to demand that substantial quality. They thought that the people as a rule had money to spend, and did not mind changing their clothes somewhat frequently, and that they were more interested in style and attractive appearance, than they were in getting stuff that would last a long time.

A GOOD CITIZEN'S DUTY

In case there should be any person who has not heard about it, we would like to call attention to the fact, with all due apologies, that there is going to be an election on November 4th.

If corruption is prevented, democracy rebuked, communism forestalled and folly warded off, all good citizens must go to the polls and vote.

In 1890 80 per cent of the American voters cast a ballot; in 1906, 66 per cent; in 1912, 62 per cent; in 1920, less than 50 per cent. The stay-at-home vote at the last general election amounted to 25,705,063.

This is not an affliction of any particular state or group of states. The distressing evidence of lack of interest in governmental affairs is common to every section of the country.

It is a constantly growing menace that threatens to sap the vitality of the nation.

As a general rule, the man or woman who neglects to qualify for voting and doesn't vote can give no valid excuse for failure to perform that important civic duty.

Useless indifference to the welfare of the United States will threaten, if not destroy, orderly government.

Responsibility rests alike upon men and women. There is no distinction as to sex, color or race, providing you are a citizen of the United States.

Find out where you vote and then vote when the time comes.

ROAD BUILDING SETTING RECORDS

Rome was a piker at road building compared with the various state Engineering Departments that are monthly laying more hard roads than old Latin conquerors of the world did in their entire history of world supremacy, says the Research Department of the National Association of Farm Equipment Manufacturers. That every county seat will eventually be connected with the state capital and large market centers by hard roads is the prediction based on surveys, present building programs and the campaigns of public officials this fall. Illinois, for example, plans a hard road system that will total nearly 10,000 miles by the time the present program already mapped is completed within four or five years. California, New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Texas, Michigan and other states where the registrations run up close to the million-car mark are also planning ambitiously. The construction camps with their trains of wagons, graders, mixers, bumps, plows, rollers and other modern road building tools are relentlessly pulling the country out of the mud.

IS OUR NAVY A "BUNCH OF JUNK?"

The Navy Department indicates that our navy is little better than a mass of junk, and that capital ships are about to fall to pieces for lack of money for repairs. The only reasonable explanation for this gloomy picture is found in the plea for more money, because the records show that during the last six years—the Navy Department has had a total of more than four and one-quarter billions of dollars. If the Navy is nothing more than a bunch of junk after the expenditure of such sums, it would appear that no amount of money under the same conditions would get us anywhere.

Communion Services at the Burlington M. E. church last Sunday morning, was attended by a fair sized crowd, and the Presiding Elder, Rev. Clark, preached a splendid sermon. Quite a number of future burg citizens were present.

"ORPHEUS"

Orpheus was a legendary Thracian musician and hero who popularly was supposed to have invented the lyre. His music is said to have been so magically beautiful that the wild beasts crowded about him to listen. He is also famous for his journey to Hades to recover his wife, Eurydice. Since he is a patron of music, musical clubs are often called by his name.

To break up a cold over night or to cut short an attack of gripe, influenza or sore throat, physicians and druggists are now recommending Calabata, the nautical Calomet tablet, that is purified from dangerous and sickening effects. Those who have tried it say that it acts like magic, by far more effective and certain than the old style calomet, heretofore recommended by physicians.

One or two Calabata at bed time with a swallow of water—that's all. No salts, no nausea nor the slightest interference with eating, work or pleasures. Next morning your cold has vanished and your system feels refreshed and purified. Calabata is sold only in original sealed packages, price two cents for the large family pack, thirty-five cents for the large family pack. Recommended and guaranteed by druggists. Your money back if you are not satisfied—guaranteed.

Now is the chance for us to place the largest part of the Road Tax where it belongs. I have never heard of a county or a state being sold for a debt, nor likely to. If a proposed county bond issue or a state bond issue is brought into effect by a vote of the people, it makes every living soul in said county or state young or old, in the present or in the future, liable for every dollar until paid with interest, but after careful study, with investigation and consideration, I am satisfied that the proposed $75,000,000 Bond Issue is the best tax proposition that has ever been brought before the people. Inasmuch, it makes the "dancers pay the fiddler," and a considerable saving from a direct tax on the farmers and real estate owners. If our public servants, as officials, do not treat the people right, do not worry "for vengeance is mine saith the Lord." THE BIRTH OF A NATION

At an enormous cost we have secured this famous picture of the Civil War.

EVERY AMERICAN MUST SEE IT.

AT BURLINGTON THEATRE,

October 21st, 22d and 23d

AT PETERSBURG THEATRE,

October 24th and 25th.

18,000 PEOPLE IN THIS GREAT GRIFFITH FILM!

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION" COVERS ESSENTIAL DETAILS OF CIVIL WAR HISTORY

D. W. Griffith's master production, "The Birth of a Nation," a United Artists release, will be the attraction at Burlington Theatre, October 21st, 22d and 23d, and at Petersburg Theatre, October 24th and 25th.

It will be brought here in exact reproduction of the greatest attraction which in New York recently set a record by playing to more people in two weeks time than had ever before gathered in a play house. This was the massive Capitol Theatre where over 150,000 persons witnessed the spectacle in a fortnight.

The merest statement regarding "The Birth of a Nation" leaps to superlatives because there is no other form in which it can be written. Simple facts in relationship to its developments sound extravagant until you have seen the production and realized a tithe of its sweep and power.

It covers the essential details of American history ranging thru three thousand years. It is shown with ten thousand of sold. In the production, 15,000 people participated in the telling of the story. Three thousand horses were used to give the cavalry and other thrilling effects of the wild dashes over miles of territory. Cities were built up only to be destroyed by fire. The total cost of the entire production was in the neighborhood of $500,000. Five hundred costumers and seamstresses worked three months to make the costumes worn by the people. Ten thousand yards of cloth were worked into the costumes worn by the women while 25,000 yards of white muslin were used up in the regalia of the Ku Klux Klanmen.

The narrative is filled with tears and smiles. A brilliant cast lends animation to the story. DON'T MISS SEEING THIS.

THE "TRUTH" WILL DO IT

At the close of the first week's campaign for the bond issue, we have been brought to the full realization that the man who invented the slogan, "The Truth Will Carry the Bond Issue," knew what he was talking about.

Judge Lassing has made a speech every night, excepting Sunday, beginning Tuesday, Oct. 7th, and has spoken nothing but the truth about the measure. At every meeting numbers come to him and say that they did not understand the issue, but, after his explanation, they are going to vote for it.

Every man, or woman, who comes to one of these meetings with an open mind, that is, if he has not made up his mind to vote AGAINST, it before he comes, he leaves the building as a firm believer in the bond issue.

The "Truth" about the bond issue is contained within the bill itself. It can be read and understood by anyone. It has been carefully framed and planned by men who had the best interests of Kentucky at heart, while the "truth" about the opposition, or "pay-as-you-go" people is that they HAVE NO PLAN,—they can PROMISE nothing.

FARMERS COMPLAIN OF FROZEN CORN

Scores of inquiries concerning the harvesting, preserving and feeding of immature corn damaged by frost are being received by the Kentucky Experiment Station.

"Where silos are available, there is no better way of disposing of soft corn than by putting it in the silo," says Prof. E. J. Kinney of the agronomy department. "No water need be added, if ensiled promptly. It has been found practical where there is no ensilage capacity for the entire crop to make silage of the ears alone.

"Lacking a silo, the next most logical method of handling very soft corn is to feed it as promptly as possible before any spoilage has taken place. Then it can be safely fed to all kinds of stock. When mould develops, it should be fed to hogs only.

"If the corn must be stored, it is necessary to get it dried out as much as possible. Generally it is best to leave it in the field as long as the weather is favorable for drying. If cut and put in small shocks—no over 100 hills per shock,—or its equivalent in drilled corn—it will dry out in good weather as rapidly as if left standing, but if the weather is damp it is more likely to mould.

Fodder from green corn has high feeding value, and if it can be utilized, it pays to cut at least part of it.

"It is best to begin husking soft corn before hard freezing weather, as it will dry out little after that time. If still very damp, the corn should be covered in shallow layers on a barn floor or put in narrow cribs and watched closely. Ventilators placed at intervals of 2 to 3 feet through the crib will be of great help.

"Salt is of value in retarding fermentation and the development of moulds. The Iowa Experiment Station recommends from one-half to one pound of salt for each 100 pounds of corn."

Concerning feeding soft corn Prof. E. S. Good of the animal husbandry department says: "Soft corn may safely be fed to all classes of animals. If, however, it is soft and moulded it can be more safely fed to steers, cows, and hogs than to horses and sheep. Undoubtedly the most economical way to utilize soft corn is to feed it to hogs, steers and cows. Experiments have shown that, based on dry matter content of the corn, these animals gain as well on soft corn as on hard corn."

"SOFT" CORN BEST IN SILAGE.

Corn going into the silo before reaching the osting ear stage offers a problem of "leakage" that the Ohio station has solved by allowing it to partly dry before putting in the silo, or by chopping in hay or straw with the ensilage to absorb the excess water.

One part by weight of the dry material to five or six of the green corn is about the proper ration. Frosting of corn does not hurt it for silage if the corn binder is immediately put at cutting to avoid loss by breaking or leaching from the frozen leaves.

Political Eye-Openers

You can't fool all the people all the time. Abraham Lincoln once told the American people. This bit of wisdom is getting verification in the present Presidential campaign.

Calvin Coolidge has had a lot of people fooled but they are gradually getting his number.

The big item in his public career in the minds of many is his suppression of the Boston police strike.

As a matter of fact he didn't play the strong-handed he-man role at all. He wobbled and wobbled until after the strike was broken by the Mayor of Boston. Then, with the aid of dexterous press agents, he grabbed the spot light.

This is no partisan description of that bit of history. It is embodied in the report made by Nonpartisan Citizens Committee of Boston, which investigated the strike and made a public report on it after order had been restored in Boston. It is on file in that city for anyone to read. Charles F. Peabody noted banker was chairman of that committee.

To the President's credit, it must be said that he never claimed this glory for breaking the strike. But to his debit, he has never opened his mouth to place the glory where it belongs. Only after Mayor Peters invoked an old statute calling out the militia did Coolidge, then governor of Massachusetts, take action. When the strike was well smashed he issued a flamboyant edict denouncing the strikers.

The citizens committee was composed of men of all beliefs, including many Republicans. Here is one sentence from the report: "By Thursday morning September 11, order had been generally restored in the city. On Thursday afternoon, September 11, Governor Coolidge assumed control of the situation, as indicated by the proclamation of that day."

As a matter of fact, Mayor Peters had implored Coolidge for several days to call out the troops. As late as September 9, Coolidge informed Peters that he had no authority to interfere. Peters then pleaded for some action but Coolidge, silent and calculating, sat steady, apparently afraid to turn a hand for fear of incurring the displeasure of the labor vote. On the same day, September 9, rioting began and the hoodlums took possession of the city, the police having gone on a strike.

The police commissioner on September 10, then dug up an old statute giving the Mayor power to call out the troops and withdrew himself from the picture. In Massachusetts the governor appoints the police commissioner of Boston, so that the withdrawal of Curtis was really refusal of the Chief Executive to shoulder the responsibility. On the 10th Peters assumed responsibility and called out the soldiers.

Peters demanded that Coolidge call out additional troops but still got no response from the excessively silent governor. Peters then called for additional troops for 5 o'clock in the afternoon. The next morning the 11th, quiet had been restored. Then Coolidge came out of his shell and assumed control.

This fakes reputation for firmness which he doesn't possess, has put Coolidge into the President's chair. It made him vice-president because the country thought he broke the Boston strike. Now thanks to the impartial investigation and report of Boston's citizens, it knows better.

Since he has become President, Coolidge has displayed the same lack of decision.

He wouldn't fire Daugherty or Denby. He declined to accept their first letters of resignation. Only when an outraged public sentiment and the members of the United States Senate, including the leaders of his own party insisted on it, did he permit these members of his cabinet to resign. He didn't have the courage to fire them and he didn't have the courage to keep them.

When Daugherty and Denby quit he expressed full confidence in them. If they were worthy of it, he should have backed them to the limit and kept them in the cabinet.

Silent Cal however is quite a politician. He wanted their help for the nomination. So he patted Daugherty on the back and then sent a letter to the Ohio Republican Committee endorsing Daugherty for delegate to the national convention. That got Daugherty for him at Cleveland.

NO ONE CAN PLACE A LIMIT.

Kara Meeker, who blazed the Oregon Trail, in 1852, driving an ox team from the Middle West to the Pacific coast, has just completed the return trip by airplane.

When he went West there were no stage coaches along the route; no railroad penetrating the forests and deserts. The airplane and the automobile had only been dreamed of. And perhaps these more modern means of transport would never have been devised and perfected had not such men as Kara Meeker, pathfinder and pioneer, employed to the fullest capacity the thing at hand, emphasized the need of a better method.

Kara Meeker retraced, in a day or two, the route which required months to cover seventy years ago. Men talk of a simple device, and are heard half-way around the world. Seas are crossed and recessed in comfort and comparative safety. And even greater and better things have been accomplished by contemporaneous thoughtful activity.

As men have been emancipated from tedious plodding, they have gained a clearer concept of their freedom. The manner of this deliverance has not been accidental or merely evolutionary. Thought, rightly directed, has been the agency. This being true, no one can place a limit to the growth which such development and growth shall not go.

THE COMING ELECTION.

Not one citizen of Boone county, who is entitled to exercise the right of suffrage, should fail to cast his or her vote at the election to be held November 4th, 1924. At the election we select the persons who will cast their vote for the candidates for President and Vice-President of the United States and by our direct votes we select the persons who are to be our representatives in the Senate and House of Representatives. The Democratic candidates for President and Vice-President are men of the highest intelligence and no reason can be advanced why any Democrat should refuse to cast a vote that will secure the election of these candidates. Davis and Bryan have received the support of all Democrats as well as the independent vote in this State.

The Democratic candidate for U. S. Senator, Hon. A. C. Stanley, is known by all of us as one of our ablest men in the Senate and he is an orator with few equals. Mr. Stanley has never been connected with any act of corruption in politics and his opponents make no charge of corruption against any of his political acts, and he will receive the support of all Democrats.

For Congress, every Boone county vote should be cast for Hon. A. B. Rouse, regardless of party affiliation, as he is a product of Boone-co., and has faithfully, honestly and fearlessly represented this district, as it has never been represented. Mr. Rouse's record as a public official is clean and free from corruption and he should be re-elected by a large majority. The Republican candidate for Congress, Mr. Landrum, recognizes that he can not defeat Mr. Rouse, but we have a man by the name of Bornhorst, from Kenton county, who is a candidate for Congress and he expects to get a large vote because he is attached to the tail of the LaPollette ticket. Mr. Bornhorst was a member of the 1924 Kentucky Legislature and no achievement of his during the session of that body entitles him to the support of the people of this district. For Congress, let Boone county give the largest majority that he has ever given any candidate to Hon. Arthur B. Rouse, who first saw the light of day in Boone county.

HUMAN WEAKNESS.

Human weakness has been put to a hard test in recent months.

An Illinois minister has confessed poisoning his wife and conceiving the plan for his affinity to poison her husband that they might wed.

An Oklahoma minister ran away with a fourteen-year-old girl and was arrested for the crime.

A New York state preacher was convicted of the charge of outraging public decency by his associations with a young woman.

But it is not good logic to reason that all clergymen are of the same stripe. Where one minister reveals himself a moral pervert, there are thousands who are pure and spiritual.

Some college students brutally murdered an innocent young man, and not follow that all college students are murderers.

Remember that man, the cause of a law of society is a bad one, and that man who is a bad one, is a bad one.

HON. HUBERT MEREDITH

SPEAKS AGAINST THE BOND ISSUE IN THE COURT HOUSE.

Mr. Hubert Meredith, of Greenville, Kentucky, addressed about 40 or 50 voters of Boone county last Thursday at 1:30 p. m., in the court house in behalf of the "Pay-as-You-Go" organization in this State, which organization urges the necessity of the defeat of the Bond Issue.

INDORSEMENT OF ROUSE

BY THE BROTHERHOOD OF RAILWAY TRAINMEN IN KY., IS REVEALED IN LETTER FROM OFFICIAL.

Congressman A. B. Rouse of the Sixth District, who is seeking reelection has been endorsed by the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen. There has been some agitation over Mr. Rouse's position on the Howell-Barkley Bill, which, however, was cleared up in an exchange of letters between Mr. Rouse and T. J. Maher, of Bellevue, Ky., Vice-Chairman of the trainmen's organization. The letter written by Mr. Rouse is as follows:

"Dear Mr. Maher:

"Relative to our conversation of yesterday in the presence of other gentlemen who are interested in legislation of the United States, I desire to state:

"I voted against the enactment of the present railroad transportation law, known as the Esch-Cummins act, which created the present Railroad Labor Boards.

"I am in favor of a repeal of the legislation creating the Railroad Labor Boards, and I am in favor of other boards with representation from all parties concerned, and with power to put their findings into effect.

with no place to spend it, and we would have to raise our taxes on real estate in order to meet the $1,500,000 Federal aid each year, or lose the Federal aid.

These are the leading points made by Mr. Meredith, though we may have omitted some of them. We did not have the services of a stenographer, and did not even take notes during the speech, this being just what we could remember after the speech.

Mr. Meredith went from here to Walton, where he delivered a very similar address to the one delivered here.

BOTH LIMBS BROKEN

IN FALL FROM TOP OF TELEPHONE POLE

Last Friday while working on a telephone pole near where the new concrete road enters the town of Walton, Hobart Fisher, lineman for the Consolidated Telephone Co., sustained a break in both of his legs just above the ankle.

Mr. Fisher was on top of the pole when he suddenly heard it begin to crack. He started to descend the pole but seeing he could not do so, he jumped the remaining distance of 20 feet, landing in the center of the pike.

Dr. R. E. Ryle was called and Mr. Fisher was at once removed to the Bethesda Hospital, where he is doing well as can be expected.

INDIAN SUMMER.

Mild bright days in the later autumn are commonly called Indian summer. Tradition had it that the Indians, who were not given to steady industry, depended on the fitful weather of this uncertain period to ripen the crops of corn that would be harvested a month or two before if they had planted and cultivated them properly.

A care-free feeling steals over the mind on these soft and hazy days. One feels as if like an Indian of old, he would like to wander through the forests in a vagrant way, without those stated hours of labor upon which the modern existence depends.

Perhaps in some future time when machinery has lightened the toil of man, it will become possible to shut down factories and workshops in this glorious autumnal weather. But even the busiest people can enjoy the beauty of the sky and the mellowness of the air and feel some of that content with the world that Indian Summer should suggest.

HEBRON HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

The Freshmen and Sophomores, with Mrs. Fowler as instructor, presented the chapel program last Monday morning. The program, which lasted about half an hour, was entertaining, norma and Lloyd McGlendon helped out by playing some selections. Several visitors were present including Rev. G. A. Boyer, who gave a short talk on "The Value of a Smile."

A great many of the high school students have been attending the past week.

UNABATED.

THE CAMPAIGN FOR THE BOND ISSUE CONTINUES

Continuing in an unabated campaign for the passage of the Bond Bill, the county committee, composed of A. B. Renaker, B. C. Gaines and John L. Vest, with J. M. Lassing and Mr. Vest as the principle speakers visited the following points during the past week, dated from Tuesday night, October 14th, when they met at Petersburg, Wednesday, Oct. 15, at Florence and Beech Grove Thursday October 16th, at Big Bone, Friday October 17th, at Hebron, Saturday, October 18th, at Idlewild, and Monday October 20th at Gunpowder church.

At Petersburg on Tuesday the 14th Mr. Vest and Judge Lassing spoke jointly to perhaps the largest crowd of the present campaign, although all the meetings have been splendidly attended.

On Wednesday night Judge Lassing spoke at the school house in Beech Grove neighborhood, while L. Vest spoke at Florence.

Thursday night Judge Lassing spoke in the Methodist church at Big Bone to an appreciative audience, and on Friday night he spoke in the Theatre at Hebron to a capacity crowd. The speaking at Hebron was held after the regular service at the Lutheran church. On Saturday night, L. C. Scothern, Idlewild merchant, made it possible for a meeting to be held in that little hamlet by donating the use of his store building. Judge Lassing here delivered one of his best speeches, and spoke to the best crowd of the campaign in proportion to the population of the community.

Monday night a number of Burlington people followed the committee to the historic Gunpowder church where Judge Lassing again addressed a splendid gathering, the speech following the church service held by Rev. Charles Mangold, Baptist minister.

On Tuesday night, October 21st a splendid meeting was held at Grange Hall.

KENTUCKY POST

IN ERROR AS TO INDORSEMENTS OF ROUSE AND BORNHORST

We quote an editorial from the Kentucky Post of date Saturday, October 18th. It follows:

INDORSEMENTS

If indorsements count, William H. Bornhorst, the young man, who is making the race for Congress against Arthur B. Rouse in the Sixth District, will run away from things.

Every railroad organization has placed its stamp of approval on the candidate who offered his services to the cause of the progressive, and labor generally has fallen in line. That a changed condition exists in the Sixth District is evident. In previous campaigns Mr. Rouse was always indorsed by several of the organizations which seemed to take a hand in politics, but this year not one single indorsement has been made public concerning the candidacy of the veteran congressman.

Every man goes to the well and takes what he can get. The people talk much different from the way they vote, a change will take place in the personnel of the next Congress.

It is an amazing defeat, is not it? To any particular issue. Labor and many other voters are singing a song about giving some one else a chance. Power is not an outstanding figure in Congress, and no good reason has been given as to why it should retain his present seat. I do finally.

Let us be clear with his attitude toward the Howell-Barkley Bill. The congressman's opinion is to explain his stand and let the people decide for themselves. It is a mistake to think that the explanation is made no different.

Indorsements are only for one man. Labor feels that there will be a change in the position of the congressman.

If Mr. Susong, the editor of the Post, is no more certain about the "impending defeat" of Mr. Rouse, than he is of the indorsements that he says Mr. Rouse has not received, then the rest of Mr. Rouse's race is a mere "cake-walk," and he is a good as "in" which, in our opinion, is really the case.

Mr. Susong says "not one single indorsement has been made public concerning the candidacy of the veteran Congressman," but on the front page of this issue we publish a letter from T. J. Maher, vice-chairman of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen in Mr. Rouse's district, which seems to conclusively disprove Mr. Susong's statement. This letter was published in the Enquirer before Mr. Susong's editorial was written. The letter would also seem to disprove what Mr. Susong says is the attitude of labor "generally" toward Mr. Rouse.

Unfounded editorials, such as Mr. Susong writes, will only prove a "boomerang" and react in favor of Mr. Rouse.

IMPRESSIVE SERVICE

Rev. K. H. Carter, pastor of Petersburg Christian church, evidently believes in letting the young folks have both a voice and a part in church affairs.

Last Sunday, Oct. 19th, his entire service was conducted by members of his church under 30 years of age. The communion service was most impressive with boys and young men, ranging in age from 12 to 30, in complete charge. There were a dozen or more actively participating in this service.

The song service was conducted by the young girls of the church, about 12 or 15 in number, all under 18 years of age, and their renditions were beautiful to say the least.

It is a source of greatest consolation to the older members, who will soon pass on, to see the active affairs of the church so ably conducted by those who are to succeed them.

VERONA FREE FAIR

Mrs. Agnes Jennings, Superintendent of the Domestic Science department, is also expecting a large exhibit in the various displays under this head.

It will be a big day in Verona.

Fouls called on Burlington 3; on Limaburg 1.

BASKET BALL.

Saturday's basket ball game between Burlington and Hebron tied the teams in number of games won and lost. The tie will be played off later in the season. Burlington played a better game than Hebron but the latter was lucky on three or four long shots during the last few minutes of play that proved too much to overcome. Ernst and Walton were outstanding men on the Hebron team while Utz's performance in capping baskets kept Burlington in the lead until the last quarter. The work of Ding Ross as standing guard, watch dog of the basket, prevented many baskets from being made.

One of Burlington's players, Albert Kirkpatrick, has not been able to play for a week due to injuries received in a game at Bellevue, but will be back in the line-up Saturday.

The team will meet at the home of Prof. Hook Tuesday night to discuss plans for securing uniforms etc.

The game for Saturday cannot be definitely announced now.

The line-up of the game is as follows:

Burlington	Hebron
Utz (c) 10	Ernst (c) 8
Clare (f) 2	Maxwell (c) 8
Rouse (g) 2	Walton (f) 8
Smith (g) Hook (g)	Ayor (f) 4
Huey (f) 6	Conner (g) 2

Is Mr. Meredith, of Greenville, L. H. Opinion of What The Bond Bill "Really Means."

When the RECORDER took its stand for the Bond Issue, we did so after carefully considering the bill from all angles and taking into consideration, not only what we thought was the best for Kentucky, but what was best in our opinion, for Boone county. * * * We have endeavored to keep the "TRUTH" about the measure, as we view it, squarely before our readers from the start, which we consider our duty.

Therefore when Mr. Meredith, one of the leading opponents of the Bond Issue, came to our town we thought it our duty to hear him, which we did. From a lawyer we expected to hear a statement of facts, supported by a logical argument; against the bond plan. Of course we expected to hear criticism, but we expected to hear constructive, not destructive, criticism.

Not only did Mr. Meredith fail to base his argument on facts, but based it on his opinion of the meaning of the bill, when the Court of Appeals decided unanimously, that his opinion as to the validity of the bill as erroneous. Mr. Meredith says he had the last "guess" and "guessed" against him, but we think that the word "guess" is the wrong word, since some of the best legal minds in the state, five Democrats and two Republicans, decided against him without a dissenting voice. If any "guessing" was done, Mr. Meredith must have done it, and since his "guess" about the validity of the bill was so erroneous, we have a right to believe that his other "guesses" about the bill are also in error.

In answer to Mr. Meredith's statement that Gov. Fields does not say how the $75,000,000 will be paid, we will say that this is so ridiculous that it is not deserving of comment. If one will but read the bill he will see that the retirement of the bonds is plainly provided for in plain and unmistakable figures.

When he says that that provision of the bill, which provides for the payment of the state debt, does not state the exact amount and thereby leaves room for "graft," he again proves that he is "guessing," for the bill plainly states that only such number of bonds will be sold as is necessary to accomplish the purpose for which they are to be sold. Therefore, if the state debt amounts to but $5,000,000, for example, then the remaining $500,000 in bonds set aside for that purpose would not be sold.

The complaint with that section providing $5,000,000 for the State University, and other similar sections, was that nothing was said as to how it was to be spent. The bill says $1,000,000 per year may be paid to the Board of Education for the construction, reconstruction, and repair of the State University buildings. Mr. Meredith thinks it folly to allow the Board of Education to disburse this money, and though he did not suggest how the bill should have read, in order to correct his complaint, it should have contained an itemized account of where each penny of each year's appropriation was to be spent which is obviously impossible.

His allegation that $66,000,000 would be spent in interest is not founded in fact, and plain arithmetic will prove our contention. Figuring the interest at 5 per cent it cannot possibly be more than $59,202,500, and we have reason to believe that the bonds can be sold at 4 1/2%. If we are right in this the interest would amount to $49,525,250. In this case his misrepresentation in interest alone amounts to $16,474,750, which equals more than two years of our total state revenue.

He said that Gov. Fields and others were promoting the completion of our entire primary system in five years, which is another gross misrepresentation in so far as Boone county is concerned, for we have heard every bond speech that has been made in this county by either Gov. Fields, or anyone else, and to our positive knowledge nothing of the kind has ever been promised. Gov. Fields, however, did say that our primary system, as left by the 1922 Legislature, could be completed out of the $50,000,000. Mr. Meredith based his contention that "but one-eighth of our primary system could be completed" on his own assertion. (Possibly another guess: that the cost would be $50,000 per mile. This contention to anyone is obviously ridiculous.)

It was also said that Gov. Fields would promise a negro school. Every town to get the negro vote. We have a number of negroes in this section and the Governor made no such promise here.

He made one grossly misleading statement when he said that every county must raise its school tax to the limit in order to derive any benefit from the high school appropriation. That portion of the act, pertaining to pauper counties which, for lack of funds, have no school tax as long as three years in some sections. Although Boone county's schools are not as bad as we would like for them to be, we realize that other places in the state are much worse off than we, and that we are not to be benefited by the bond issue.

The Governor made no such statement. He said that the state would not be benefited by the bond issue. He said that the state would not be benefited by the bond issue.

The Governor made no such statement. He said that the state would not be benefited by the bond issue. He said that the state would not be benefited by the bond issue.

oners were stacked eight deep in the prison cells at Frankfort. Mr. Meredith possibly "guessed" at this also. As to the bankers bartering away their support in the hope of getting vast deposits without interest, we will state that no state funds are deposited in any bank, at any time, or under any law, without 4 per cent interest being paid by that bank on the deposit.

Mr. Meredith's contention that our surplus revenue over and above what it requires to retire the bonds each year, could be used merely to repair the few miles of the primary system which had been constructed during the five year period, and that we would soon have a vast amount of money in the hands of the State Highway Commission, which would be unavailable for any purpose, except for "Honest Bill" and his gang of "promissory politicians" to barter away to various banks for votes and favors, is certainly founded on another one of his "guesses" as to the meaning of the law.

Had Mr. Meredith consulted his law books more thoroughly in this particular he would not be out attempting to "crum" this erroneous opinion of his down the throats of the people, who are not as well versed in the law as the Court of Appeals.

We quote in part from that section of the law, from which he draws his personal conclusion that the "excess will pile up" in a vast unavailability fund in the hands of the Highway Commission. The bill says in part:

"If there should be received in any fiscal year from the sources aforesaid and from any tax hereby directed to be levied, any sum in excess of the amount necessary to pay the interest due on said bonds for that year and to create that year's proportionate part of the sinking fund herein provided, said excess shall be paid to the State Highway Commission, to be used by it for the maintenance of the primary system of state highways, which is defined by section 5 of the Act of March 16, 1920, as amended by the Acts of 1922 and the Acts of 1924, and such excess in any such year is excepted from the appropriation herein before made to said sinking fund of the receipts from the aforesaid sources and taxes."

Mr. Meredith's error is in the interpretation that he places upon the word "maintenance," and running true to form Mr. Meredith has "guessed" wrong again, according to a decision of the Court of Appeals in the case of Hanlon, county attorney, et al. vs. Cleary, county judge, et al. in 142 Ky., page 48, wherein they interpreted the term "to provide for the good condition, of highways" not as being a term "maintenance," as meaning any reconstruction necessary to keep a road in condition to withstand the travel that goes over it, stating that it never was the intention of the Legislature to leave road officials helpless in the face of providing good and suitable highways for the use of the citizens of the Commonwealth.

Judge John D. Carroll, the first to raise this question in regard to the word "maintenance," was a member of the Court of Appeals at the time this case was decided, and concurred in that opinion.

Mr. Meredith also made the statement that if the Bond plan were adopted by the voters of Kentucky that a large part of the road fund would find its way into corrupt channels and that we would have graft everywhere, yet he told his hearers that under the Pay-as-you-Go plan we would have more money for road purposes than under the bond plan. Therefore we would have more graft under the "Pay-as-you-Go" than under the bond plan. He even insinuated that the fund under the bond plan for the benefit of the Charitable and penal institutions would be grafted when it has been conceded by all who are in a position to know, even by Mr. Meredith himself, that the personnel of the State Board of Charities and Correction who would have charge of the expenditure of that fund is composed of the very highest type of Kentucky men and women. These statements are without merit and can only be classed as propaganda. According to Mr. Meredith, nothing could ever be done for fear of "graft."

Mr. Meredith very eloquently said that it was unfortunate that in the asylum had his sympathy, yet he offers no remedy for them. So in case of fire at the asylum the poor brainless inmates would first have Senator Porter's fire escapes by which to save themselves, then if their inactive brains failed to suggest to them the meaning of the fire escapes, and their bodies were burned in the flames, they would thank Mr. Meredith's "tender sympathy."

Mr. Meredith poured forth a volume of debating invective, insinuating the corruption of "Honest Bill" Fields and his "gang" on the State Boards, insulted our highest legal tribunal, the Court of Appeals, by saying that they handed down "guess work" decisions, then "fed" a lot of unfounded propaganda to an intelligent Boone county audience.

If our people want to believe whatever "guess work" misstatements of facts by this disreputable attorney, that we have not disproven, in preference to the word of prominent Boone county attorneys and gentlemen then that is their privilege and we will only accept their word.

The Paint Up Campaign should not go so far as to whitewash the politicians.

Many of these people who forget to vote are not able to wake up as fast as their brains.

Before they can attract admiration, flowers have to send down roots. So must men and women.

The movement to mark historical spots should erect notices showing where the automobile accidents take place.

It promises to be a Merry Christmas and prosperous New Year—regardless of who tenants the White House.

Many of the politicians are so busy making new charges that they haven't time to investigate and see if the old ones are true.

A politician can't get the rural vote of Kentucky now merely by going around among the farmers, and saying "Gosh, How be ye?"

North Dakota farmers will receive nearly $100,000,000 more for their product than they had last year. This prosperity affects all parts of the state.

According to a report issued by the United States Department of Agriculture, 42,979,000 acres of land will be sown to winter wheat this autumn.

The standpatters say they won't change their ideas until the cows come home, which may be long time if the cowshed has been turned into a garage.

Many intelligent people won't vote because they think they don't understand the issues, but those who lack intelligence are not heard making that excuse.

The political parties are finding it hard to raise money. Looks as if it would have to have some cake sales or cold meat suppers to get through the campaign.

After some people lose money in some worthless stock, they frequently invest some time in an equally valueless one in order to make up the loss on the first.

If some people would holler as loud for their home town as they would for their political party, their community would be elected to progress more frequently.

That impressive voice in your neighborhood is not probably the modern parent handling out moral instructions to his children, but merely your neighbor's radio giving the foot ball news.

Because the courts have decided that pedestrians have rights on city ways and street crossings, he will be a daring individual who undertakes to "Stand" on his rights—and he carries a substantial insurance policy.

United States manufacturers exported $18,000,000 worth of rifles and explosives to Europe in 1929. After war is outlawed it will next be in order to suppress the manufacture and sale of the necessary materials.

Roger Bacon, who lived and wrote seven centuries ago, predicted "machines for navigation without rowers, cars without draft animals, flying machines." Because of this statement he was adjudged a sorcerer and thrown into jail.

A CHALLENGE

"A hog is a hog today, just as he was a thousand years ago. If a human being can not profit by experience of others and help to make this world a little better place in which to live, he might as well be a hog."

This is the challenge of E. K. Hall in charge of personal and public relations of the American Telephone & Telegraph Company, to every individual who reads it.

To profit by experience of others is to profit by their mistakes as well as their achievements.

The successes of others we should emulate; their failures we should avoid.

Yet the trait which distinguishes men from hogs is not very often operative. It is the trait of self-interest, the trait of the selfish, and pleasure.

Everyone has seen the fatal failure of lives that are ruled by greed, yet how few profit by their mistakes?

The greed that does not allow any time or effort for unselfish public service for the good of all, but is all centered in self—that is the type of greed that holds back communities and prevents them from making the progress they should.

Shall the challenge be accepted or passed by unanswered? Are we as a people no better than the hog, or will we profit by the experience of those who made the mistake of placing self above service and failed?

OBSERVE THE HOG

The hog has been maligned and libeled, according to Jno. Vivard of professor of animal husbandry of Iowa State College.

When we think of hogs we think of gluttons. Who human beings gorge themselves on food, in derision people call them pigs.

But human beings can learn a lesson from the hog, according to this educator, who advises those who want to learn how to keep fat and fit, to study the occupants of the sty. Long ago the hog was a slender, bony fellow, when the business of looking for a living was more serious than it is now. Then man took him in hand and made life easy—and now look at him.

All this is because farmers treat hogs more like humans.

Hogs have profited by being domesticated. But some people, with all their education, have not learned as much as the hog.

The hog is possessed of the same traits as man and he isn't as low in intelligence as the majority believe, but stands with the horse in seasoning.

So let's give the hog credit for making something of his opportunities, which is more than can be said of people who waste or bury their talents.

FAITH NECESSARY FOR SUCCESS

The great business enterprises have been built on faith. The men of the cities go ahead to deal and trade before they have faith in each other's character. Occasionally things go wrong and they make losses. But in the main people mean to be square, and if business is well operated success follows.

In country towns many enterprises have failed to accomplish results because people would not trust each other. In many places the farmers have failed to get the benefits of co-operative selling enterprises because they had insufficient faith in their neighbors. There has got to be a certain amount of mutual confidence to make any kind of enterprise a success, and it is particularly necessary when people start out to sell their products.

RESPECT YOUR SCHOOL

Young people admire what is big and conspicuous. Many of the youngsters may look down upon the school which they attend, because their classes are small and their building is a little one compared with some great city school they have seen.

Yet a large part of the most successful men of America attended just such schools. These were defective in equipment, and the enthusiasm of numbers was often lacking. But these schools were located in an environment of earnestness. The families from which the children came were all hard workers, they fritrated each other in time in foolish pursuits. This spirit pervaded these little schools, and it taught these great men to make the best of every opportunity.

A NATION OF RENTERS

Home building in the U. S. must go on for years for the American people have become a nation of rent payers. They are crowded in unsanitary tenements and just as crowded in expensive apartment. Such conditions entirely destroy the real meaning of home and the far reaching effects of home ownership. It is generally conceded that sound and sober citizenship does not find its origin in the rented flat, yet in America the national tendency to become rent payers increases as the population increases. In spite of frequent reports of home building booms, home ownership has actually been falling at the rate of three per cent each ten years. About 85 per cent of the people of this nation are renters—paying the taxes, the upkeep and the interest charges on the real estate.

In making shark fin soup, the Chinese boil the fins and otherwise treat them until they take on the appearance of fan-like flakes and filaments of pure gelatine. The eyes of the shark after they are boiled, lose their outer covering, and the result becomes quite hard and has a sort of shifting light in its texture. These shark eyes are then mounted on pins or other forms of jewelry and present an unusual appearance.

HOGS RIDING TO MARKET "IN STYLE"

Ninety per cent of the hogs marketed at Indianapolis from within a radius of 50 miles ride in motor trucks, according to the U. S. Bureau of Public Roads, which has opened an office in Chicago and is studying the motor truck hauling data on this territory. Many hogs ride 75 to 100 miles to the same market, and the Daily Drivers Journal of Chicago reports that all markets show increasing live stock marketing by this method. The good roads being laid everywhere leading to these great live stock markets are opening up more rapid transportation and greater choice of markets. Illinois farmers, for example, may choose East St. Louis, Peoria, or Chicago if they live close to a hard road, choosing the market that the radio or the daily paper tells them will give the best price for their hogs or lambs.

SUBSTANTIAL GOODS

A clothing dealer was saying the other day that a man came into his place and showed him an overcoat which he bought in another city three years ago, and which had faded considerably, though it had not been worn a great deal. The dealer remarked that that was what the public would get until it insisted on having goods that had absolutely substantial qualities. This dealer said he had some times found fault with agents of wholesale firms because some stuff they put out did not have more permanent colors. But they replied that the American people did not seem to demand that substantial quality. They thought that the people as a rule had money to spend, and did not mind changing their clothes somewhat frequently, and that they were more interested in style and attractive appearance, than they were in getting stuff that would last a long time.

NEW NATIONAL FOREST CREATED IN GEORGIA

The Benning National Forest near Columbus, Ga., has just been formally created by proclamation of the President, announces the Forest Service, United States Department of Agriculture. Other national forests in Georgia are the Cherokee and the Nantahala, both of which are located in the north eastern section of the State. The Benning National Forest is located within the area embraced by the Fort Benning Military Reservation, the forest boundaries including about 80 per cent of the military reservation, or 78,500 acres.

A GOOD CITIZEN'S DUTY

In case there should be any person who has not heard about it, we would like to call attention to the fact, with all due apologies, that there is going to be an election on November 4th.

If corruption is prevented, democracy rebuked, communism fore stalled and folly warded off, all good citizens must go to the polls and vote.

In 1896 80 per cent of the American voters cast a ballot; in 1908, 66 per cent; in 1912, 62 per cent; in 1920, less than 50 per cent. The stay-at-home vote at the last general election amounted to 25,705,063.

This is not an affliction of any particular state or group of states. The distressing evidence of lack of interest in governmental affairs is common to every section of the country.

It is a constantly growing menace that threatens to sap the vitality of the nation.

As a general rule, the man or woman who neglects to qualify for voting and doesn't vote can give no valid excuse for failure to perform this important civic duty.

Listless indifference to the welfare of the United States will threaten, if not destroy, orderly government.

Responsibility rests alike upon men and women. There is no distinction as to sex, color or race, providing you are a citizen of the United States.

Find out where you vote and then vote when the time comes.

ROAD BUILDING SETTING RECORDS

Rome was a piker at road building compared with the various state Engineering Departments that are monthly laying more hard roads than old Latin conquerors of the world did in their entire history of world supremacy, says the Research Department of the National Association of Farm Equipment Manufacturers. That every county seat will eventually be connected with the state capital and large market centers by hard roads is the prediction based on surveys, present building programs and the campaigns of public officials this fall. Illinois, for example, plans a hard road system that will total nearly 10,000 miles by the time the present program already mapped is completed within four or five years. California, New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Texas Michigan and other states where the registrations run up close to the million-euro mark are also planning ambitiously. The construction camps, with their trains of wagons, graders, mixers, bumps, plows, rollers and other modern road building tools are relentlessly pulling the country out of the mud.

IS OUR NAVY A "BUNCH OF JUNK?"

The Navy Department indicates that our navy is little better than a mass of junk, and that capital ships are about to fall to pieces for lack of money for repairs. The only reason money for repairs for this gloomy picture is found in the plea for more money, because the records show that during the last six years the Navy Department has had a total of more than four and one-quarter billions of dollars. If the Navy is nothing more than a bunch of junk after the expenditure of such sums, it would appear that no amount of money under the same conditions would get us anywhere.

"ORPHEUS"

Orpheus was a legendary Thracian musician and hero who popularly was supposed to have invented the lyre. His music is said to have been so magically beautiful that the wild beasts crowded about him to listen. He is also famous for his journey to Hades to recover his wife, Eurydice. Since he is a patron of music, musical clubs are often called by his name.

THE BIRTH OF A NATION

At an enormous cost we have secured this famous picture of the Civil War.

EVERY AMERICAN MUST SEE IT.

AT BURLINGTON THEATRE,
October 21st, 22d and 23d
AT PETERSBURG THEATRE,
October 24th and 25th.

18,000 PEOPLE IN THIS GREAT GRIFFITH FILM!
"THE BIRTH OF A NATION" COVERS ESSENTIAL DETAILS OF CIVIL WAR HISTORY

D. W. Griffith's master production, "The Birth of a Nation," a United Artists release, will be the attraction at Burlington Theatre, October 21st, 22d, and 23d, and Petersburg, October 24th and 25th.

It will be brought here in exact reproduction of the greatest attraction which in New York recently set a record by playing to more people in two weeks time than had ever before gathered in a house. This was the massive Capitol Theatre where over 150,000 persons witnessed the spectacle in a fortnight.

The marvellous statement regarding "The Birth of a Nation" leaps to superlative because there is no other form in which it can be written. Simple facts in relationship to its developments sound extravagant until you have seen the production and realized a tithe of its sweep and power.

It covers the essentials details of American history ranging thru three centuries. Actual battles are shown with ten thousand of soldiers in the conflict. 18,000 people participated in the telling of the story. Three thousand horses were used to give the cavalry and other thrilling effects of the wild dashes over miles of country. The production was in the neighborhood of $500,000. Five hundred costumers and seamstresses worked three months to make the costumes worn by the people. Ten thousand yards of cloth were worked into the costumes worn by the women while 25,000 yards of white muslin were used up in the regalia of the Ku Klux Klansmen.

The narrative is filled with tears and smiles. A brilliant cast lends animation to the story. DON'T MISS SEEING THIS.

High water does not interfere with building. If purchased does not want all the land will divide making road the line also running to the river. This will make two farms near 50 acres each. Will sell by the acre and survey. Give me a look on this wonderful located home—the home of John E. Hodges.

GOOD MANNERS.

The ill-mannered boy invariably becomes an ill-mannered man and the girl who has no manners grows up to be a woman whom everybody dislikes.

An ill-mannered man is not often successful in a business which requires that he come into daily contact with the buying public.

An ill-mannered woman never has any friends and lives a dissatisfied and discontented life.

School teachers are always endeavoring to improve the manners of their pupils, but they find it difficult where good manners are not taught in the home.

Parents who wish a happy life for their children, both in a business way and socially, will begin to teach early that to have friends, it is necessary to recognize the wishes and privileges of others.

Some telephone users demand unlimited conversations, but they should not occupy a party line so long as to wear out the wire.

CHAMPION CORN GROWER USES STEEL CRIB

Peter J. Lux of Indiana, whose corn has won higher honors in the world so often that it is an old story, gives his experience in handling both seed and commercial corn so as to dry it out without spoiling. Mr. Lux used the round steel cribs, which can be set up by the local dealer or the farmer himself easily in a day or two. These cribs are so ventilated that they permit even and thorough drying without spoiling by mold. The elimination of the rat and the mouse are also accomplished by setting the cribs on concrete bases. Farmers who cannot afford the costly drying by use of special furnaces and blowers this fall when there will be so much soft corn, should investigate. The recommendation of the U. S. Government, both for grain bins and corn crib ventilation are right along similar lines.

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. White and daughter, Miss Hazle, entertained at dinner last Friday, a number of relatives and friends in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Price Gibbs of Cheneault, Kansas, who are visiting their many relatives and friends in old Boone after an absence of twenty-one years.

A GOOD EXAMPLE TO FOLLOW.

Lotia Crabtree, noted actress of a day that has gone, who died the other day, worth four million dollars, set an example that should ever be held before the children of this world, to show the possibilities of doing good that lie within their grasp.

She did not leave her estate for relatives to quarrel over, but will left it to those persons and objects that she held dear during her life.

Miss Crabtree knew the misery and disappointments of poverty and misfortune. She knew the trials of those who had not prospered as she, because as a child she saw the sinful life of the California mining town, when she danced for drunken miners who threw gold at her feet.

"The poorest of us dream of being able to give material help to the less fortunate, but how many of us would be so unselfishly liberal if we were blessed with the opportunity to do good, that Miss Crabtree had, and took advantage of."

If every person in this community could be inspired with the same ideal of unselfish service that this woman has demonstrated she had, most of the acute distress and unhappiness due to poverty and misfortune could be overcome.

Her life and good deeds may be a lesson for every person. They make more apparent that wealth carries a responsibility. She lived up to hers but how many do?

The following Boone county citizens were summoned to appear for jury service in the Federal court, which convened in Covington, Monday morning: W. A. Bullock, Hebron; J. C. Bedinger, Walton; Lacy Cropper, Petersburg; and H. L. McGlasson and J. D. "Loud," Hebron.

Sandstone soaked in melted sulphur and then allowed to cool, has its crushing strength increased from 250 to 300 per cent making it in this respect equal to granite.

An inscription placed below the picture of a rooster in a tavern room recently excavated at Pompeii, Italy, reads as follows: "When this rooster crows we'll give credit."

9,097 cattle in Boone county have been given the tuberculosis test, of which 779 were tested during September.

The political bird is said to be buzzing, which may mean that the people are going to get stung.

Special Correspondent of the RECORDER

IT IS HARD TO IMPROVE on the White House as a headquarters for a Presidential campaign in the view of President Coolidge. So wedded is he to the Executive Mansion that he has not concluded to remain in Washington until a day or two before the election, when he will go to Northampton, Mass., to enable Mrs. Coolidge and himself to vote. He is in the midst of a "back porch" campaign with the South portion of the White House as the stump from which he addresses the visiting Republican delegations.

SECRETARY HUGHES is having some difficulty in discussing the League of Nations in his political speeches. The reason is this: As a Republican leader he was to lambast the league in view of the fact that Mr. Davis has come out strongly for American participation, but at the same time he does not dare to go too far in his criticisms of the political methods of European powers for his remarks, made as Secretary of State, may be misinterpreted abroad.

MARYLAND'S Special Congressional election, made necessary by the death of Congressman Sydney Mudd, assumes an importance that it otherwise would not have because of the possibility of the Presidential election being thrown into Congress. Before Mudd's death, the Maryland delegation in the House was split evenly between Democrats and Republicans. Under that condition, it would have no vote in breaking a deadlock in the electoral college. Mudd was a Republican. If the Republicans win the special election, the Maryland delegation will remain deadlocked and voiceless, but if the Democrats win the delegation will be in a position to vote for the Democratic Presidential candidate. Leading orators of both parties will participate in the Maryland campaign.

THE FIRST THING that Senator Borah found out when he started his investigation of campaign expenditures was that his own party had collected the most and was spending most of the money in the great fight for votes that comes to an end on November 4. Well over a million dollars had been collected by the Republicans, their records showed, while the Democrats and Progressives were getting along with less. One of the surprises, however, was that the LaFollette supporters were spending far more than the Democrats, though later and more complete figures may change this reckoning.

AS THE TIME for the election approaches, the Administration is putting off many things instead of cleaning them up in a hurry. One of the reasons for this is that more than half of the officials are spending a lot of time in speechmaking. Among the matters which appear to be in a fair way to be delaying until the middle of November is the proposal to change the tariff on sugar. The question is before the President for decision, but the additional data he has asked for will take a long while to get together. The delay has led to harsh criticism of the President by the Democratic National Committee which points out that a reduction in the sugar duty would save the American people hundreds of thousands of dollars.

THE HOUSING SITUATION in the Capital has become acute, the courts having rendered a number of decisions aimed at the abolition of the Federal Rent Commission, which has fixed rents on residential property here since the war days. As soon as the commission is put out of business, rents are expected to soar sky-high. One group of citizens has drawn up a petition to the President asking permission to live in tents on the White House grounds, pointing out that there are no apartments which they can afford to occupy.

Government employees in France are discontented with the salaries paid and it is proposed to grant an increase by reducing the number. Under the increased schedule salaries will range from $300 to $2,000 per annum. France ought to be saving money.

You can't retain a position at the top without immense sustained effort. Those who are climbing will bump you off. Shadow boxers never score a knockout.

McAdoo Asks Kentucky Democrats for Full Support of Ticket.

Louisville, Ky., October 21.—William G. McAdoo, writing from his sick bed at the Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, has addressed a message to Kentucky Democrats through the Louisville Post. He appeals for full support to the Democratic ticket, National and State, and expresses the hope that Senator Stanley will be returned to the United States Senate. His letter follows:

The Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, Maryland, October 16, 1924.
Editor Louisville Post:

I regret extremely that I cannot speak in Kentucky. I have been detained at the hospital longer than expected, and the doctor absolutely forbids my undertaking a speech-making trip so soon after the operation.

I particularly regret that I cannot go to Kentucky, because Kentucky gave me such wonderful support in the New York campaign. There is nothing I would not do for my Kentucky friends within my power and ability. But in the circumstances, I cannot do more than express my gratitude and urge my friends in Kentucky to give their hearty support to the Democratic ticket, State and National. I hope that the electoral vote of the State will be cast for Davis and Bryan, and that Senator Stanley may be returned to the United States Senate.

With the kindest regards, I am Cordially Yours,
WILLIAM G. McADOO.

VERONA FREE FAIR

GREATER SUCCESS THAN EVER LAST SATURDAY

Last Friday, October 24th, the citizens of Verona and surrounding country, with the able assistance of County Agent R. J. Matson, staged their second annual "free fair." An estimation of 2,000 people, was placed on the attendance, which is more than a "crowd" for a Boone county enterprise. Nearly every precinct in the county was represented in the attendance and quite a number outside of Verona were represented in the exhibits.

The most striking feature of the days entertainment was the Baptist Orphans Home Band, of Louisville, composed entirely of girls, and their playing left nothing to be desired.

E. J. Aylor's grandsons of Hebron neighborhood won the blue ribbon in his class, and also won the sweepstakes premium. This boy has never been defeated in a baby show, having won eight blue ribbons.

There were two basket ball games staged between the Verona and Union boys' athletic teams. Union was victorious in both of these contests.

Dinner was served on the grounds by the local Parent-Teachers Association, which is an important factor in Verona civic life.

There was no admission charged as the affair was financed entirely with funds raised by private donations from Verona citizens.

The affair was certainly a huge success.

DECIDED SUCCESS

IS PLAY GIVEN BY THE PARENT-TEACHERS ASSOCIATION

The Burlington Parent-Teachers Association presented the "Birth of a Nation" to the patrons of the Petersburg and Burlington theaters last week and the venture was a pronounced success both in point of the interest displayed, as well as from a financial angle.

The film was exhibited in Burlington for three nights beginning on Tuesday and ending on Thursday with splendid audiences each evening. From here it was taken to Petersburg on Friday and Saturday nights, where it was shown to one of the very largest crowds that ever gathered in the Petersburg theatre.

The Association is very grateful to Mr. Porter, the manager of the two theaters for his generous concessions in their behalf, and they also thank the people of Petersburg and Burlington, especially those of Petersburg, for their generous support, although the Association feels that it has given value received to each and every patron who attended.

Edward Easton, one of the best farmers on Woolper creek, has harvested one of the best crops of corn in the county—that is he has it all about husked, and he is now figuring how he will get it to the barn as the land he raised the corn on is so steep that it can not get a wagon or sled to it. Sack it and roll it down Ed.

Rex Berkshire and Lloyd Weaver, who never miss a Friday night attending the movie show in Burlington, attended "The Birth of a Nation" all three nights last week, and pronounce it the greatest play they ever saw.

Plan International "Listening In"

Commander C. P. Edwards, left, director of radio for Canada; Capt. P. P. Eckersdorf, chief engineer British Broadcasting company, and Arthur H. Lynch, editor of Radio Broadcast, are co-operating in making it possible for European listeners to listen for European stations and for European stations to listen for American stations in Canada, Cuba, Porto Rico and the United States without interference. The tests will take place November 24 to 30, inclusive. Europe will listen for America from 10 to 11 p. m. And America will listen from 11 to 12 p. m.

BANK BUILDING MOVED. MY OLD KENTUCKY HOME.

The moving of the Boone County Deposit bank building from the south east corner of Washington and Jefferson streets has left a vacant spot at that corner, of which there is no one living in the town that remembers ever seeing this corner vacant before, although we have citizens who have passed their 80th and 87th birthdays, but none of these remember when the building was erected.

According to our oldest citizen, who was born in 1837, the building must have been built in the early thirties, which for 50 years or more was used as the County Clerk's office, and from which thousands of the county's citizens who have crossed the Great Divide, and many who are now living, secured their marriage licenses.

It was in Sept., 1889, when the new court house was completed, the building was sold to the Boone County Deposit Bank, which was organized in 1886, and was doing business in the room now occupied by Mrs. Sarah Carpenter as a residence. The first officers of which were: F. R. Riddell, President; Dudley Rouse, Vice President; J. C. Revell, Cashier; Directors: J. Riddell, Edgar Cropper, J. W. Calvert, J. Frank Grant, R. C. Randall, Geo. E. Rouse, Dudley Rouse and J. C. Furnish. Of these Dr. J. C. Furnish, of Covington, is one of our one-liners.

The old building now sits on the lot between D. E. Rhyne's store and the Boone County, on the site of the postoffice building, which was destroyed by fire a few years ago, and will be used by the bank until their new structure is completed on the corner from which the old one was removed. The moving of the building did not interfere with the bank doing business, as they continued to receive and hand out money as they moved along.

READ THE BIBLE ITSELF

ATTORNEY GENERAL DAUGHTER GIVES OPINION FOR BENEFIT OF ERLANGER SCHOOL HEAD

Frankfort, Ky., Oct. 20.—The Bible itself and not quotations from it must be read in the public schools of the State, according to Attorney General Frank E. Daugherty, who construed the law passed by the 1924 Legislature providing for the reading of the Bible in the public schools for A. A. Allison, superintendent of schools at Erlanger.

"I am of the opinion," the Attorney General said, "that reading of quotations from the Bible would not comply with the statutes, as it seemed to be the intention of the Legislature to require the teacher to read portions of the Bible itself. Quotations from the Bible would open the way for reading interpretations, and the law eventually would not be fully carried out."—Louisville Post.

BE CAREFUL WITH FIRE.

Citizens of Burlington should remember that the fire-fighting equipment of the town is somewhat limited, and while it has in many instances done effective work, in case of a very large conflagration, it would be wholly inadequate to subdue the flames. Have the chimney and flues of your dwelling house examined thoroughly and put in safe condition before starting a fire in heating stove or grate, and be careful about the burning of leaves during this dry weather.

HALLOWEEN DOINGS.

Halloween was once celebrated by the young people as a time when they tried out future tests to determine who their future husbands and wives would be. Our young folks have become so sophisticated that they do but little of that.

The early dark of the Halloween period is welcome to the youngest element, and it furnishes just the cover they desire for their ghostly tricks. The Irish spirit so possesses them that in many localities they have been observing Halloween ever since it was dark after the evening meal.

A reasonable amount of such escapades is tolerated. But if real mischief is done, it is time for the kid element to make sure that it is not got its own reward. But if the kids are content with mere harmless noise, the old crowd of Burlington would better reflect that it was young once.

WINTER ACTIVITIES

In some country towns there is so much going on through the winter that people can scarcely find evenings. There are card-clubs and church suppers and fraternal society meetings and entertainments. These people in country communities often have more things doing than folks in large cities where there is supposed to be so much more going on.

In other country communities a condition of somnolence prevails. People are in the main satisfied to sit around in their homes no doubt doing a lot of good reading, but they get rather dull. People get the idea that it is a matter of great difficulty to put over public projects. It is hard to find leaders who will take responsibility.

Such a condition develops a kind of inertia that must hold back any community. The wide awake town where there is too much going on would be preferred by most people. These bright and alert folks are at least getting plenty of new ideas and they are sure to profit by them. People get used to activity so it does not bother them to get out and put over the public projects that should be taken up.

It is hoped that our folks here in Boone county will look at the winter evenings which will soon begin as a time of opportunity. We can do a great deal in this time, if we will. We can go in for intellectual culture, and learn to appreciate many things of which we are now ignorant.

Or we can plan for more social enjoyments. This seems only fair to the young people, who will never be contented in a town where there is not considerable fun going on.

Or we can study economic conditions, and plan for business and community developments that shall bring greater prosperity and secure a better market for our products. One time this winter is of the nature of valuable capital, which spent wisely can bring fine results of progress and hope.

THAT STANLEY CARTOON

If you want to know how many friends a man really has, just "tramp on his toes."

We knew A. O. Stanley had many friends in this county, but last week when our paper contained a certain cartoon in reference to Mr. Stanley, we received quite a bit of friendly criticism from friends of Mr. Stanley. They said we didn't even know he had. However, when we explained the situation, they were satisfied. They had not noticed the label "Political advertisement," directly under the cartoon. The space was bought and paid for by the Sackett organization, better known as the Anti-Saloon League, and the cartoon was not placed there by us voluntarily. Our columns are open to the advertising public and we have never turned anyone down. We cannot afford to do so. You can get some further information in this connection, if you read another column of this issue.

HOUSECLEANING TIME.

The men of our families have for years looked forward with an apprehension to housecleaning time. If their fall overcoat has been in a strange place because the hall closet is being cleaned, they get desperate and begin to utter sedition against the household powers.

The old time housewife seemingly enjoyed housecleaning. She was used to drudgery that the oil of the task did not bother her. The thought of the cleanliness and sweetness to be produced at the end of the process lighted her face with anticipation. When the men came home, after the last windowshade had been put to rights and the final twist had been given to the "riders" on the parlor chairs, the women looked to the men folks for their warm approval. It was rather disheartening that the men could rarely see the difference. But the women knew, in every pattern of the parlor rug, and the dustless splendor of the woodwork,

KY. DEMOCRATS UNITED.

Louisville, Ky., Oct. 23.—That the one stand of John W. Davis, Democratic nominee for President, in Kentucky served to unite the party as no other factor has been able to do, was the opinion expressed by Democratic leaders.

In commenting on the effects of the Davis invasion of the State the belief was expressed that he had:

1. Captured many independent voters open to conversion.

2. Stirred the Democratic organization to extraordinary activity.

3. Impressed upon the voters the necessity of keeping the Democratic army united by supporting Davis through the election of Senator Stanley and Democratic Congressmen.

Of the latter issue, Mr. Davis made the following pointed remarks:

Louisville—"I am glad to believe that Kentucky realized the value to itself and to the nation of the long and faithful service rendered by Senator A. O. Stanley and that the Democratic administration will be supported and aided by his re-election and that of the entire congressional ticket."

Elizabethtown—"I want to send back to you my old friend and colleague, John Johnson and to renew the commission of another distinguished Kentuckian with whom I served in the lower House of Congress and whom you elevated to the Senate, who has rendered a long career of faithful and intelligent public service. Send Senator Stanley back to Washington."

Bowling Green—"I want the people of this old Third District to send back to Congress the man with whom I served twelve years ago and who sat side by side with me on the same committee—Bob Thomas. Send him back to Washington. And I served also in the House with another great Kentuckian, whom since that time you have elevated to the Senate, and whom we hope this year you will give a new commission of power—Senator A. O. Stanley."

Franklin—"I earnestly hope that you will reward his long and faithful service by sending back my old friend Bob Thomas to Washington to cooperate with a Democratic President, and I hope also that it is your purpose to send to the Senate Senator Stanley for the same work."

Last Sunday, October 26th about fifty relatives and friends of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Kirkpatrick gave them quite a pleasant surprise.

Young people admire who is big and conspicuous. Many of the youngsters may look down upon the school which they attended, because their classes are small and their building is a little one compared with some great city school they have seen. Yet a large part of the most successful men of America attended just such schools. But these schools were located in an environment of earnestness. The families from which the children came were all hard workers, they fritrated away no time in foolish pursuits. This spirit pervaded these little schools, and it taught these great men to make the best of every opportunity.

ALEXANDER YELTON WINS

FIRST PRIZE IN CONTEST FOR BEST ESSAY ON THE BOND ISSUE

A prize was offered by A. B. Rouse, County Chairman of the Boone County Good Roads Committee, to the boy or girl in the Burlington school who should write the best essay on "Why People of Ky. Should Vote for the Bonds." They were to be under 500 words.

The papers were graded by Judge Lassing without knowledge of the author, and first prize was awarded to Alexander Yelton, second to Virginia Yelton and third to Hazel Marie Clure. We publish the winning essay.

Why People of Kentucky Should Vote For the $75,000,000 Bond Issue.

People should vote for the bond issue for many reasons, that are of vital importance for the progress of a state or nation.

First come the roads in the bond issue. Roads are one of the main achievements of civilization. They enable man to ship his produce and to import all his necessities in most places, but in few places Kentucky at a reasonable cost. It has been found that the difference of prices in hauling is from 8 cents to 39 cents higher on bad roads than on good ones. Over our present bad roads only six per cent of our vegetables and eleven per cent of our fruit are shipped. The chief export is cereals, because on account of bad roads an irregular track transit (caused by bad roads) which can not ship their perishable products at the proper time. The roads also play a large part in the school, also in churches, where there are bad roads there is a low attendance per cent while where there are good roads a much higher percentage will be found.

Education is a very essential thing now as the men of today are all specializing in some branch of work. The bond issue will greatly aid education in Kentucky as it plans to give so much to the University which is badly in need of room and equipment, and a certain amount to normal schools for the whites and to build a new one for the negroes in the western part of the state some where. Kentucky needs teachers, both black and white especially black, most of our negroes have to go out of the state to get their education and then they remain out. The school for the blind is to be given a certain per cent from which is to be purchased supplies and equipment, then the school for the deaf will get a certain per cent to help look after its necessities. Don't they need to be trained as well as any one else? The charitable institutions need looking after the bond issue also gives them a large amount for their support, the institutions of correction also need attention, the bond issue looks after this to the fullest extent. In the prison now they are putting two in cells that are not more than large enough for the average sized man, this often indirectly changes the penalty from a few years to death. The "Bond Issue" aims to correct this. The floating debt will be paid off by the Bond Issue, which can only be paid off otherwise by direct taxation.

This $75,000,000,000 is to come from a 3-cent tax on gasoline which you are already paying, and from the motor license and a 3.45 per cent on property which is already being paid by taxpayers.

Then why shouldn't we say vote for the bond issue, it means better roads, cheaper transportation, easier traveling with more comfort, better educated people, better cared for blind, deaf and tubercular patients. Forget the Pay-as-you-go and adopt the new one-use-as-you-pay and vote bonds.

Political leaders in all parties are predicting that within the next ten years party lines will completely change in this country. There seems to be no doubt that the Liberal Labor Party will be formed next January and as a result the big business interests will unite in the formation of an opposition party to be called the "Conservative Party." In that event the United States will be following the Political system of Great Britain, and the political contests will simmer down direct issues between capital and labor.

REPUBLICANS: Bornhorst and Rouse will split the Democratic vote in the District. Vote for LANDRUM—He can win for Congress.

STATION SLOGANS POPULAR WITH BRITISH FANS

The radio fans on the other side of the Atlantic are looking forward to International Radio Week with an unusual amount of interest, according to an announcement made by Arthur H. Lynch, editor of the "Radio Broadcast," who in receipt of a report from Hugh S. Pocock, editor of "Wireless World and Radio Review," of London, England, in charge of arrangements for the international tests on the European side of the Atlantic. M. Pocock reports very gratifying success in securing the cooperation of the British and Continental stations to participate, and promises that internationally prominent speakers and artists will appear before the microphones during the test week.

"Among other things," Mr. Pocock adds, "the listeners in England are very much interested in hearing the names and mottos of the American stations. A station motto lends color and romance to radio. We on this side of the Atlantic often sit up until early morning in an effort to log the American stations, and it is always a pleasure to hear the station's mottos recited. For one thing, it lends reality to the distance that the speed of radio otherwise annihilates. It causes us to realize the vast extent of the United States with its climates and picturesque locations."

The week of Nov. 24-30 this year will be a week of international features and one of the features on this side of the Atlantic will be the widespread effort to log the North American stations by their slogan or mottos. From time to time reports have come in from listeners in which they state they have listened to "The Call of the Motor City," WCC Detroit; "The Voice of the South," WSB, Atlanta; Where the "West Begins," WOC, Davenport; "Memphis Down in Dixie," WM, Memphis; "The Station with a Soul," WLW, Cincinnati; "The Breadbasket of the World," WEAH, Wichita, Kansas; "The Quaker City Siren," WDAR, Philadelphia; "The Home of the Cornhuskers," WFAY, Lincoln, Neb.; and "The Voice of the Millions," WFAP, New York City.

THE PARALYSIS OF THE CROWD

There is something in country experience that seems to wake up people's minds and activity, and make them think. And there is something in the city environment that tends to restrict such activity.

A city dweller usually finds that his abilities are neglected. If he wanted to take hold and help in public enterprises, he would find hundreds or thousands of others who were offering their services, and he often would not usually be taken advantage of.

City people stand on street corners and watch the crowds go by. They get out and see the parades. They are constantly going to shows. All these ways of spending time to not call for activity on their part. They become contented with just sitting still and watching things. This tends to develop a negative and passive attitude.

On the contrary people whose homes are in rural communities and country towns find themselves called upon for action. There is plenty of room for their activity. If a boy would like to play ball, he can find others who would like to do the same thing, and he gets his chance to play. In a city he would not probably be able to get on any team, consequently would have to content himself with buying tickets to watch the other fellows do it.

It is the same in his work. He is not part of some big industrial machine whose initiative is not called for. He has his own little niche, in which he has problems to solve, and these make him think. He becomes resourceful in meeting these problems, and when some difficulty arises, instead of giving up discouraged, he is inclined to plan out ways of overcoming it. So his initiative, so his power grows, if there is any ambition on his part. The country town, gives young people the finest chance in the world for self development, if they could but realize it.

Every one who has the right to vote should go to the polls November 4th and cast his or her vote for the presidential electors who will cast their vote for the presidential candidate of their choice and when this has been done Davis and Bryan should receive a majority larger than has ever been given the Democrats. Democrats should vote the ticket straight. Hon. A. O. Stanley is being opposed by his Republican opponent, but by outside influences which should be repudiated. For Congress we have the names of three men on the ticket. Hon. A. B. Rouse the regular Democratic candidate and Mr. Landrum, the regular Republican candidate, but who is not making a campaign as he realizes it is useless. Then we have the name of Bornhorst, independent ex-democrat and anything to get on the ballot, who hopes to get a seat in Congress on account of the LaFollette bolt. No Democrat or Republican should think of casting his vote for that candidate, and as the Republicans know, as does their candidate Mr. Landrum, that he cannot be elected, they should not permit the election of an independent, nor contribute to his election. In order to do no do they should vote for Hon. A. B. Rouse for Congress and give him the largest majority he has ever received.

MINERALS FOR THE DAIRY COW

Mr. W. G. Kite, one of Boone county's leading Jersey breeders, was in the office last week leaving us a marked copy of the Jersey Bulletin, a weekly Jersey magazine. The article marked by Mr. Kite, stresses the importance of feeding minerals to the dairy cow. On account of lack of time and space we cannot publish it in full, but we are pleased to publish the more important parts of it. Read the following:

Today both scientists and skilled feeders recognize the fact that so-called "Balanced Rations" do not contain sufficient mineral matter for maximum growth, production and reproduction under our present system of feeding. Concentrates and roughages do not furnish these vital elements in sufficient quantities.

The amount of mineral matter present in the soil in the water, in the vegetation and in different feeds varies. The requirements of animals also vary in accordance with the method of feeding. In order to produce milk at a profit it is necessary to force the cow in other words "improve upon nature" and in this case nature's food must be varied or supplemented accordingly.

It is not natural for a cow to produce milk in quantity except to raise one calf each year to weaning time. Man has improved on nature by improving nature's methods.

When we begin to force an animal beyond its natural growth or production, it gets out of balance organically unless the feed is varied accordingly. In other words the natural proportion of minerals and substances which are largely drawn on in this forced feeding for production must be increased.

A condition that threatens the dairy industry in many sections is the development of what is known as abnormal or depraved appetite, particularly of cows in milk.

Dairy cattle under this condition will eat or try to eat nearly every thing under their nose, including rags, old shoes, rubbers, dirt, fence posts and the wood partitions in stables and sheds. Post mortem examination of animals that die suddenly show that nails, screws, wire, glass and other foreign substances, in an attempt to supply the system with minerals.

Under such conditions, the best milkers frequently dry up easily and some of them may even die. The growth of a deficiency of minerals in the hay and other feeds is responsible for this condition, because when feeds do not supply the calcium and phosphorus required for milk production and for reproduction, these minerals are drained from the animal as a result of the abnormal and it of course declines in vigor and productive powers. Depraved appetite is a sure sign of a lack of minerals in the ration.

Abortion is another of the serious problems that breeders and dairymen have to contend with. The loss of a valuable calf is a serious matter and a loss in the production of the cow always follows. When a cow aborts once, the condition is liable to become chronic or result in sterility.

Abortion may result from a germ infection, an injury, a loss of vitality or a combination of any of these. In most cases this trouble appears in high producing herds that have been pushed to top production, or in cows that are directly heavy milkers. It is often directly traceable to the lack of minerals in the ration which has caused a loss of vitality or a breakdown in the general health of the cow.

A cow requires a large amount of minerals to keep her going. The solids in milk are about one-fifteenth mineral matter. In addition to this a large amount of minerals are lost in the excretions. Then too, the development of the calf for whatever they will bring. This loss is largely unnecessary and can be reduced.

The following is an excellent mineral mixture: Common salt, 1 part; calcium phosphate, 1 part; calcium carbonate, 1 part; hardwood ashes, 1 part; sterilized bone meal, 2 parts; charcoal 1 part.

Common salt is needed by all animals to aid digestion and build tissue.

Bone meal furnishes calcium and phosphorus for all body needs.

Calcium phosphate builds, bone teeth and milk.

Calcium carbonate is an alkali and tends to neutralize acidity of body fluids. This helps to overcome acid milk.

It also aids in controlling acidity, for coagulation will not take place unless there is an alkaline reaction in the womb.

Hardwood ashes is also an alkali and a calcium carrier.

Charcoal is a gas absorbent and stimulant for complete digestion.

The above mineral mixture can be fed either by putting a tablespoonful on the grain for each cow morning and night or when mixing the grain mixture, four pounds of mineral should be added to every 100 pounds of grain.

If a mineral is used, salt should be used as usual in addition—free access to it at all times.

By supplying all the mineral need of the cow by an alkaline reaction in the body, the health and vigor of the animal is maintained, sterility and abortion reduced and acid milk is avoided, garget and other complications, frequently due to a lack of proper minerals, are overcome.

THAT BIG WORD—THINK!

Young man, if you aspire to be a boss you have got to be a good servant. If you have been through the ranks yourself, you understand what it means to be a good servant and you will not have any trouble being a boss when the time comes. Your men will follow you. You won't have to drive them. Intelligence is all that is needed and every normal person has a fair amount of it. Pick the thing you can do best, or think you can do best.

Think! People don't think enough. Think before you take a job. And above all, think after you go to work on that job. Then you won't have to change jobs. Change is a bad thing usually for both you and the job. Thinking makes changes unnecessary.

Requirements are higher today. But there are just as many opportunities for the boy who starts out to succeed. There are fewer get-rich-schemes. Boys must work for the so-called fat job. And if you follow the leading of these so-called fat jobs, you'll find the leader has been on the trail a long time. It has been re-overnight business. He's probably done more hard than easy things along that trail. Vision, stick-to-it-iveness, courage, have gone into the making of it. And an understanding of human nature.

This is an age when men who "think" are advanced to positions of responsibility.

REPUBLICANS GIVE UP HOPE ON COOLIDGE

Kentucky G. O. P. now concentrates all its efforts on behalf of Sackett.

Louisville, Ky., October 20.—Strategy of Republican managers in the State campaign has now become apparent to all observers.

Realizing that Coolidge cannot carry the state, they are centering all their energies on the race of Fred M. Sackett for Senator. This is shown by the manner of organizing Republican clubs.

Sackett for Senator" is the style under which all their club organizations are effected. No Coolidge clubs nor Daves clubs nor Republican clubs are being organized. They are ready to abandon Coolidge; Daves and everybody else, except the convicted Congressman in the Tenth District in order to help Sackett.

Many Republicans are complaining of this shift in the "Pay-as-you-go" and the National ticket; but it is an open confession by the leaders of the weakness of the ticket in this state and the expression of a forlorn hope that Sackett will be able to make some kind of a contest against Senator A. O. Stanley. The latter, of course, cannot contend with the financial resources of his millionaire opponent; but the asset of the friendship of thousands which Senator Stanley has made during his public career leaves the outcome of this race beyond doubt.

WAR VETERANS ORGANIZE TO HELP STANLEY

Louisville, Ky., October 20.—War Veterans of Kentucky have organized a "Veterans-Stanley for Senator" club with headquarters at 603 Louisville Trust Building. Jouett Henry of Hopkinsville has been elected president, J. T. E. Stites, secretary, and James P. Gregory, Frank L. Simpson of Lawrenceburg and H. H. Denhardt, Bowling Green, vice-presidents.

In addressing members of the club Mr. Henry said that November 4th affords former service men an opportunity to give "forceful and effective expression of their appreciation of the unswerving and sympathetic services rendered on our behalf by the distinguished senior Senator from Kentucky, Hon. A. O. Stanley."

Mr. Henry points out that Senator Stanley fought for the soldier not only during, but after the war, and fearlessly championed the cause of former service men for adjusted compensation, for a pension, for the relief of disabled comrades and assisted in exposing the corruption in the Veterans' Bureau.

"Kentucky needs in the senate," he states "one who brings to the problems of statesmanship an understanding that can come only from a lifetime devoted to their study, one who seeks this honor as a mere recreation from a life devoted to affairs wholly removed from questions of government."

With this issue of the Recorder the political, as well as the bond campaign is a closed book. The Recorder's hand is in for the settlement of our own folks, the editors and their people are and have been for years residents and citizens of Boone county and we believe we have championed what was for the best interest of our people. We believe that our people will be benefited if the $75,000,000 proposition is carried, and the Pay-as-you-go advocated without pay. We will receive the benefit of the bond plan if it carries, but if it fails we will pay the same amount in taxes and what we will receive for the improvement of our roads and institutions has never been paid up. The Pay-as-you-go advocates. Boone county should poll an overwhelming majority in favor of the $75,000,000 bond issue which not only provides funds for our roads but also for the state educational, charitable institutions.

Vote YES on the Bond Issue.

READ AND HEED

A few facts and figures on the proposed Bond plan as compared with the "Pay-as-you-go."

For 132 years Kentucky has been operating on a plan similar to the "Pay-as-you-go," but for over 23 years there has been a deficit each year, and the state is in debt approximately $6,000,000.

An urgent demand has been made by the people from all over the state for the improvement of our roads, schools, penal and charitable institutions and payment of our state debt. It has been conceded by all that our present plan known as the "stay-as-we-are" plan must be abandoned and that "Kentucky Must Go Forward."

But two methods are known to us by which to meet the desired ends, the "Pay-as-you-go" and the other is the bond plan. Here is the true "Pay-as-you-go" plan as compared with the bond plan.

To aid in building roads, paying the state debt, aid of schools, penal and charitable institutions, under the $75,000,000 plan, the following sums will be realized in five years:

1st year	$20,000,000.
2nd year	$14,700,000.
3rd year	$13,200,000.
4th year	$13,200,000.
5th year	$13,200,000.

To create a sinking fund to retire the bonds and pay all interest thereon, all automobile license taxes, 3c gasoline tax and the 3c general property tax are set aside and held inviolably for 30 years.

Now, if the bond issue is defeated and the Legislature repeals the law in regard to the above named three sources of revenue, the above sums provided by the bond law can be raised by an additional general property tax for each of the five years as follows:

1st year	90 cents on each $100
2nd year	63c
3rd year	57c
4th year	57c
5th year	56c

According to the figures of the Pay-as-you-go organization, the $75,000,000 will be realized from the automobile license tax 3c gasoline tax and 3c general property tax, each year the sum of $7,000,000; therefore if we deduct $7,000,000 from each amount to be raised by the bond plan each year, we will need the following additional amounts each year:

1st year	$14,000,000.
2nd year	$13,700,000.
3rd year	$12,600,000.
4th year	$12,600,000.
5th year	$12,600,000.

If they continue the automobile license tax, 3c gasoline tax and 3c general property tax, we will have to raise by a general property tax the above amounts, which will be as follows:

1st year	64 cents on each $100
2nd year	38c
3rd year	32c
4th year	27c
5th year	23c

We can see the amounts provided for by the bond plan each year in this manner, without paying any interest, and make all needed improvements provided for in the bond plan. This plan is the true pay as you go plan and may be adopted by the next Legislature. If you prefer an increase in the general property tax to make these improvements, rather than pay the interest on the bonds without such increase on your property, then vote No. on the bond question. The issue is clear cut and squarely before you. Consider this matter carefully before you decide to turn the Bond Plan down.

SENATOR ERNST FOR BOND ISSUE

The force of leading Kentucky politicians both Democrat and Republican, who have declared in favor of the bond issue, was augmented last week by the declaration of Senator Richard P. Ernst, Congressman M. R. Robison and Chas. H. Morrow for the measure. This is the most striking move that has been made in the way of conclusively demonstrating to the voters of Kentucky that this is not a partisan question, but the most progressive economic movement the State has ever attempted to make. We quote the following in the above connection from the Enquirer:

"The fight over the $75,000,000 bond issue continues to share interest in Kentucky with the Presidential and Senatorial races and even over shadows them. Governor W. J. Fields has kept up his speechmaking for the bonds and has shown a remarkable energy as ever displayed in a Kentucky campaign. Bond advocates conducted meetings during the week in 70 cities and towns. The Pay-as-you-go organization which is opposing the bonds, was also on the job with no diminution of effort."

Developments of the week were encouraging supporters of the bonds. Three Republican leaders—Richard P. Ernst, Congressman J. M. Robison and Charles H. Morrow—in speeches at Jamestown gave emphatic indorsement to the bonds. James B. Brown, President of the National Bank of Kentucky, made a statement indorsing the bond as a good business policy for the state.

REPUBLICANS: Bornhorst and Rouse will split the Democratic vote in the District. Vote for LANDRUM—He can win for Congress.

HONEST JOHN

HONEST GOVERNMENT DAY BY DAY WITH DAVIS

SISTERS, 96 AND 84, TO VOTE FOR DAVIS

Two sisters, one 96 and one 84, walked eight blocks to the polling place nearest their home in St. Louis, Missouri, on registration day, so that they would be on the books to vote for John W. Davis and Charles W. Bryan on November 4. They were Miss Eliza Alter, 96, and Miss Lucille Alter, 84. They have never voted before, because only lately have all of the men members in their family died.

POLITICS, NOT PERSONS

In this political campaign, just as in presidential campaigns of recent years, attention seems to be centered more on the men who are running for president than on the parties and principles they represent.

Newspaper and magazine comments and political speeches run largely to a discussion of Coolidge, Davis and La Follette rather than the issues which are the battleground of the campaign.

The great danger in this trend of thought is that the great policies and principles at stake will be overshadowed by persons; that the institutions of government about which all citizens are concerned will be lost sight of in the striving of individuals.

Principles, not persons, are the main issues. Men are on the stage but for a comparatively short time, but the great underlying principles of government for which they stand or which they oppose, live on. Men are remembered largely because of the causes they championed, and not for any traits of character.

The man in the street who likes to boast of his liberality in political views; the man who says, "I'm for the man, not the party," would do well to remember that voting for the party that a man represents because it stands for certain policies, is American because it upholds the traditions of our representative form of government.

The extension of the popular election of officials and the direct primary system have injected personalities into politics, but there is a limit to this type of campaigning. If a truly representative form of government is to be maintained in this country.

CONSERVING SAVINGS

It is just as much the part of thrift to know what to do with money as it is to save money.

Postmaster General New says that one billion dollars a year is lost annually by the people of the United States who purchase fraudulent securities through the mail. This sum is equal to two-thirds of the estimated total cost of government in the United States, including federal, state, county, city and town expenses.

And this makes it manifest that one of our greatest public duties is to strike at fraud, which cheats people out of their savings, whenever it raises its head.

The government is doing everything it can to encourage the saving of money and the banks are lending valuable assistance with their laudable efforts. In the schools, children are being taught to save through the establishment of school savings banks.

But more will have to be done and said to impress upon the minds of people that the proper care of savings constitutes a very vital part of thrift.

A billion dollars a year absolutely thrown away is a heavy penalty to pay for national ignorance in matters of personal management.

Kentucky has contributed its share to the toll that get-rich quick schemes exact from the credulous, and the people of this community will do well to profit by the experience of those who have listened to the siren song of the worthless stock salesman.

You can't tell just by looking at a boy whether he is going to be a leader in his community or a big league team or just president of the U. S.

IS THE OHIO RIVER BEING USED AS A TRANSPORTATION ARTERY?

Commerce on the Ohio River for the year 1923 totalled 8,280,520 tons of cargo, valued at $110,022,252.73, carried a distance of 708,302,798 ton miles, according to a statement just issued by the Ohio Valley Improvement Association.

1,771 Railroad trains, each consisting of 85 cars carrying a net tonnage of 55 tons of bulk freight per car would be required to carry the 8,280,500 tons of cargo transported on the Ohio River during 1923. Thus, 150,555 freight cars were released by the use of the Ohio River as a supplement to the railroads.

This tonnage consisted of 75 different commodities that were classified and in addition a "Miscellaneous" item which contributed 184,280 tons, valued at $27,641,929.50, carried 28,789,787 ton miles.

622,269 passengers were carried a total distance of 12,924,356 passenger miles. In addition 33,681,520 passengers were transported on ferries as well as 965,127 tons of freight valued at $262,511,895.00.

Livestock, which includes cattle, calves, horses, mules, sheep and hogs totalled 11,279 tons, valued at $1,933,605.64.

It must be remembered that the Ohio River improvement is still in an incomplete stage, but in spite of this, industry is using the river to a considerable extent for transporting diversified raw materials as well as finished products.

When the lock and dam system is complete and the nine foot minimum channel maintained thus making navigation throughout the year possible, the Ohio River will then, and not until then, enter upon the period of its greatest usefulness as a transportation medium.

The first boat passed through the locks at Dam 38, McVie, last Wednesday, October 15th.

THE COMPLETE LIFE

"We get out of life exactly what we put into it," says Harvey S. Firestone, a man who knows by experience.

Life gives back to us more than we bring it; it is true; but if we bring nothing it gives us nothing in return.

Interest, sympathy, a love for earnest work, the human touch, a conscientious wish to close each day with at least some little addition to the structure we are building; the pleasure of knowing that something we have done has speeded the other fellow on his way—these are the things that make life worth while. No man is important in himself, except as he is able to influence others. Any one individual is a mighty small atom in the universe.

It is only as we are able to develop others, to bring out the best that is in them, to guide them in the things that make life worth while, that they will give us anything in return. These are the things that make life complete.

A PROFITABLE PASTIME

Boosting, like an infectious disease, is "catching." Those who boost find in time that their whole system is permeated with the spirit of boosting and that their viewpoint on every question is better.

Honest boosting is profitable. It reacts favorably and brings results when everything else fails. Boosting renders a service for the booster. It takes his mind off the petty things which occupy his attention and prevents him from developing a clear case of brain fog.

Even though it be for selfish reasons, boost and then boost some more. And when you get the right mental attitude for boosting, take your early training in boosting for—There is no better place in the world to live. We all believe that, but we don't think about it often enough.

This community which we call home may have some disadvantages. But when that idea works its way into your thoughts, put it out by enumerating in your mind some of the many drawbacks of communities you know.

Never suffers by comparison. It always will grow in your estimation if you will take a few minutes now and then to think over some of its good points.

And its disadvantages? They will disappear when we boost together as we should for its betterment.

Not merely will the modern voter not stand without hitching, but it is almost impossible to build the patriotism so high that he can't jump it.

Educators complain because the children can't do hard arithmetic examples, and the boys probably think it is strange if the educators can't keep a base ball score.

WILL THE FARMER VOTE AGAINST HIS OWN INTEREST?

Having been born and reared on a farm until I became of age and at the present time owning and operating two farms on which I pay $350 each year taxes and being in close touch with the farming interests of my county by reason of my twenty years connection in the Banking business, in an agricultural section and which business depends entirely upon the success of the farmer, I feel that I am to some extent qualified to write a few lines as to the farmer's side of the $75,000,000 Bond Issue that is to be accepted or rejected by the people of Kentucky on November 4th.

The real estate owner has, for the past century, by taxes on his property constructed practically all roads, repaired and constructed all charitable, Penal and Educational institutions as well as paid for all other expenses of our State Government. Feeling that the real estate owner was entitled to some relief from taxation, the last Legislature proposed to borrow $75,000,000 and use $50,000,000 on roads, $6,000,000 to pay our present State debt and $19,000,000 be used as needed for the improvement and enlargement of our State Asylums, Penitentiaries, State University, Normal Schools, schools for the blind, deaf and dumb and to provide necessary school buildings and teachers in the counties of our State that are not able to support their own schools. Five hundred schools in Kentucky went untaught last year for lack of funds. No one will deny that we want better roads and must have relief from the overburdened conditions of our Penitentiaries, Asylums, University, etc.

The question before us is shall we do these things by a direct tax on our real estate or by the proposed bond issue. The Bond Issue proposes to place the burden necessary to make these improvements upon the automobile owner and thereby relieve the real estate owner of having to pay for these improvements by a tax on his land. The bill plainly provides that the Bonds, if voted, shall be repaid each year from the revenue derived from three sources only:

FIRST—From license taxes on motor vehicles and chauffeurs, second from a tax of 3c on each gallon of gasoline sold in Kentucky and third from the 3.45c ad valorem tax which have been paying into the State Road Fund for many years and which we will continue to pay whether the bond issue carries or not. It is therefore impossible for the farmer to be in any danger of having to pay more taxes by reason of voting this bond issue unless, as some one has jestingly said, the gasoline might become exhausted and we would cease to use automobiles. I do not think however, that this will happen within thirty years and before that time, all the bonds will have been paid.

North Carolina a few years ago voted a similar bond issue and made the improvements similar to what our bond issue proposes and they not only did not increase taxes on the farmers of the State but actually took off every penny of taxes for State purposes from the farm lands of that State. This was accomplished by reason of the fact that with improved roads all over the State more automobiles were used, more gasoline consumed, more tourists came into the State and contributed to this fund on account of the tax on gasoline which they purchased, that these funds increased so rapidly that it was not necessary to collect any tax from the farm lands of North Carolina for State purposes.

Our present State debt is about $6,000,000 on which we now pay 5 per cent interest or $300,000 per year. The farmers and property owners of Kentucky are at present bound to pay this $6,000,000 and the $300,000 interest each year. The bond issue proposes to lift this burden from the backs of the farmers and place the payment of the $6,000,000 principal and $300,000 annual interest on this State debt on the automobile user and let him pay it out of the fund which he contributes to the State by reason of his license tax and the 3c tax on every gallon of gasoline consumed.

I own an automobile and drive several thousand miles per year and I think the 3c tax on my gasoline consumed will really be a saving to me in tires and machine upkeep, besides a saving in consumption of gasoline over good roads, therefore, I can not feel that the gasoline tax will be sufficient annually to pay the bonds and interest? The bill provides that the bonds cannot bear more than 5 per cent interest and shall not sell for less than par. I have reasons to believe on good authority that the bonds can be sold on a 4 1/2 basis but we will take it as it is most, 5 per cent, this will require a sum to pay off the bonds at interest each year $4,500,000. The gasoline tax, automobile license and the 3.45 State Road fund tax brought in last year (assuming that the gasoline tax was 3c instead of 1c as was the case last year) $6,353,614 or a surplus of nearly $2,000,000 over and above the necessary requirements of $4,500,000 to take care of the proposed Bond Issue. This surplus which is to be used in maintaining roads built and extending work on the Primary System of Roads of each county, will naturally increase as we build our roads, because more automobiles will be used and more gasoline consumed and therefore more funds collected by reason of the tax on gasoline and automobile license.

At present we are paying the same taxes as we will continue to pay whether the Bond Issue carries or not and the question is do we want to continue to do this and ride over bad roads for twenty-five or thirty years and run the risk of the next Legislature raising our real estate tax to meet the needed improvements on our State Institutions or shall we run our State Government like any other good successful business is run, by borrowing the money, ride over good roads, improve the State institutions and use these improvements while the gasoline user pays the bill. The 3c tax on gasoline can not be repealed if the bond issue carries, as it is pledged by the vote of the people to the payment of the money borrowed (all lawyers, both for and against the bonds agree as to this) but if the bond issue fails to pass the next Legislature has the right, if they so desire, and the automobile clubs can bring enough pressure to bear on the members, to repeal the 3c gasoline tax and place a tax on our farms to take its place. We take no risk of this kind if we vote for the bonds as the gasoline tax can not be repealed but if we vote against the bonds we take that risk.

Every mile of road built under the bond plan is done, and for all time maintained, by the State without any expense to the county, thereby permitting the county road fund to be used on the side roads. Not a penny of our County Road Fund goes to the betterment of the proposed bonds. In Boone county our county Road Fund is about $4,000 each year, up until this time it has taken about $25,000 of the $40,000 county road fund to keep in repair the heavily traveled roads in our county leaving only about $15,000 for the side roads. If we can, under the proposed bond plan get these main roads constructed and maintained by the State we will have the whole $40,000 to be used on the side roads instead of about $15,000 as here before.

After therefore is of interest to everyone regardless of where he lives.

Vote YES and we move forward without increase taxes on the farmer.

Vote NO and we stay where we are with an increase of taxes on our farms looking us in the face.

Boone county will receive $250,000 from the State to spend on her roads if the bond issue carries. Not a penny can be guaranteed us if it fails.

Part of the bonds are sold each year for five years and 1-30 part of them retired each year for thirty years. I find no fault with the proposed issue. What will you say on Nov. 4th?

A. B. RENAKER.

VOTING INTELLIGENTLY

In a comparatively short time the people of the county must go to the polls and choose another set of federal lawmakers and executives, as well as an army of state and local officials. The progress and prosperity of the land depends upon the decision made in the secrecy of the polling booth on November 4th.

Many people speak contemptuously of politicians and government and groan about high taxes and legislative inaction, yet do practically nothing to improve these conditions under which they fret. Not merely do they take no part in political organizations, but they will not read carefully the news of political developments, study of which will enable them to act intelligently in selecting public officials.

Too many voters decide how to cast their ballots by the current talk on the streets. Others vote for a candidate because his picture makes him look like a capable fellow. Still others are won over by ardent hand-shaking and think that a genial manner and the appearance of good fellowship are more important than business ability and breadth of mind and experience in public affairs.

Then these folks complain because our lawmakers are not able to correct all of the evils from which they think this country is suffering.

The country will have good government only when all of the people form the habit of attentive reading of good newspapers and magazines, so that they will be informed on the big questions of the campaign, and the records of the various aspirants.

Question arises us to what shall be done with a boy when he knows less after going to college than he did before? Many of the young crowd know so much already that it seems hardly necessary for them to attend school.

If Thomas Carlyle had written his "Heroes and Hero-worship" in these days, he would have had to put in several base ball and foot ball players.

REPUBLICANS: Don't you think it time to change Congressmen? Rouse has been in seven years. Vote for and elect LANDRUM this time.

FALSIFY THE RECORD IN FIGHT ON A. O. STANLEY

Dry Leaders Put Words in Mouth of Senator Which He Couldn't Have Spoken

Louisville, Ky., Oct. 27.—Although the Anti-Saloon League is manned by leaders with whom truth is supposed to be a fundamental, they are so bitter against Senator A. O. Stanley that they do not hesitate to wander from it.

The League is publishing a cartoon depicting Senator Stanley's pockets filled with whisky bottles. Carrying or possessing liquor is an open violation of the law, but the League without stopping to inquire whether the object of their animus is guilty, publish it as a proven fact.

Beneath this cartoon they attribute to him the following words, reported in the Journal, a paper openly hostile to Senator Stanley:

"Yes I voted against the Volstead Act and am proud of it and would do so again."

This quotation is fabrication.

There was no vote taken on the Volstead act. It was declared passed without objection. The only vote Senator Stanley ever cast on this measure was to uphold President Wilson in his veto of it, an action which he took as a consistent supporter of the President.

Were the Anti-Saloon Leaguers even partially interested in the truth they could have consulted the Congressional Record for this information, as they did for a quotation which they lift from that publication to use against Senator Stanley.

Another instance of deception practiced by the reverend gentlemen of the League is in the distribution of what they call an "educational ballot."

This ballot shows three candidates for the Senate: A. O. Stanley, Democrat; Fred M. Sackett, Republican and Lon F. Larue, LaFollette-Wheeler ticket.

As everybody knows the LaFollette-Wheeler ticket has no senatorial nomination. Larue is really the third-round lecturer on the Presidential ticket. The attempt here is to get the laboring man to stamp beside Sackett's name in the belief that he is voting for the labor nominee for Senate. This deceptive ballot is printed in an effort to keep the labor vote away from Stanley.

Another lie circulated in the League's letter asking for money is that the wets are putting "UNLIMITED funds" behind Senator Stanley. It is doubtful whether a State campaign has ever been conducted with the meager finances which have marked Judge Samuel Wilson's successful management of the Davis-Stanley races in this state.

HAPPINESS

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

EVANS had been born in New York and had lived there all his life. He was about as provincial as most people who have been reared in a large city and who think they have seen the world. His first view of Nebraska as his train rolled slowly along the valley of the Platte was not a very alluring one. The level farms stretching parched and treeless to apparently limitless distances, the low, bare, unpainted farmhouses in the midst of the haystacks and cattle sheds, the absence of everything beautiful or comfortable, seemed to him to make life there hideously impossible.

"Do men and women choose to live in such a place?" he asked one. "How do they spend their leisure time if they have any? Nothing to do, nothing to see, nothing to go to! With all this level ground, I haven't seen a tennis court since I left New York."

Evans had played tennis ever since he was a boy in "prep" school, and he could not understand how with such wonderful opportunities for the sport no one seemed inclined to take advantage of them.

"They have their household duties," I answered, "very laborious ones at times, and they have their children."

"I should think they'd go insane," he continued.

"Well, some of them do," I answered, "as women do in the city, worn out by society and too much leisure; but in general they work as regularly and as hard as their husbands."

"It seems hell to me," Evans said. On our way back from Denver business required that we visit one of the depleted farmhouses. The man of the house was gone, but his young wife was able to transact the business for which we came. She was an attractive young woman with a shy little youngster hiding behind her skirts. Both she and her husband had been to college, we discovered; they had traveled some, and much to Evans' surprise, they had even been to New York.

"How do you live in such a place?" Evans asked.

"It isn't so bad," she replied simply. "We have each other, we are going to have a home, and we have him," she said tenderly, laying her hand on the child's head. "I'm very happy."

VAUGHAN SCORES ANTI-SALOON BODY

Representative Withdraws Support of League Because It Is Playing Politics

Richmond, Ky., Oct. 27.—Charging that the Anti-Saloon League is an inconsistent organization and is playing in the camp of the Republican Party, Representative Marshall E. Vaughan of Madison County has written a letter to the head of the League in Kentucky cancelling his support of the League.

Mr. Vaughan is secretary of Berea College and is known as one of the leading temperance workers of the State. He represented this county in the last Legislature and has been generally allied in politics against Senator Stanley, whom he charges the League is seeking to destroy politically.

Mr. Vaughan points out the inconsistency of the Anti-Saloon League in supporting a man who was charged by Judge Bertanum his opponent in the Republican primary, with having a cellar full of liquor, and its glaring failure to condemn Congressman John W. Langley, convicted in Federal Court of violation of the prohibition law.

LET SACKETT FINANCE OWN RACE SAYS DRY

Republican Leanings of Anti-Saloon League Scored By Well-Known Kentuckian

Louisville, Ky., Oct. 27.—Charging that the Anti-Saloon League prefers to support moist Republicans rather than dry Democrats, H. E. Cline, of Calhoun, Ky., a lifelong contributor to the League withdrew his support from the organization because of their unfair fight on Senator A. O. Stanley.

Mr. Cline asks some pertinent questions concerning the League's attitude in recent Kentucky elections. They bring out that the League's activities are always planned so as to injure the Democratic and aid the Republican candidate.

In part his letter follows:
H. E. CLINE
County Court Clerk
Calhoun, Ky.
October 20, 1924

Mr. A. C. Graham,
Superintendent Anti-Saloon League,
Louisville, Ky.

Dear Sir:
I have your letter of the 17th. Instant with enclosures, asking me for a contribution in order to carry on your work in the state and to further your plans in the defeat of Senator A. O. Stanley for re-election to the United States Senate.

I will say in this action that I am an ultra-dry and have been for the past thirty years and I have been a regular contributor to your cause since you were organized in this state and have been very much in sympathy with your work. I am in favor of the Volstead Act and in hearty sympathy with the Eighteenth Amendment. I would hate to see the revocation of the Eighteenth Amendment and I would not vote for any man whom I thought was in favor of abolishing this act.

On the other hand, I will have to decide at this time in sending you any funds that may be used against Senator A. O. Stanley for the United States Senate until I am in receipt of some satisfactory explanation from you relative to some things that have been done by your organization which are as follows:

In the race for Governor when Lieutenant-Governor Black whom everybody in Kentucky knew was absolutely dry and Edwin P. Morrow, whom every body in the state knew was absolutely wet, what stand did your organization take?

In the race between J. E. W. Beckham and Honorable Richard P. Ernst for the office of United States Senator Senator Beckham (I am quite sure it is very apparent to all the voters of Kentucky that J. C. W. Beckham had for many years been a prohibitionist in this state, while the Honorable Richard P. Ernst was an unknown quantity at that time but well known now) which side did your organization take?

What stand did your organization take in Mr. John W. Langley's district in his last race for Congress when he had been tried by a Republican Judge and convicted by a Republican Court and given a sentence in the penitentiary for selling bootlegging privileges and bartering away his political birthright for a mess of pottage?

No, Mr. Graham, I prefer to vote for a man whom I believe to be at least honest. I am tired of being hoodwinked by such issues, therefore I shall vote for A. O. Stanley. I think Mr. Sackett is well furnished with funds and is able to finance his own campaign.

Very truly yours, (Signed) H. E. CLINE.

FISH FRY

GIVEN THE LADIES BIBLE CLASS OF BURLINGTON BAPTIST CHURCH BY THE YOUNG MEN'S CLASS

In years gone by when one mentioned a fish fry about this season of the year, and especially in a presidential year, it was a signal for the women to draw up their skirts and shudder. It was a sure sign of a political celebration and ribald doings of most every description. But now, in the latter days, in the era of the Volstead Act, when the "trimmings are all inlaid," the women turn out, when odor of fish begins to arise without the least trepidation, and in fact they give fish fries to entertain Sunday school classes.

Such was the case last Friday night when Rev. Adams' class of men gave a fish fry to Mrs. M. L. Riddell's class of women, as a tribute to the victory of the women's class over the men's in a recent attendance contest.

As 'twas Halloween quite a few of the hosts and guests came attired in various types of mysterious and baffling garb so common to parties on this annual occasion. The identity of many was not ascertained until the general unmasking. Professor Hook, attired as Andy Gump, made a rousing political speech, in which he paid Burlington a high tribute in true Andy style.

After the unmasking Bro. Adams made a very entertaining explanation of the defeat of the Men's Class, and was followed by Mrs. Riddell on the subject: "Why We Won." Professor Hook then made a splendid talk on a very appropriate subject, entitled a "Challenge to Read the Bible," after which followed supper which consisted of fish sandwiches, cake, cider and coffee.

Needless to say it was enjoyed by the women, and the men themselves were partially repaid for their labors although they were agreed that "We Ain't a Goin' to Lose No More."

FREE SPEECH AND PRESS

Dr. McConnell, Methodist bishop of Pittsburgh asserts that it is far better for a Red to speak from a soapbox on the street corner than to denounce the government secretly in some cellar.

It was this same idea that impelled Mayor Tom Johnson of Cleveland to erect a "free speech" stone in the public square from which anybody at any time could safely discuss any question within the bounds of decency.

Oratory is the natural outlet of the average so-called "agitator." Confine that energy, without its natural outlet, and there's danger of an explosion.

No democratic country can have revolution as long as free speech and free press are not interfered with. Change may come, but peaceably. The history of civilization proves this. The quickest way for entrenched power and special privilege to breed its own destruction is to attempt to strangle free speech.

Free speech and a free press are the guarantees of democracy.

DAM 38 COMPLETED

Completion of Dam 38 across the Ohio river at McVie, this county, was announced last Wednesday Oct. 29th, by Col. G. R. Lukesh, United States District Engineer. The dam which bridged a gap between Dam 37 at Vevay, Ind., and Dam 37 at Fern Bank, Ohio, cost $3,000,000. It has been under construction four years. Dedication exercises of the opening of the new dam were held Friday afternoon, Oct. 31, by the Chamber of Commerce of Cincinnati and the Ohio River Improvement Association, assisted by a committee consisting of E. W. Swarthouse, representing the Chamber of Commerce of Aurora, Ind., Lucian Harris, representing the Chamber of Commerce of Rising Sun, Ind., and Charles A. Lowe, representing the Kiwanis Club of Lawrenceburg, Ind. Representatives of the various organizations were conveyed to the dam on a Government boat and taken on an inspection trip through the dam.

FINE SPORT

The world is full of quitters, who when things go against them will say "quaint no use." That is why the bleachers yell when a bunch of ball fuses to give in one inch, but play with increased energy. All who love that spirit applaud the Washington "Senators," when after being behind in the world series ball games, they speeded up their attack, and won out.

The young athlete must learn to play his best when things look dark. He must fill his heart so full of high hope that even when the game seems to be going to pieces, his alert mind will see the opening through which he can make the play that shall spell success. He must remember that a run of good luck may make his opponents careless, and the moment when things seem to be going wrong, may be just the instant when he can make good in a big way.

THE TRAMP MIGRATION

It has been said that the tramp element has been less numerous of recent years. Perhaps the restriction of immigration has made more jobs, so that many former Woppy Willies have been induced to go back on their cherished principles and "accept a position."

Yet reports from some southern localities are that the annual migration has set in, with many of the same old crowd come to sun themselves in their favorite winter resorts. One report has it that they are more vicious than usual, perhaps emboldened by the wave of crime that has swept the country.

The officials of many cities seem to think that they solve the tramp problem when they let a tramp go on condition that he get out of the place. But that only passes the buck to the next town. What those fellows need is the sawhorse and a woodpile, or some other chance by which they can form the habit of working.

WHY DRINK MILK?

Authorities on child care the world over agree that milk is the indispensable food for children. (Children after one year need a quart of milk a day to build strong bodies; this means that there should be provided a glass of milk for each meal and one glass to be given in the afternoon after the noon nap or a "natter school." In making a family budget milk should first be provided for all the children. Other foods provided afterward. Milk is valuable because it is a food that can make new bone, teeth, brain and muscle. It furnishes some of the elements necessary for growth of all of these and it also supplies energy for work and play and warmth. The need of all tissue building material is great during the period of most rapid growth, hence the great need for milk for the growing child.

Whole milk is the best form of milk because it contains all parts of milk—the fat, sugar, protein, minerals and vitamins and each of these is necessary for growth. In buying raw milk be sure that the milk comes from healthy animals, that it is chilled immediately, that it is kept clean, cold and covered and handled by persons free from disease.

In communities where it is not possible to buy whole fresh milk powdered milk may be used. Powdered milk is dried milk made by removing the water from fresh whole milk or partly skimmed or skimmed milk. So far as it is known, dry milk has the same nutritive value as the milk used in its preparation. Powdered milk is the safest form of canned milk and is the easiest to use. In buying powdered milk for the whole milk for children, the skimmed milk may be used for cooking but should not be given to children to drink. Children should be given WHOLE milk, whether canned or fresh unless the physician advises otherwise.

No matter in what form it is taken milk is a valuable food and a food needed to help your child grow and remain well.

FLAG AND BIBLE

PRESENTED TO BEAVER SCHOOL
BY BOONE AND KENTON COUNTY ORGANIZATIONS

A large crowd gathered at Beaver Sunday afternoon to witness the presentation of a flag and Bible to the Beaver school by the Junior Order of Kenton county, and Independent Klan No. 2, of Walton, the Juniors presenting the flag, while Walton Klan presented the Bible. Music was furnished by a brass band from Erlanger.

Rev. R. F. DeMoisey, of Walton, the chairman of the meeting, first introduced Prof. W. B. Elder, principal of the Union High School, who made a stirring address. Prof. Elder was followed by Rev. W. F. Gregory, pastor of Grace M. E. church, of Newport, who proceeded to entertain the large crowd in his usual refreshing style.

THE CAT CAME BACK

The following is from last week's Lawrenceburg, Ind., Register: "Recently L. H. Aylor brought a cat from across the river near Grant, Ky., to his home here, carrying it in a covered box via auto. The cat stayed about a week and then disappeared. A short while after he received a letter from his cousin at Grant saying the cat had returned to its former home. This isn't a fish story but a true cat story."

Tong War Brings Many Arrests

HOUSE AND BARN

ON FARM OF B. H. BERKSHIRE, NEAR PETERSBURG, DE-STROYED BY FLAMES

Last Wednesday afternoon a fire started in a tenant house on B. H. Berkshire's farm near Petersburg. The house was occupied by some men who were cutting corn, and the fire is supposed to have started by some carelessness on their part in caring for a fire they had in one of the fire places.

On account of the isolated location of the house and the extreme dry weather, it was soon burned to the ground, and the fire, catching in the dry grass, soon reached the barn and quickly destroyed it. The racing flames also burned about two acres of pasture before they could be extinguished.

These premises were located on a small farm, formerly owned by R. J. Akin and John Seberry, now living near Burlington.

It was also the last Kentucky home of Price Gibbs, recently here on a visit, and now living in Chennault, Kansas.

The recent rains have partially eliminated danger of such fires, as very thing was so parched and dry that flames could run wild very easily.

GEN. W. B. HALDEMAN

The editor of the Hopkinsville New Era in his column "Daily Jots" noted the passing of Gen. W. B. Haldean, commander-in-chief of the Confederate Veterans, with a short but appropriate and impressive character sketch of the old Southern gentleman, who, with Henry Watterson conducted for many years the leading newspaper of the South and one of the most often quoted in the country. The New Era tribute follows:

"In the passing of Gen. William Birch Haldean, soldier, editor and gentleman, Kentucky loses one of her most valuable citizens and distinguished sons, and hundreds of people a loving and beloved friend. He was of the fast vanishing type of the traditional Southern gentleman; honor personified; courteous; cordial, open-hearted; charming in manners; a noble and dauntless spirit; free of cynicism and guile; of the highest ideals, with cheerful optimism and an abiding faith in his fellowmen and the mercy of God. Devoted to the Lost Cause and one of its most gallant defenders, honored by his comrades with the most exalted post in their gift, no American was more loyal to the reunited country; a patriot in the truest sense. His was a life of service in a large way; his ambition was to be helpful to those who needed him; his heart always open, full of sympathy, eager to bear burdens of others. As a friend he was as steadfast as the stars, and in private and public life there was no blot on his escutcheon. Truly,

"His life was gentle and the elements So mixed in him, that Nature might stand up And say to all the world, 'This was a man.'"

—Lexington Herald.

Mr. C. Dugan, of near Union, was a visitor to Burlington, one day last week. While in town he called at this office and left copy for a public sale, which will be held on Tuesday, Nov. 11th, which will be found on another page of this issue. Mr. Dugan and family will move to a farm near Loveland, Ohio.

There will be three public sales in the county next Saturday.

NEW STADIUM

DEDICATED LAST SATURDAY AT LEXINGTON.

Boone county alumni of State University, Lexington, are rejoicing over the partial completion of a new concrete stadium on Stoll field.

The movement was started early last spring, and in May the contract was let, and by last Saturday enough of the "horseshoe" was completed to seat approximately 15,000 people, though when finally finished it will seat 25,000.

The new stadium was dedicated last Saturday with the sensational Centre team as the opponents of State. State has now beaten Centre in eight years, but in this the eighth year of successive defeat, they won a moral victory by holding such a noted adversary to a T-9 score.

It was "home-coming" day at State and friends and alumni of the University attended from many different States in the Union, as well as from nearly every county in our own state. Boone county was well represented.

We are probably occupying no more space to this occasion than we otherwise would, if the Cincinnati Enquirer had mentioned the affair. The score of the game was not even reported. The people of Boone county, generally speaking, do not take any large Kentucky newspaper, except those printed in Cincinnati, which are generally supposed to be partially devoted to the interests of Northern Kentucky. The Kentucky and Centre alumni, who are plentiful in Northern Kentucky, were very much disappointed at not being able to read in Sunday's Enquirer of one of the greatest days that Lexington ever had.

CHURCH ATTENDANCE.

The commission on evangelism of the Federal Council of churches has started a campaign, to continue through the winter until Easter, which is designed to win converts for Christ through individual appeal.

Getting back to the plan of a Saviour it is proposed that congregations everywhere shall send their members two by two into their neighborhoods to persuade people to take up Christian living, and in so doing acknowledge their belief in it by joining church, or attending if they already belong to some faith.

This appears to be the proper way to attack the problem of declining church attendance. The layman evangelist, if he himself lives the kind of a life that is an example for others to follow, can be much more effective in winning new recruits for Christian living than any other method.

The mass appeal lacks the personal touch that wins men and women to the cause of Christian living. Nothing is so powerful as good example. When deeds stand behind the invitation, it will be convincing. Otherwise such a campaign will accomplish little.

BIG POULTRY SHOW

The Southeastern Indiana District Poultry Show will be held under the direction of the Ohio County Poultry Association this year, and will be held at Rising Sun, Indiana, December 10, 11, 12 and 13th, 1924.

As this show is for the benefit of all poultry breeders classes will be provided and premiums offered for both utility and fanciers' birds.

Judging will be done by J. C. Clipp of Sallio, Indiana.

Howard B. Lashluter, Rising Sun, Indiana, is the Show Secretary, and you should write him for premium list and further information.

COUNTY CHAIRMAN

EXTENDS THANKS TO THOSE WHO ASSISTED IN CAM-PAIGN

As this is being written the result of the campaign for the $75,000,000 Bond issue is not known but I desire to thank every one who in any manner contributed to the support of this measure and especially thank the ones connected with the churches, school houses, halls and stores for the use of their buildings in holding our meetings for the past month and Mr. Fowler for the use of the Court House, which we have used several times.

To those noble women and courageous men of the various precincts who accepted the chairmanship of the campaign, I desire to express my deep appreciation.

I am indeed grateful for the untiring efforts and cooperation on the part of the other two members of our Executive committee, Mr. J. I. Vest and Mr. B. C. Gaines who, at all times, were ready and anxious to do their part in order that Kentucky might not take a backward step.

Likewise I appreciate the services rendered by Judge J. M. Lansing, Judge N. E. Riddell and County Attorney R. H. Leary, the members of the county speakers bureau, who labored night and day with us in this campaign.

I appreciate the services rendered by Mrs. B. C. Gaines the County Chairman of the ladies organization. She did a wonderful work and her selection for this precinct was ideal. To Mrs. Newton Sullivan, Jr., I am profoundly grateful for her kindness to me in looking after my stenographic work in connection with this campaign and which she gladly did without pay or hope of reward of any kind.

The kindness of Mr. B. B. Ham and Mr. L. A. Conner in taking the speaker to appointments when I could not go is very much appreciated and was quite a help to me.

The Editors of the Boone County Recorder, R. E. Berkshire and N. E. Riddell, are to be commended for having convictions and for not being afraid to express their opinions editorially in their paper. Their columns have been open to us at all times and they have donated inches, yes, many, many square feet of space to a cause which they believe to be a relief to suffering humanity.

I have appreciated the company of the men and women in and around Burlington and elsewhere whom I termed "Camp Followers," who left their pleasant homes night after night and traveled with us to every corner of Boone County in order that by their congenial nature or by words of encouragement might make our journeys over the rough roads as pleasant and seemingly as short as possible.

I might add a short word of appreciation to those connected directly with me who gladly performed a good part of my official duties at the bank in order that I might devote the necessary time required in the campaign for the past month.

To those who have not agreed with me upon this great question I have but the kindest feeling. I count them as my friends and am theirs. We may be together on the next important issue affecting all of us.

Assuring that my efforts and motives were for none other than the betterment of my County and State and I am happy in the thought that I was able to render what service I could in this cause.

A. B. RENAKER, Chairman
Boone Co. Good Roads Committee.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

It was with sad hearts that Hebron's three school teams returned home Friday afternoon. They did not carry a single victory with them because Burlington had already secured possession of the spoils by virtue of its three victories. The surprise of the series was the defeat of Hebron's second team by a score of 10 to 9. This team was much larger and heavier than Burlington's second team but the Burlington boys worked on the idea that the bigger they are the heavier they fall and they sure did fall. Kirkpatrick was easily the outstanding star of the boys' first team scoring 16 of Burlington's 28 points. Hebron managed to roll up a score of 12 points.

Burlington's girls also came thru with flying colors winning by a score of 10 to 6. These boys and girls are to be commended for the brand of basket ball they played.

Every one who possibly can should give the Burlington school teams their support next Friday afternoon when they play Bellevue here.

Burlington's Independent basketball team returned home Saturday afternoon with Bellevue's scalp. It was peeled off by a score of 40 to 18. It was with a determination to love the pride of that river town that led the Burlington boys to fight so hard for victory. The first two quarters played showed a lot of unnecessary roughness due to the psychological effect of the side lines. We feel sure that such will not be the case when the return game is played in Burlington. Utz still has his eye on the basket, making 16 points out of the 40. Charles Maxwell, a new member of Burlington's team, was second high with 10 points. Smith was high point man for Bellevue with 10 to his credit.

Robert Cloie, manager of Burlington basketball team, challenges any basketball team in the county. Those desiring games may address him at Burlington, Ky.

UNDER THE HUDSON RIVER

Through solid rock, shifting sand, sliding mud, two great shields are boring toward each other under the Hudson River. When they come together there will be a new vehicular tunnel from Manhattan to New Jersey. The moment of their marriage is, for the engineers in charge, the zero hour. The latter will not know till then whether they have calculated perfectly this blind meeting underground or whether their plans have gone awry.

Last week the shields were less than 500 feet apart. In spite of their huge weight, the distance they have been propelled, and the many difficulties, Chief Engineer Clifford Holland and his staff were confident that the calculations will not be wrong by more than an inch. Each shield weighs 400 tons. The one from New Jersey has taken a snake-like course through mud, the one from Manhattan has had to eat thru stone. They move in shot of 2 1/2 feet, and after each move, "sand hogs" probe for obstructions with long iron bars. Manhattan skyscrapers are used as observation points on which the lines of progress are sighted. Completion of the tunnel is predicted for November.

NATIONAL FOREST RESOURCES BRING IN OVER $55,000,000.

Receipts from national forest resources during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1924, totaled $55,251,903, according to the final tabulation by the United States Department of Agriculture.

This amount is $84,000 less than the receipts for the previous fiscal year, but is $84,000 larger than the average annual receipts of the preceding five years.

Sales of timber and livestock grazing permits were responsible for most of the money received, $3,036,395 having been paid for timber and $1,915,651 for grazing permits. Permits for the use of national forest lands for summer homes and other forms of special use, including water power, brought in $299,946.

Under authority of the acts of Congress covering receipts from national forest resources the sum of $1,346,353 will be paid to the States containing national forest land for the use of the school and road funds of the counties in which such land is situated. In addition, the sum of $529,739 derived from forest receipts will be expended by the Forest Service in building roads and trails within the forest areas.

East Bloomfield, N. Y.—Entertaining a man six years after having attended his "funeral," is the experience of Captain Robert W. Norton, an American Legionnaire of this place, whose guest recently was J. Wilson of Fall River, Mass., and the man Norton thought he buried in France in 1918.

Wilson, a messenger attached to Captain Norton's company, was hit by an exploding shell, October 1918 and killed." His identification tag was found, and placed on a cross that marked the place where he was laid away. Captain Norton, one rainy dismal morning witnessed the service and mourned his friend. It was difficult in the gray dawn to distinguish men, and it was not "Jimmie" Wilson who was buried, but another. "Jimmie" lay torn and bleeding in the bushes some distance away where he was supposed to have been laid away. "Big Bertha." After two days he was picked up by a following outfit and sent to a hospital where for two years he lay too ill to communicate with relatives and not knowing they believed him dead. When he became able, he went back to his home at Fall River and shortly after learning his old Skipper's address, the erstwhile captain and chief mourner, received, as it were, a "visit from the dead."

CHILD FIRE PREVENTION

If all the people of our country were to learn by heart the rules regarding fire prevention which Fire Commissioner Drennan of New York City has suggested for memorization by the school children of that city, so that what these rules require becomes instinctive, we would see a material decrease in our $500,000,000 annual fire loss.

The rules which the Fire Commissioner suggests do not ask for more than ordinary care. He suggests that matches be kept always in metal containers; he warns against throwing remnants of lighted matches, cigars and cigarettes away without seeing where they fall; he tells one not to try to start fires with kerosene, nor to go into dark closets, bedrooms or cellars with lighted candles or matches and not to use lighted candles on Christmas trees.

SEEING STARS

With the visit of Mars during the past summer, when it was only 34,000,000 miles away, and nearer than it has been in a century a remarkable impetus has been given "stargazing."

November is the month of meteors, according to astronomers, and during that time you will recognize in the east old acquaintances in the Pleiades and Hyades in Taurus, and Aldebaran, the fiery-red eye of the bull.

November was known in ancient times as the Pleiad-month and it was then the ancient kings of Persia never failed to grant any request presented to them on November 17, the day the Pleiades came to the meridian at midnight.

The beautiful little group, with five stars forming a tiny dipper, and two additional stars visible to keen eyes, will be one of the most noted groups in the heavens. The V-shape ed cluster of the Hyades is scarcely less famous.

And star after star, and many groups of stars famous for their brilliancy, might be enumerated.

Mars, our old friend, who intrigued us into searching, with straining eyes, the heavenly canopy, during the summer, is passing off the earthly stage. This planet, which was especially bright in October, moves rapidly eastward during November and recedes from the earth.

Mars may be indebted for whatever interest that has been aroused in the earth's neighbor, but Mars pays its visit so infrequently, that we are very apt to have forgotten all we learned this time, before he returns.

WHEN AN INCH MEANS 120 MILES

In a report on voice transmission over the telephone recently prepared by the engineers of The Bell Telephone Company it is claimed that the best results are obtained from the use of the telephone when the lips are held one-half inch from the transmitter.

"Increasing this distance," says the report, "has the same effect as increasing the distance between the person talking and the person listening. Each added inch between the lips and the transmitter is equivalent to adding 120 miles to the distance the voice must travel.

"For long hauls," which is the telephone peoples' method of describing long calls to distant points, the article further states that, "actual air-line mileage is figured and that by the use of tubes similar to radio amplifying tubes the voice is amplified or increased so that it will carry without loss of volume, but all the calculations are based on the distance of one-half inch between the lips and the telephone transmitter."

"Natural tones and care in pronouncing each word clearly and distinctly," is likewise recommended for telephone users who wish to get the greatest efficiency from their service.

POLITICAL HARMONY

The old ideal of the politician was harmony. They seemed considerably indifferent to the results that they achieved in the field of government inasmuch as the betterment of the community. But if they could succeed in so placating all elements that they would hold harmonious conventions for the nomination of candidates after the system then prevailing, it was considered that the supreme demonstration of political ability had been given.

This condition of harmony was created largely by spoils politics, rewarding the faithful heeler with some office that he coveted and promising future recognition to others. It took many promises to carry on the game, because the jobs were never enough to go around. Many of the workers had to be content with hopes of favors to be granted in the future.

The different factions and followers were constantly breaking out in to revolt, due to their failure, real or alleged, to get their full share of the prizes. It took a master hand to keep these rival claimants satisfied. A man had to have much personal magnetism, so that retainers whose hopes had been long deferred or only meagerly satisfied, would be content to rally once more to the old banner and carry on to success.

The public had but little to expect under such conceptions of politics. A minimum of political efficiency was necessary, or the voters would rise in their wrath and upset the results that had been carefully slated for them. But the people were easily led in those times. The problems of government were not nearly so serious, when the cost of all kinds of vice was low. The gun-shoe harmonizers of old time politics find the going hard in these times, when there is a demand for better business methods in government.

EVIDENCES OF PROHIBITION

BENEFITS

Evidences of the success of prohibition in the United States is rapidly multiplying. In 1923 mutual savings banks opened about 500,000 new accounts and reported a net gain of more than $500,000,000 in deposits. During the same period building and loan associations added nearly $600,000,000 to their assets and showed a growth of 838,736 in their membership. At the close of the year there were 10,800,000 accounts in mutual savings banks and 7,202,880 members of building and loan associations. The valuations of real estate have increased more than 20 per cent. In New York City the assessed valuation of 750 properties formerly occupied by saloons, has increased 62 per cent. The real estate valuation increase means several billion of dollars in added wealth to the nation.

Such gains in a year or two forcibly impress a highly significant lesson concerning the purposes to which the workingman's dollar is now being devoted. It cannot be attributed to higher wages because the cost of living, as shown by the purchasing power of the dollar, does not warrant such a saving.

HISTORY MAKERS

When Ezra Meeker, who blazed the Oregon trail seventy-two years ago, rode with a United States army air service pilot from his home to the international air races in Dayton, Ohio, transportation history was being written.

It was a marvelous story of achievement—from the ox team days to the period of conquering the air. It calls to mind the daring trip that Meeker made through the wilderness, the thrilling experiences with marauding Indians and the cholera scourge which he endured.

The Meeker move was joined by others who turned their faces toward the new land and no story of the wild west has more incidents of comedy and tragedy than the now famous journey into the unexplored northwest.

Where this pioneer battled with mad, Indians and plagues, automobiles now travel with ease, motorist finding paved roads and conveniences on every hand, that civilization in its sweep through the west has brought along. The old National Trail which Meeker traveled in that early day appeared as a white thread as he flew in the air conveyance.

The outstanding developments that this half-century of a century has brought makes the blood tingling in the veins of an American citizen and sets his brain in a whirl when he tries to imagine what he future holds in store.

At least the modern wife can no longer complain about the time her husband wastes in the barber shop.

KEEPING THE HAT ON

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

WE WERE visitors in Rome and were cross and impatiently for the Vatican waiting expectantly for a public audience of the pope. It was a bizarre, motley group composed of peoples of all nations and of all walks of life. Priests and laymen, millionaires and beggars, the elect and the outcast touched elbows and jostled each other as they moved about impudently until the appointed hour.

The center of interest was a little balcony at one end of the court draped with a banner bearing the insignia of the cross; it was here that the pope was to appear. As the bells ceased chiming the hour he stepped upon the balcony—an old man, white-haired, erect, with a rare dignity of bearing that commanded respect and reverence even from those of a different faith—or of no faith at all. He stretched out his eloquent hands, and instinctively everyone uncovered and knelt upon the stones of the pavement to receive his blessing—everyone but one, for beside me, unobscured was one of my countrymen standing disrespectful and irreverent, his hands in his pockets, a cigar in his teeth, his hat on his head, gazing with curiosity at the great head of a great church.

There are many conventions which in themselves mean little and which sometimes, perhaps, are best honored in the breach, excepting as they may show our breeding or reveal the spirit that is within us. Taking the hat off is a symbol only, sometimes of reverence, sometimes of respect for honor, or wondrous, old age, or place, or position, or authority. Every time we raise our hats to a woman or stand uncovered as the Stars and Stripes pass by we make an unspoken utterance of our creed.

A man who comes into a public meeting, where there are men and women, and who keeps his hat on until he is seated looks crude, even if he is the big man of town.

We gain in self-respect and dignity and reverence by regarding these conventions. It is a developer of our souls; it is a developer of our character. The American in Rome would have been a better, more refined man if he had taken off his hat, and a better citizen. He would have shown respect for authority, reverence for religion and a regard for the feelings and opinions of others.

"JUNE"

"June," noted for roses, June bugs and June brides is a souvenir of the once proud and haughty "Junius" family who owned many chariots and went to the public baths with the best of the Romans. Famous people nowadays have girls and sons named after them. "June," "July" and "August" were the compliments bestowed on the "Junius" family while Julius and Augustus Caesar each named a month in their own honor.

Poultry Notes

Head lice and chicks and ponits.

Sell the males and produce infertile eggs.

Keep brooding only chicks until they are fully feathered.

You can count your chickens before they hatch if you observe carefully the correct principles of egg selection and incubation.

Wood floors for poultry houses are a little cheaper in first cost, but not easily and are difficult to keep clean and free from vermin.

The location of the poultry house requires very careful consideration, as it has a great deal to do with the convenience of handling and the success with which the work is carried out.

The half-moon type of poultry house is much used, being very similar in construction to the same type of hog house.

Indians are entitled to some credit anyway, for the summer they left us.

Increase Yield of Eggs by Destroying All Mites

Poultry men and farmers sometimes overlook a very important fact. It is that the best of feed, plenty of it, well balanced ration, etc., will not induce hens to lay eggs if they are compelled to roost in houses infested with mites. The little red insect saps the vitality of the hen by sucking her blood.

usually eaten alive, by mites. Chickens cannot lay except when their vitality is maintained. Vitality and mites cannot exist in the same hen roost.

Guard against mites by giving all woodwork inside the poultry house a coat of hot whitewash well carbolic.

The roosts and their supports should be painted all over with carbolicum, zeneolum, carboline, or kresol. These are all similar products, called by different names by different manufacturers. They are cresol or tar oil disinfectants, and are death to mites, while in no way injurious to the chickens.

The time and cost of carrying out these suggestions will be amply repaid by the hens who will show their appreciation by an increased yield of eggs.

Infertile Eggs Contain Some Important Elements

Feeding of infertile eggs that have been candied out of an incubator was mentioned in a recent issue of the Orange Judd Farmer. It was suggested that these be cooked and ground up to feed baby chicks. Some complaint is made about the odor of these eggs. Don't let that frighten anyone. If they are thoroughly cooked there is no danger to the chicks. Even the eggs containing dead germs if candied out before they are too far along, make good feed.

The chicks thrive on these ground eggs, and they furnish some important feeding elements. The shells can be ground up with the eggs. Frequently a number of eggs tested out of incubators is small. In such a case, market eggs are usually profitable as a feed for the first two weeks.

COOLIDGE AND DAWES

Sweep the Country--Will Have 350 Electoral Votes.

Late return indicate that Senator Stanley has been defeated and that Kentucky has been carried by Republicans. The Bond Issue is in doubt, but seems to have been defeated. A. B. Rouse elected by the largest majority he ever received.

Smith, Democrat, elected Governor of New York, and Donahy, Democrat, elected Governor of Ohio.

County Election.

The election passed off quietly in Boone county Tuesday. Boone county failed to cast her full vote. The Democratic majority was 1019. Senator Stanley ran about 100 votes behind the ticket while for Congress Hon. A. B. Rouse ran 500 vote ahead of the ticket. The Bond question won by a majority of near 1,100. The returns indicate the election of the Republican ticket. The fight made against Hon. Arthur B. Rouse by the Kentucky Post resulted in an increased majority for him. The election returns were broadcast by stations W. S. A. I. and W. L. W. of Cincinnati. The dry forces made a strong fight to defeat Senator A. O. Stanley. The vote in Boone county is as follows:

PRESIDENT
Davis	2,207
Coolidge	1,337
LaFollette	59
SENATOR
Stanley	2,110
Sackett	1527
CONGRESS
Rouse	2,647
Landrum	898
Bornhorst	125

The fondest hopes of Bond proponents were realized when Boone carried by better than 2 to 1.

Latest reports showed that LaFollette had carried Cleveland, Ohio, and that Coolidge had carried New York by a larger majority than did Harding.

The basket ball game Friday, October 31, Walton vs. Union, played on the Union court, was a very interesting one, the score of the boys first team being 17-14 in favor of Union. The second team lost to Walton with a score of 10 to 4.

On Friday, Nov. 1, the boys teams will return the games on the Walton court.

The Halloween party given by the school was well attended and greatly enjoyed by all. A nice sum of money was realized which will be used for school improvement. A number of masked visitors added greatly to the general Halloween spirit.

The next regular meeting of the Parent-Teacher's Association will be held at the school building Friday evening Nov. 14th. In connection with the meeting there will be an old time "Spelling Bee"—the parents to spell against the school children. The "grown ups" are urged to attend as this is sure to be an interesting affair.

Jasper Utz, 79, a former well known citizen of Boone county, died Sunday at the home of his son, Owen Utz, Newport. He is survived by his widow, Margaret Utz two daughters, Mrs. Pearl Shuck, of Newport, Mrs. Louis Bassard, of Hyde Park, Ohio; also four sons, William, Allen, Jasper Jr., and Owen Utz. Justice may be blind, but she knows there is no law against the skirts being made shorter.

WHO SAID HE CAUGHT A DUCK?

Ed. Berkshire tells us a good one. Will Berkshire, of Petersburg, which happened while the two were fishing on Woolper creek one day last week. Ed. says Will always takes advantage of him by using two poles, but Ed. says he doesn't think Will is even going to do it again.

Why? Will caught one of Lessa Sebre's ducks, on the second pole his last time out.

LATER—Ed. is now trying to make us believe that the hawk was killed with corn, but we don't believe it.

The publication of income tax payments has raised a storm of protest in certain quarters on the ground that it serves as basis for the volume of business done by the corporations and individuals. In some instances it has resulted in disclosures that have made rather embarrassing disclosures. Treasurer Melton contends that Congress did not intend the lists to be printed in the newspapers, while others contend that the Act of Congress does not refer to the matter other than that the lists shall be open for public inspection. There is but little doubt that the whole matter will go to the Supreme Court to be settled, and in all probability the next Congress will amend the Act so as to leave no doubt about their intention.

A demonstration of the interest of country people in progressive ideas have been given at the State College of Agriculture at Davis, California, which has enrolled more than 60,000 students in its correspondence courses during the past 10 years. In many other states also a similar interest is being taken, and a multitude of people are seeking the best suggestions for the development of rural prosperity.

The result of all this study will be shown in due time, and we shall see gains therefrom in Kentucky. Such gains are not apparent at once. But, silently all through the country communities ideas are spreading that will revolutionize conditions in these localities before many more years have passed.

Samuel Gompers contends that if organized labor will vote solidly for its own candidates for Congress it can elect 170 members and obtain complete working control of Congress. He asserts that this is far more important than the question of who tenants the White House. But organized labor, or its leaders, have so far left a political trail that is not particularly edifying.

Woolen suits are not to be cheaper this winter. The price of raw wool is advancing, and the small cotton crop about 55 per cent of normal, does not promise any decline in cotton goods.

Some of the motorists of Kentucky would favor a world court. If it wouldn't fine them more than $10 and costs when they get pulled in for speeding.

Fact that there are only 6,800,000 income taxpayers would look as if some of these people with poor memory forget to put in their returns.

The motorists are said to be traveling the highways of the air, but they shouldn't try too many stunts up there, as they might run into the fences.

Not merely is a note of caution sounded by many of our political orators, but many of our debtors are showing caution in paying their notes.

Being told to get ready for winter, some people are now going around among their friends to see how much money they can borrow.

Perhaps the reason why so many people are inclined to "rock the boat" is that they let their hands blister if they try to row it.

Another thing this country needs is more of the "pay as you go" idea in government, and less of the "I'll As You Pay" in politics.

Very soon there will be nothing for golf players to do but talk about the way they are going to improve their game next summer.

The Dominion of Canada now leads as the chief exporter of wheat to the United States, and Argentina a close third.

It is claimed that the new dances make the feet bigger, and they certainly feel that way when your partner steps on yours.

Much is being said about slush funds, and they sound pretty suspicious to some who can't get a share of any such funds.

The kids have lost interest in the swimming season now that they are excited to observe it Saturday night in the bath tub.

The fellows who allow rubbish on their premises to accumulate, have not so far much to get insurance rates on.

The people are asked to pause and reflect. There are many of them glad of any excuse for stopping work.

The shouts of the people for lower taxes are only equalled by the holler they make for costly improvements.

Many people acquire a new interest in country scenes about the time the cider crop is ready.

Another thing the matter with this country is too many deals in one political ideal.

Forty-two women are candidates for office in the Arizona election this year.

Some complaint about this year's nut crop, but not in the political field.

THEY ARE GOING.

In this progressive age of ours, in the days of better schools, when people are not satisfied to stand still but want to go forward, we are sometimes forcibly reminded of this progress by the taking away of something we cherish.

Sometimes it is one thing, some times another, and Mrs. J. W. Campbell tells us in poem of a touching, sacrifice she is making for the Hebron Consolidated School. Mrs. Campbell is heartily in sympathy with the forward school movement, tho she regrets the passing of the old country school, and rightly so. We quote the poem, entitled the "Bullittsburg School House."

BULLITTSBURG SCHOOL HOUSE.

The old school house is empty now,
Within—there's not a sound,
Although for years it sheltered all
The boys and girls around.

The place seems quite deserted now,
No more the children play,
And laugh and sing their funny songs,
For—they have gone away.

True—they have gone to other schools.
Perhaps 'tis better so.
But, how I miss the passing of Those children to and fro.

Sometimes they'd wave a friendly hand,
Or speak a word of cheer,
By way of greeting as they passed,
Which now—I fail to hear.

The little things count for so much,
It always has been so.
They make the heart beat faster, and—
They leave an afterglow.

The "Wheels of Progress" I'd not stop,
O no! that would not do,
But I can't help but give a sigh.

DEAR OLD SCHOOL-HOUSE for you.

MRS. J. W. CAMPBELL.

Burlington, Kentucky, October 30th, 1924.

A CONGRESSIONAL ELECTION

The election of the next president of the United States by Congress—either by the house or senate—is one of the projected complications of the present campaign that has received considerable comment.

If by any possibility it is thrown into the house the vote will be, it is predicted: Davis 21; Coolidge 21; LaFollette, 1; states tied, 5. Each state delegation is entitled to one vote, but in case the house is deadlocked, the election of a vice-president would take place in the senate, not by states, but by members. The vice president would succeed to the presidency in the event that the house had not elected a president by March 4, 1925.

Thus the vice presidency has assumed more importance than ever before in the history of our government. The vice president is to be figured during the administration of President Harding, when he was given a seat at the cabinet table and consulted on governmental problems.

There is not now and never was any reason why the vice president should not figure in governmental affairs, because a man who is nominated for the vice presidency should be capable of taking up the duties of president when occasion demands. If he measures up to those qualifications, certainly the government is the loser if he is not permitted to assist in dealing with the questions that come before the president's advisors.

VALUING EDUCATION

The progress which children make in school depends to a large extent on the kind of backing they get in their homes. There is not always the same inspiration in a country school that there is in a city building where the emulation and rivalry between hundreds of eager youngsters has a tendency to wake all the children up.

We must depend upon home influence to a large degree to stir up our young folks. When some children go home, they find their families indifferent to their school work, inclined to criticize the teacher and think that their lessons are not practical. A child from such a home is not getting much inspiration. But in other homes parents and friends are all the time telling them what great things education will do for them, and inquiring about the progress they are making. Children from such homes usually go ahead.

ROVING PEOPLE

Reports of sales of real estate in many places show that an astonishing number of people will buy a farm, operate it a short time, and then sell out and try conditions elsewhere.

After a man has worked one piece of land, or operated a business in one town or worked on some particular job, he gets certain experience that is of value to him as applied to those particular conditions. He should do better the second year than he did the first, and better the third year than the second. When he quits and goes elsewhere, the experience gained in those particular conditions may apply in other places. Many people spoil their chances of success by too much roving from one place to another.

TERSELY TOLD

The native land of wheat is Palestine. Ancient Greek houses had no windows.

The world spends $200,000,000 a year for matches. There are about 500 swans on the Thames River in England. Peanuts are used in making nine varieties of wood stains.

HAPPINESS

There are all kinds of institutions but none quite as unique as the Fredman club for bankrupt millionaires.

To live there, one must be past 60 years old, cultured, have known wealth and luxury but through bad fortune have been reduced to poverty, must have refined surroundings, and must be married, because all of the apartments of single folks are occupied.

One of us who can't wait for the fact that we do not want to.

For being a millionaire is not the supreme thing in life. To be one whose wealth runs into the millions is misfortune enough, without being reduced to poverty past 60 years of age after knowing luxury which spoils one for a happy life in moderate circumstances.

It isn't so much what we possess or are in this life, as what we think we have and are.

The baby with his first toy is happier than the rich man with his leisure and means of amusing himself with any pleasure he desires.

Happiness is in the imagination and life is just what we make it, regardless of what our social status may be.

FOOD FOR REFLECTION
Farmers need only to reflect on the difference between prices they are receiving now and a year ago to appreciate that their business has made marked improvement.

Wheat is now selling in Chicago at $1.30 and a year ago it was $1. Corn is being sold above $1.15 and was then worth only 85 cents. Oats is quoted near fifty cents and twelve months ago it was less than forty.

Wool is selling for more than it did a year ago and hogs have been selling around $12 compared with $9 at this time last year. Cattle and sheep are slightly lower than quotations a year ago and hay continues to bring as good prices as in the fall of 1923.

Butter is slightly lower, but eggs are dearer than they were a year ago and lard is distinctly higher.

And best of all, for the farmers as well as those who do not depend upon the products of the soil for a living, the cost of living is no higher than it was last October.

LENGTH OF OUR CAMPAIGNS
It will strike many folks as queer that the English people can put through an election in two or three weeks after the same is announced, while it takes four months in this country, in addition to a long preliminary campaign for nomination.

Many folks say our campaigns are too long, and that the country is kept dragging in a state of uncertainty that is harmful to business. These folks would say it would be better to have the national conventions early in September, and that the time from then to November would be ample for discussion of campaign issues.

Anything that promotes popular intelligence on political matters does much for national welfare. Perhaps four months is none too much time for a debate about the kind of government we are going to get for four years. A political campaign is a kind of school, and many of our voters could never pass the examinations after two months term.

FAITH

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

"A" N thought I have all faith, so that I could remove mountains. I said to the Corinthians, I used to think about this removing of mountains a good deal when I was a child and I was finally convinced that it couldn't be done, but I was wrong. I took it all literally then, but there are other mountains which faith can remove which are quite as high and impassable as those reared by earthquakes or formed by erosion and which stop our progress as completely. There are mountains of discouragement, mountains of difficulty, mountains of temptation and sorrow which faith in ourselves, faith in other men, or faith in higher and unseen things can make as easy of traversing as a paved highway.

Give me brains, an excellent preliminary training and a healthy body, but he is doing badly. He distrusts himself and his ability, he is easily discouraged, and will admit without argument that he is going to fail. He has no self-confidence, no faith in himself. If someone could get him to stand solidly upon his feet, to believe sincerely in his own power of accomplishment, to develop personal faith, his business and intellectual attainment would be assured.

Strikeman is one of the most brilliant young fellows with whom I am acquainted. He is handsome physically; in college he was among the best in his class, but as a professional man he is neither happy nor successful. He has faith in himself, but little or none in anybody or anything else. He is cynical and supercilious of people, and he trusts very few. He laughs at religion and considers those who find help and comfort in its teachings weakly and superstitious. His own character is guided largely by expediency rather than principle. He has nothing higher than his own selfish interests to guide him or hold him in the path of rectitude. He is, of course, discreet, for he has no desire to come under the ban either of the law or of public opinion, but whatever can be done sub rosa is in his mind legitimate. He has his ups and downs, he has his periods of optimism, shown by the deepest depression, he is pretty largely what the people are with whom he associates. People do not believe in him because he does not believe in people. They do not trust him; they do not bring him their business. His character is a weak character because it is not founded upon any definite moral or religious principles. He has no faith in man; he has no belief in God. The "evidence of things not seen" makes no appeal to him. He has virtually failed.

But to him who has faith in himself, in his fellow men and in the Creator of all things, the mountains are quite likely to disappear.

How To End a Cough Quickly

Specialists say to actually end a cough in the shortest possible time the medicine should not only soothe and heal the soreness and irritation, but should also loosen and remove the phlegm and congestion which are the real cause of the coughing. When this is done the worst cough quickly disappears. This "cough cure" mentioned has been brought to perfection in the prescription known as Dr. King's New Discovery for Coughs. A few drops into the congested throat immediately soothe and people who have been unable to sleep at night have been able to get their full night's rest even after the first dose. It has been very successful, too, for children's spasmodic cough, for bronchitis, laryngitis, whooping cough, and hoarseness, with its throat ailment and hoarseness. On sale at all good druggists. GOOD ROADS

ENGINEERS WATCHING DETROIT EXPERIMENT

Ultimately, when the horse and buggy idea gives place to the motor transportation plan nationally, automobiles must be allowed to travel over long stretches of right of way at their maximum speed. Wider roads entering population centers, division of highways into their logical freight, local and express lines, and the unification of transportation laws throughout the United States will make all this possible. So, at least, say engineers of the Middle West and the transport experts now busily engaged in working out the growing road problems of practically every community of any size in Illinois, Indiana and Iowa, writes J. L. Jenkins in the Chicago Tribune.

All of them are looking eastward this spring toward Detroit, where Wayne county pavement pioneers are pushing the construction of a 200-foot right of way from Detroit to Pontiac, with just this idea of segregating highway traffic and putting automobile operation into the scientific transportation field where it belongs.

When completed this highway will provide tracks in its center for fast and local railroads. On the outside two 40-foot pavements will carry the automobile traffic. These one-way lines will provide for slow-moving and local cars on the inside lanes and for fast, through motors on the outside speedways. Cross traffic will be protected, according to the first plan, by elevating the intersections and dividing the grades.

Thus the cars used to transport passengers or light freight for long distances will be given a chance to operate at maximum efficiency and minimum expense without endangering the joy-riders, the slow-moving trucks and the myriad other trolley vehicles which form the real barrier on any open road.

Uniform Road Rules Are Being Urged by Railways

Arguments for a federal rules of the road act to secure uniformity and reduce automobile accidents all over the country were advanced before the committee on commerce, trade and commerce of the American Bar Association by Herbert E. Howe, chairman of the committee on the prevention of highway crossing accidents of the American Railway association, and D. E. Minard, general attorney of the Erie railroad. The committee met at the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York, 65 Liberty street.

Double as to the legal practicability of the plan was expressed by some members of the Bar association committee. Mr. Rowe will file a brief and the recommendations of the committee will be announced at the forthcoming annual meeting of the Bar association.

W. H. H. Platt of Kansas City, chairman of the committee, said that the differences in the rules of the road in various states were a decided detriment, now that country-wide automobile travel had become common.

Method for Increasing Strength of Concrete

The strongest concrete will be obtained by the least possible amount of water in the mixing to produce a plastic mortar or mix, but after the concrete is placed the concrete should be kept wet for at least ten days. If great strength of wear or strain is needed as in highways.

Keeping the concrete damp the first two days adds 75 per cent to its compressive strength, and adds 65 per cent to its resistance to wear. Three weeks of constant moisture will add still greater strength and resistance. Constant sprinkling may not be possible. Cover the concrete deeply with dirt, sand, hay or anything that will hold moisture and it will serve the purpose desired.

Good Roads Facts

It is estimated by highway experts that the extent of surfaced roads in the United States will have reached at least 450,000 miles by the end of the first quarter of 1924.

Massachusetts has begun a state-wide drive against the billboard that line its highways. The state department of public works has been empowered to regulate billboard advertising by the process of licensing that industry. Violation of the new regulations is punishable by a fine of $100 for the first offense and $500 for the second.

One million tourists visited California by motor car last year, traveling on the Lincoln highway, according to an estimate recently compiled by the automobile clubs of that state. The total was 50 per cent over the number in 1922.

Instructions have been issued by the minister of highways providing for the planting of 2500 trees in the course of the present summer on the Montreal-Quebec highway and the Birmingham-Birmingham highway. Work will commence immediately.

Some of these automobile speeders act as if they were racing for the hospital.

If the people of a small town have small ideas, the town is likely to remain small.

In the United States 1,300,000 cows live within the limits of incorporated cities.

The old-fashioned man who goes to bed with the chickens has a son who stays up all night with them.

Also there are some of the old crowd who might perhaps be benefited by a course in the kindergarten.

The Washington people seem prouder of their winning battles than they are of their successful politicians.

A fellow with a job stands a little show with the girls when in competition with a fellow owning a nifty speedster.

Some of these fellows who rush into the cities should deposit enough in the bank so they won't have to walk home.

It would no doubt make farm work more attractive if the farm hands were supplied with a radio out in the hayfield.

Eastern college students propose a debate on "Roosevelt That We Put Our Grandchildren." And a hundred years hence their grandchildren will be pitying them.

Fact that the winning world series players get around $6,000 a year is no good reason why the office boy should quit floor sweeping and go in for base ball.

Now that the girls are invading the barber shops and smoking cars, there seems to be no reason why they should not also visit the wood shed and help us cut up the kindling.

It has been estimated that New South Wales has about 20,000,000, 000 long tons of coal in its reserves and that two gallons of light fuel oil and four gallons of heavy could be obtained from each ton.

ENGLISH LANGUAGE OPPOS.

The German Lutheran Church in Lowden, Cedar County, Iowa, has split over the use of the German language in the parochial school of that place. The older members of the community demanded that the German language should occupy a conspicuous place in the course of study, whereas the younger members contended that the English language should take precedence. The congregation, by a majority of three votes voted for the German language. The principal of the school, and his assistant, resigned in protest, on the ground that the spirit of the times required the use of English.

Opponents of the private school in the country point to this incident as an illustration of the conditions that inevitably follow the establishment of parochial schools, and contend that the highest civic interests may be served best by requiring that all children attend public schools in which English shall be the language of instruction.

This is an English-speaking nation. Our culture, our ideals, our traditions are run into the mold of the English tongue. The education of the children should be nurtured in the same form of quality. A nation divided by varied speech is divided by insurmountable barriers. A common language is the most potent unifying force.

It is quite significant that most of the opposition to the compulsory use of English as the language of instruction in the grammar grades comes from sectarian schools. Educators in the public schools of the country virtually are a unit in favor of English.

Undoubtedly the reason for this classification is not far to seek. The culture fostered in public schools necessarily is in thorough harmony with those democratic ideals that have been articulated in the English language, whereas the culture inculcated in too many private and religious schools is as alien as the language they affect. It is of more than passing interest that the communities opposed to the use of the English language are the ones that gave the Government the most trouble by traitorous activities during the World War.

BUSINESS OF FLYING SAFER NOW THAN MANY PURSUITS ON GROUND

Flying as a business is not as dangerous as it used to be. It is so much safer, in fact, that the Modern Woodmen of America is considering lifting the membership ban from all but exhibition, or stunt flyers. Statistics made available recently tend to show that life in the air, under conditions now prevailing in commercial aviation, involves less risk than life on the ground as followed in many occupations not considered particularly dangerous. It is at least as safe as navigating under water in a submarine.

Removal of aviators from the hazardous occupation list is one of the many questions incident to the quadrennial revision of the Modern Woodmen laws now being considered by the law committee. This body is composed of eight men from as many states and includes Judge E. D. Reynolds of Rockford, Ill., chairman; James A. Marsh, city attorney of Denver, Colo., and Pat M. Neff, governor of Texas. The hazardous occupation list of the Society will require much attention. New safety devices and improved working conditions are adding to the life expectancy of most workers, offsetting new dangers arising from changes in industrial and commercial processes and the eternal demand for more speed.

Most people, if asked if they would like to take a spin in the clouds still answer that they would prefer to keep their feet "on the ground" and be safe, which merely shows how far behind the times they are on the subject of aviation. Feet of the farmer maintain a fairly constant contact with the ground, and still the farmer is not as good a risk, relatively speaking, as he is used to be considered. Any one exposed to a greater variety of accidents than any other class, his business has not been made more safe by the use of modern machinery, as the casualty list indicates. Even in the city, with its myriad vehicles speeding this way and that, keeping the feet on the ground, has lost much of its virtue as a safety rule.

The flier is getting out of the class of the proverbial pitcher, with its once-to-often visit to the well. The stately progress of the globe girler in their recent hop across the country held little suggestion of danger to those who had the good fortune to see them. They seemed to be as truly in their element as three great birds high in air in migratory flight.

Mastery of the air has come so suddenly that it is not surprising that so many have failed to keep pace with the progress made. It has been but a few years since Darwin's query "The Darius of today can't fly" was asked. The Darius of today not only can fly but is doing it every day. What is more, the time is approaching, if not actually here, when he can do so as safely as those same birds, for whom no one ever claimed flying was a hazardous occupation.

The world drinks no toast to the fellow who boasts.

AMERICANS ARE POOR GAMBLERS

The amount of the wealth which is every year mistakenly invested by the people of this country in speculative, or worse than speculative, securities, reaches an alarming total. It is currently estimated that at least half a billion dollars per annum is lost by the people of the United States through the promotion of worthless securities by unscrupulous men. If we include the vast amounts which are lost by people who are not necessarily cheated but whose judgment is unsound or who are misled through ignorance, the annual loss will aggregate at least a billion dollars.

The investor class in the United States has grown by leaps and bounds since the World War. It is known approximately twenty million people invested in the war bonds and a very large percentage of these were people who, prior to that time, had never invested money in anything and had never seen a bond or a stock.

In human society it is impossible to expect development or progress without the venturesome or speculative nature of human beings asserting itself. The typical American is venturesome and always ready to take chances that is why America has been a fruitful field for the promoter of visionary schemes, for the seller of unsound propositions and for the unscrupulous peddler of more or less worthless securities.

HOW DOCTORS TREAT COLDS AND THE FLU

To break up a cold or night or to cut short an attack of grippe, influenza or sore throat physicians and druggists are recommending Calabaz, the natural Calabaz tablet that is purified from the roots and bark of the Calabaz tree. Those who have tried it say that it acts like magic, by far more effective and certain than the old style calomel, therefore recommended by physicians.

One or two Calabaz at bed time with a swallow of water—that's all. No salts, no nausea nor the slightest interference with eating, work or pleasures. Next morning your cold has vanished and your system feels refreshed and purified. Calabaz are sold only in original sealed packages, price ten cents for the most pocket size; thirty-five cents for the large family package. Recommended and guaranteed by druggists. Your money back if you are not delighted—ad.

HENRY FORD IN A NEW ROLE.

Henry Ford is contemplating the purchase of the colonial town of Williamsburg, Va., at a cost of about $5,000,000.

It will be his purpose, if the deal is completed, to restore the town to its Revolutionary appearance. As Williamsburg was once the capital of Virginia, he will preserve the ancient House of Burgesses, every trace of modern life will be removed from the city and the streets will once more be bordered with roses.

A few scenes in the wonderful film "America" are laid in Williamsburg, and the House of Burgesses where George Washington spent many days of his life.

Since Mr. Ford has done more than any other man towards modernizing American life it is no more than fair that he should take some sort of action of this nature.

BOY PSYCHOLOGY

Here are a couple of instances of modern boy psychology.

No. 1.—On a certain road inspectors were holding up automobiles, testing lights, brakes, etc. The kids took a position up the street, and collected 25 cents from motorists for warning them that they would better go around.

No. 2.—Several hundred parties were going home from a football game. In one town through which many of them passed a bunch of boys stationed themselves in the street, and in their most courteous manner they answered the queries of the drivers as to the road home. The kids imphish satisfaction in directing them to a wrong road, and laughed to think of how they would wander around until they got on the right track.

You have got to go some to keep up with these youngsters. But not all their doings are of that mischievous type. Under good leadership they do many splendid acts of kindness. You have to know the game of handling them.

EVERY MAN A CAPITALIST

Every man, be he mechanic, hawker, manufacturer or judge, is a capitalist to some extent. A miner, a capitalist or mechanic learns his trade just as does the lawyer, dentist, doctor, preacher or teacher. It requires years of apprenticeship, study, experience—all of which costs time and money. His knowledge becomes his capital. Men in executive positions are not paid for eight hours of labor—they are paid for the use of their capital—their knowledge of the business and ability to manage.

Success is a system by which we collect back pay for effort that was underpaid at the time, when we were "learning how."

Opportunity is simply the chance to demonstrate ability. But the opportunity is worthless unless the man is prepared to make good.

Success is nine-tenths made before so-called opportunity comes.

The question is, are you receiving the compensation your capital deserves? If not why?

SPORTING SPIRIT

People feel such an intense desire to see the teams representing their own towns and schools win in football and other games, that they often fail to do justice to fine plays made by a visiting team. Perhaps they think that if they do applaud such plays, they will shake the morale of their home players whom they wish to support in every way. Hence when some visitor makes a long run on the football field, or bats a clean hit on the ball ground, the home spectators frequently maintain an attitude of glum silence which expresses the regret they fail to see their home players outclassed.

Yet it hardly seems gracious to allow such exceptional exhibitions of skill to pass without recognition. A generous round of applause when a visiting team does an exceptional stunt is a good feeling. The home players themselves are glad to congratulate their opponents. It is the courteous thing to do, and afterward the rooters can make up by yelling a little louder to encourage their home players.

BURDEN CARRYING WOMEN

The newspapers recently devoted some space to a New York woman who has sold $5,000,000 worth of real estate during recent years. Besides looking after 11 children and stepchildren and taking care of an invalid husband, and her duties as a janitress, etc.

While there are not many of the women folks who could handle so many duties, there are innumerable ones who are carriers of heavy burdens. There seems no limit to their willingness, their physical and nervous power. And yet these folks have only 24 hours in the day, and they have to spend a little of the same in sleep and eating meals.

People can accomplish wonders if they have only courage and enjoyment of experience. This New York woman probably regarded pulling off a real estate deal as her chief diversion and for her it was play. When people look at their tasks in that light, there is no special limit to the things they can do.

A SURPLUS OF ORGANIZATIONS.

The complaint is made that many country towns have too many organizations, that the people get tired of attending meetings, so there is no energy left for pushing movements that should be agitated actively. Which suggests that before any one starts a new organization, the field should be carefully looked over to see if its work could not be done by some existing society.

An organization ought to be accomplishing some definite purpose and meeting some need. If it is not doing that, it is usually well to let it disband, and allow the attention of the members to go to other activities where greater results are being secured. This is especially true of many towns that have more churches than can well be supported. One strong church will accomplish more than two or three weak ones.

Although this is a free country, it's not a bad idea not to be too independent to do a day's work now and then.

If Leopold and Loeb are tried for murder again, where is the new supply of alienists coming from?

GOSSIP

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

THREE women were sitting across the aisle from me in a railway coach, talking. Their voices were pitched high. Their enthusiasm was evident. It was impossible not to hear what they were saying. They were not educated women, and the things they were saying were not pleasant things. They were discussing their friends, in fact, and their acquaintances, ridiculing them, laughing loudly at their frailties, repeating unvarnished and unkind things that rumor had brought to their ears.

Their talk was full of "I understand" and "I have heard" and "You know they say," of "She said to me" and "I told her" and "You must not repeat it to a soul." Their stories were turgid with specific details to make more evident their truthfulness and reality, I presume. They recounted with meticulous accuracy the time and place and accompanying circumstances of the most trivial bits of scandal.

"Let me see, who was it told me; was it Mrs. Brown? No, I think it wasn't her. It was Mrs. Jones. We were standing at the corner of the street, and I think it was Wednesday—I remember now, it was Tuesday." It was, of course, not genuine to the facts presented who it was or when, but the accuracy of the details helped to make the facts incontrovertible. They discussed the most private affairs of people; they tore to pieces and besmirched every reputation they touched, and they did it all with an appearance of personal propriety that was maddening. So far as I could make out, they did not say a kind word about any one, and they talked about nothing that was really elevating or any of their kind.

It is interesting that a gossip never has anything to say about things or principles. His only topic of conversation is people, and the things he says about them are usually destructive. Gossiping is not confined to women; men are quite commonly addicted to it. It is not confined to men and women of the class I have been describing. Even in an intellectual community it is common, and the wider experience of the educated and their keenness of intellect, and their greater ability to utter sharp and cutting things, to ridicule everything that is good and holy, make them all the more dangerous. The older the person the more damage he can do by peddling vicious, foolish gossip. The character of an individual may be ruined and he being ruined every day by these scandal mongers.

It is a wise custom if you cannot say good about a person to say nothing.

Pretty Caps to Aid the Cause of Beauty

Our evening faces and our morning faces are not always equally "easy to look at." Evening faces usually have the most advantage because of pretty framing in careful hairdressing and costume ornaments. But the morning face may rival it. There are many pretty breakfast caps whose only mission is to help the cause of beauty in the morning. Two of them, shown here, have lately arrived in the bright company of boudoir headwear. The cap at the top, of dotted net, lace, ribbon and chiffon plaiting, covers the coiffure (or lack of one) completely, with lace about the face and frills of plaited chiffon falling over the ears. The other cap is called "a wave retainer" and is made of narrow ribbon tied in lattice work pattern. This makes one of the most adorable of night caps as well as a cheerful affair for the breakfast table, and is much appreciated by the bobbed-haired.

Your Conversation "DYED IN WOOL"

In the days when our great-grandfathers were animated by warm party affiliations, the supporters of George III of England were known as "dyed-in-the-wool" Tories. The term was derived from the dyeing process by which materials thoroughly were imbued with fast colors. "Dyed in the wool" is the way we describe any party or religious adherence in which the holder is so positively steeped as to bar all possibility of fickleness.

MORE WAYS WITH FRUIT

There are so many delicious drinks which one may make in the home, just from a few spoonfuls of canned fruit, juice left over, or often thrown out, not knowing their value. With a half-cupful of peach juice, add the juice of a lemon and sugar if needed, ice, and just enough water to thin it to the right taste, and you will have a glass or two of refreshingectar.

Grape juice, with a little ginger ale added to it to give it zest, makes a most delightful drink.

Raspberry Whip.—Mash one cupful of raspberries, add a cupful of pulverized sugar, a pinch of salt and the white of an egg; beat all together until stiff. Serve on a platter surrounded with whipped cream.

Strawberry and Pineapple Jam.—Put a pineapple through the meat grinder. Take equal parts of pineapple and strawberries. To every five cupfuls of fruit add four cupfuls of sugar. Let stand several hours. Put in a preserving kettle and cook gently until clear and thick. Pour into jelly glasses and cover with paraffin.

Ripe Currant Pie.—Bake a pastry shell and fill with the following: Take one cupful each of crushed currants and sugar, two eggs, two tablespoonfuls of water and one of flour, and one tablespoonful of butter. Beat the yolks of the eggs, add flour and water and mix with the fruit and sugar; dot with bits of butter, and cook until smooth. Pour into the shell, and top with a meringue prepared from the egg whites, using two tablespoonfuls of sugar. Brown in the oven and serve cold.

Salpicon of Fruit.—Shred a pineapple, add a banana or two cut fine, and orange and a grapefruit sliced; mix with one cupful of sugar and a tablespoonful of water which have been cooked to a syrup and cooled; add a tablespoonful of lemon juice and chili, adding the fruit. Serve in tall glasses garnished with maraschino cherries.

SOME BEST DISHES

This is the time of year when we look for foods to tempt the appetite.

A most delicious meal and one which may be stretched to feed several more may be prepared from the following recipe:

Chicken—Warmen.—Stew a large fat fowl in plenty of water to make a good supply of broth.

Remove the fowl and cut the meat into bits after removing it from the bones. Into the broth drop nicely diced celery and cook it until tender, keeping the diced chicken hot over steam or hot water. Remove the celery after cooking and then add noodles, cooking until they are done. When serving make a nest of noodles, add some of the celery and on top place the chicken; all should be well-seasoned while cooking. Serve with mashed potatoes and gravy made from the seasoned broth.

Here is a dainty dessert which is good enough to serve for company:

Frozen Fruit.—Mix together two and one-half cupfuls of sugar and one tablespoonful of flour; add one cupful of boiling water, stir and cook until the flour is well cooked. Add the juice of three lemons, three oranges, three mashed bananas and a can of graded pineapple with three cupfuls of cold water. Fold in the stiffly beaten whites of three eggs and freeze as usual.

Here is a cookie that young and old will clamor for:

Filled Cookies.—To one-half cupful of shortening add one cupful of sugar, one egg, one-half cupful of sweet milk in which a teaspoonful of soda is dissolved. Sift three and one-half cupfuls of flour with two teaspoonfuls of cream of tartar, add a teaspoonful of vanilla and mix well; roll out and cut with a cookie cutter. Put together in pairs with the following filling: Cook one cupful of chopped raisins with one-half cupful of water, one tablespoonful of flour and lemon juice to taste, adding a bit of the grated lemon rind. When thick cool and use as filling.

PROVIDE DUCKLINGS WITH AMPLE SHADE

Shade must be provided for the ducklings. Many of the sudden deaths among ducklings are due solely to sunstroke. If there are no low growing bushes, and no shade of trees, make shelters of burlap or of branches and keep the water there. Sun-heated water is bad; change the water often and keep it cool as possible.

After they are thirty-six hours old, ducklings should be fed five times daily at first. A government ration calls for a mixture of equal parts by measure of rolled oats and bread crumbs with 8 per cent of sharp sand mixed in the feed. The amount needed for one feed should be moistened and given near the drinking fountain so the ducklings can drink as they eat.

About the third day this feed is changed to a mixture of bread, rolled oats, bran and cornmeal; then after the seventh day to three parts of bran, one part each of low-grade wheat flour and of cornmeal, 10 per cent of green feed and 5 per cent of beef scrap, with about 8 per cent of sand or grit in all of the rations. All to be fed slightly damp.

The amount of beef scrap is gradually increased to 15 per cent by the end of the third week. Gradually increase the proportion of cornmeal and decrease the amount of bran until the ration becomes the fattening ration given below for those ducklings which are to be marketed. Those to be used for breeding should be given the duckling ration with the increased beef scrap (15 per cent) but not fed the fattening ration. They should also be given a good range where grass and water are available. If confined to bare yards, considerable green feed and vegetables should be fed.

The ducklings to be marketed should be fattened for two weeks before killing, on a ration made of three parts by weight of cornmeal, two parts of low-grade flour, 2 middlings, one part of bran, one-half part beef scrap, with 8 per cent grit and 10 per cent green food. Oyster shell, or ground bone is an addition to the mash.

Sudden Change of Feed

Causes Pullet to Molt

Any sudden change in feeding or care of a flock of laying pullets is likely to induce a partial molt and check egg production. For this reason, any needed changes should be made gradually. If the kind of feed is to be changed, gradually substitute the new for the old, not immediately discontinuing one thing to give another of a different kind. Do not change suddenly from wet to dry, or dry to wet mash, or make great changes in the amount of meat scrap fed. It is of course necessary that changes should be made in the management of a flock at times, but avoid the shock to what appears to be a very susceptible nervous system of hens that ensues from quick changes. I know of no way of helping a flock through its molt, other than by good care and feeding, says a writer in the Rural New Yorker. Do not change the accustomed ration, with the idea of helping the molt along, providing that you were feeding a suitable laying ration before the molt began.

Feeding During Summer

Months Very Important

Pullets are not expected to start laying while they are still taking on growth, and for the person who is anxious to get them laying, the summer months of feeding are important. Dual purpose types, such as the Plymouth Rocks or Rhode Island Reds, will give little worry of maturing too early. The average early-hatched chick should by careful feeding, be ready for laying early in November. Since pullets will not lay while they are growing rapidly, further development can be checked oftentimes by increasing the feeds which produce fat, such as corn. At the same time feeds which stimulate the egg-laying organs may be used, such as animal food. This is a method of feeding which is intended for pullets to be used as layers; it would be objectionable if the birds were intended for the next season's breeding pen.

Color of Young Chicks

Chicks from eggs of the black breeds such as Black Langhans, Black Cochins, etc., often hatch out white chicks, but are none the less pure for all that, and will grow into perfectly black fowls. Chicks from the white breeds, again, such as White Plymouth Rocks, White Orpingtons, White Wyandottes, will hatch out dark or yellow chicks. But they will outgrow that and become perfectly white after they have shed. Rocks rarely show any barring at first.

Keep Hen Contented

Farm land that has been overworked can be fertilized and made productive again, but the poor old hen cannot be rejuvenated and made to produce the necessary number of eggs to make her a payer. She is sentenced to the boiling pot. This being true, why not give her the best there is while she is in active service? She is certainly entitled to all the attention and good treatment it is possible to bestow upon her. Make her lot a contented one.

EDUCATION WEEK.

The American Legion and National Education Association is calling again upon the people of the country to turn their thoughts to education for one week—November 17-23.

American Education week has become a fixed event in the lives of the American people. If it is accomplishing its mission in impressing upon people the importance of education in the life of the nation, it is not time wasted.

Someone has said that education is to fit one to live. If this definition be the true conception of the purpose greater bearing on the future of this education, certainly nothing has a community and every other place in America where people live. Those in charge of our educational program have a great responsibility. If Education Week in any way serves to bring those not in touch with the public schools and their work, around to a sympathetic attitude of helpfulness, it will not have been in vain.

Education Week should be made the means of setting forth the school viewpoint and bringing about a more hearty response from the school patrons to the school program.

THE LESSON OF SIX YEARS

When the calendar informs us that November has come again and the autumn chill is in the atmosphere, our thoughts turn to that historic day in 1918, when the news flashed around the world that the armistice had been signed by the nations which had been at each other's throats.

That hectic day will never be forgotten. The people of every community went wild with joy. The horrors of war were forgotten; the days of sorrow and self denial were behind and everyone joined in the merry celebration.

Little did the majority of the people realize the trials that lay ahead. The war had been so terrible and the remembrance of it so vivid that few could see anything ahead but golden days in comparison.

That was the psychology of the situation that led to the period of over expansion, for which we have paid so dearly.

Failing to heed the lessons of the past, that showed depression was invariably a reaction of war, the people of the United States plunged into an orgy of buying, from the sheer joy of being released from the limitations of war restrictions.

The folly of the after-war period is now history. Business has come back and agriculture, the first to suffer and the last to regain its lost ground, is fast recuperating from the post-war depression.

The lesson was costly and it will be remembered by the present generation, but the next one will make the same mistake unless war is outlawed and unless people realize that the pendulum always swings back just as far as it swings forward.

LITERARY SOCIETIES.

City folks have sometimes looked fun at the small town literary societies, but all the same societies of this type have accomplished wonders for many people. The small town group that is reaching out for the world's wisdom through these little associations is likely to see a good deal deeper into the meaning of things than more sophisticated people who are fearful of any kind of activity that compels them to think.

The country town literary society helps people to think, to express their thoughts in speech and writing, it introduces them to the great minds that have awayed the world. The country town that has one or more of such societies, is less provincial and more metropolitan in the true sense, than the big city, where people are grasping for the froth and glitter of the world.

PLAYS FOR COUNTRY TOWNS.

Every country town should give a number of plays each winter by home talent. Such performances do something more than raise money for whatever good cause puts them on.

The people who take part in them gain self command, ability to express themselves, they lose the timidity that spoils the ability of many people to do things. They come in touch with forms of experience other than their own and are better equipped to meet all types of people and deal with them. Amateur dramatic performances provide an outlet for young people who are looking for a chance to develop and express their talents. Where there is enough of this kind of thing going on, many restless young folks conclude that their good old home town is a mighty pleasant place to live in after all.

The beautiful shade trees that surrounded the Boone County Deposit Bank, and had furnished shade for the weary traveler for 60 years or more, were felled to the ground last Saturday. The trees had to be removed to make room for the new bank building.

NEW MASONIC LODGE

AT PETERSBURG IS GRANTED CHARTER FROM GRAND LODGE

Having been working under dispensation from the Grand Lodge of Kentucky since last July, when they were instituted, the members of Petersburg Lodge F. & A. M. were rewarded last Saturday night with their coveted charter.

They were set to work under charter by Grand Senior Warden of Kentucky, C. S. Rankin, of Newport, and a number of his fellow lodge members, who accompanied him to Petersburg.

The number of the new lodge will be 926, which is indicative of the number of lodges that have been instituted in the realm of Kentucky, although there are not that many alive and working today, as some have dropped out for various reasons.

A faithful few have labored unceasingly at Petersburg for the past year to obtain the objective which they were rewarded Saturday night, and had it not been for the able and vigorous assistance rendered by Bro. Rankin, they would in all probability, have become discouraged, but Bro. Rankin carried through for them and the Petersburg Masons will not forget him.

The entire Newport team was on hand to confer the Masters degree on three Fellowcrafts, the first to be "raised" in the new lodge. The new members were R. W. Witham, B. H. Berkshire and Leroy Cox.

A number of visitors were present about a hundred in all, from various neighboring lodges, including Lawrenceburg, Ind., Vincennes, Indiana, Walton, Burlington and others.

Mr. W. W. Rodman, of Vincennes, Ind. No. 1 of Indiana, conveyed the information that his lodge was granted a charter by the Grand Lodge of Kentucky prior to the year 1800, and for a long time worked under the Grand Lodge of Ky.

At the conclusion of the ceremony and lunch was served, at which the meeting adjourned with the invitation extended to all Masons to meet with Petersburg Lodge on the first and fourth Tuesday in each month.

C. S. SMITH.

C. S. Smith son of the late Edwin R. and Sarah Cummins Smith, was born Nov. 11, 1852, died October 27, 1924. On Sept. 8th, 1875, he was married in marriage to Florence Ryle, and to this union eight children were born, 5 sons and three daughters namely: Raymond, James G., Geo. N., Chas. E., William M., Mrs. Joseph Wilson, Mrs. J. M. Rice and Mrs. Dolphie Seebra. In 1879 he united with the Bellevue Baptist church and remained a consistent member until death. About 50 years ago he joined the Masonic Lodge at Big Bone, Ky., and at the time of his death was a member of Bellevue Lodge No. 544.

In his going his wife has lost a loving companion, the children a devoted father, the community a good friend and neighbor and the church a faithful member.

His life was an open book, and his Christian faith and hope that led him to think of the better things of this life are left as a pleasant memory to his family and friends. He loved his home and his family, and while he will be missed in this earthly home, they do not grieve for those that have no hope for Blessed are they that die in the Lord.

Funeral services were conducted at Bellevue Baptist church by Rev. B. H. Bush, assisted by Revs. Sasser, McNeely and Miller, and the large crowd present was a witness of how he was appreciated in that community.

The Masonic order had charge at the grave and Mr. D. S. Wilber of Rising Sun, Ind., delivered a very impressive and solemn ceremony after which the body was taken to rest to await the final day.

MOUNTAINS

Of North Carolina, also Washington, D. C., to be visited by tourists, who left last Saturday morning by motor.

Stanley (Boss) Eddins and Jesse Kirkpatrick, of Burlington, with Wilbur Rice and Norris Berkshire, of Petersburg, left Saturday morning for an extended motor trip.

They have planned to drive through the mountains of Kentucky, visit the North Carolina mountains for a few days, then drive up the National Highway to Washington, returning home by way of Columbus, Ohio, and all way points of interest.

The trip originated from an invitation from Norris and Walton (Pat) Berkshire, of Petersburg, for their friends to visit them in the North Carolina mountains, where they have been living since last January. Norris, however, came home election day and joined the party on the return trip, which will enable them to see some scenes that are unsurpassed in rugged grandeur anywhere in the eastern portion of the U. S. according to the version of some who have seen it.

WOODS FIRES

Near Limaburg and Bullittsville last week.

Last Wednesday afternoon the citizens of Limaburg and Burlington were aroused by the alarm that the Geo. Rouse woods was on fire just over the hill from Limaburg.

By the time the Burlington people arrived on the scene the spreading flames were pretty well under control, having been checked by men with rakes, pitch forks, and improvised brooms of brush. They used the simple, but effective remedy of raking a path, clean of leaves, around the entire area of fire.

By the time it was checked there had been about two acres burned, and had the rescuers not arrived when they did, and rendered heroic service the flames would have spread into a pasture field belonging to Mr. E. H. Doyle.

If this had happened there is no telling what the result would have been.

Another fire broke out near Bullittsville on Thursday but it was also stopped before it assumed very large proportions.

It did not rain before the 15th Mr. Farmer, who had better watch your fields.

FALLS FROM RUNNING AUTO

Last Tuesday morning Mrs. Laura Martin and her daughter, Miss Nell, started to Florence with Rev. Paul Gillespie in a roadster model automobile.

Mrs. Martin, sitting next to the door, had evidently not closed it very tightly, and when the machine made a swerve to the left Mrs. Martin was thrown out. Fortunately she fell clear of the wheels, but she received a severe shock, and sustained some lacerations and bruises, which however will not cause any serious results, it is thought.

It is a miracle that no bones were broken.

Next Saturday the hunting season will open and the fields will be alive with hunters, guns and dogs in quest of the quail and cotton-tails. If the weather is as dry as it is at this time no one should be permitted to go into a field with anything that might cause a fire to break out, as there is not enough water in the country to put out a match.

New York, November 6.—Congressman Arthur B. Rouse, with Mrs. Rouse and their children, sailed today on the Cristobal for Panama and the Canal Zone. Congressman Rouse who is the guest here of J. L. Rhinock, who he succeeded in Congress 14 years ago, has been overwhelmed with telegrams of congratulations from his constituents in the Sixth District of Kentucky over his victory there by a majority of 14,000.

CINCINNATI

EXPECTS BUSINESS BOOM AS A RESULT OF THE DEFEAT OF THE BOND ISSUE IN KENTUCKY

Here is what the Cincinnati Post, NOT the Kentucky Post, says about the defeat of the bonds in Kentucky: LOUISVILLE AND LEXINGTON WILL LOSE, 'TIS SAID.

"Even though the overwhelming defeat of the $75,000,000 Kentucky State road bond issue at the election was a decided blow to Cincinnati motorists it will prove to be a benefit to Cincinnati business houses, it became known here Thursday.

A movement is on foot among merchants and business men of eastern Kentucky, according to a report from Harlan, Ky., to withdraw trading with wholesale houses at Louisville and Lexington, and divert it to Cincinnati, Ohio, and Knoxville, Tennessee.

One of the largest mining operations in the south canceled a $50,000 order recently given a Louisville concern and notified them not to expect any more orders from them. Other companies are doing the same thing.

Merchants at Harlan, according to the report, are refusing to permit salesmen from Louisville and Lexington to open their samples, telling them they will buy their goods where they are able to motor through to Louisville.

In the first place the opinion of the Cincinnati motorists is very much at variance with that of a majority of the motorists of Covington, who seem to think, judging from the way they voted, that the defeat of the bonds was a benefit, instead of a "blow" to them.

As to the movement on foot with our fellow Kentuckians at Harlan to divert their trade to other centers, we will say that we have something of the same nature to contend with in Boone county, as the prevailing notion with our farmers, since the election, is to trade in Cincinnati hereafter instead of Covington.

Not Our Sentiment

We will say in this connection, that we wish to discourage this attitude which a majority of our farmers are assuming. We suggest to them that a number of Covington's leading business men supported the bonds, and we do not think it advisable to fall out with our neighboring city as a whole. In many places where fall-sown grains already have been planted there is lack of moisture to start germination of the seed and where grains are above ground they are not doing well for lack of rain. Many farmers are short on stock water, and in the town of Burlington half of the citizens have been carrying water from their neighbors' cisterns and wells, and unless rain falls soon there is liable to be a water famine.

As to Harlan's action toward Lexington and Louisville, the same principle prevails, in our opinion, and we would further suggest to the city of Harlan, that the city of Lexington and Louisville, returned a majority for the bonds, contrary to the impression that seems to prevail in Harlan. And this majority was largely due to the efforts of the Lexington Herald, a paper of the opposite political faith to most mountain people, while the Lexington Leader, which is of the same political faith, opposed the bonds very strenuously. Do the Harlan folks intend to cease their party affiliations on this account? Certainly not, but there would be just as much logic in the political cessation, as there is in the termination of business relations.

It is our judgment that the RECORDER is in a position to make these suggestions to our mountain neighbors, since it is the only newspaper in Boone county to support the bonds, and we point with pride to her vote on the issue.

Boone county stands out like a beacon light in the Sixth District, being the only county in the district to cast a majority vote, and what is more impressive, that majority was better than two-to-one. This was the largest proportionate vote cast in the state, outside the mountain districts, and though the vote of the state at large would seem to indicate that our judgment was unsound, nevertheless we are still firm in our convictions, and are convinced that when prejudices are cast aside, that the electorate of Kentucky will vindicate our judgment.

BIG WINTER POULTRY SHOW

The Annual Boone and Kenton Poultry Show will be held Nov. 24, 25 and 26. Over $600 will be offered in premium money and other prizes. Premiums are being offered on poultry, corn, tobacco, fruit, pot-pots, eggs, pigs and calves.

A committee of Ira Long, H. L. Tanner, E. C. Stephenson, Roy Yates, Clem Klendall, Willie Dirksenburg, Clyde Anderson and C. F. Kinsey have made full arrangements and have their catalogues ready for distribution.

A big educational program of good speakers has been arranged for Tuesday afternoon.

For catalogue write or call R. J. Matson, County Agent, Burlington.

STONE SAYS OFFER

FOR POOL TOBACCO

FAR BELOW VALUE.

Burley President Says He Refused To Sacrifice Growers' Interests — Financing of the 1924 Crop Has Been Arranged For.

The November issue of The Burley Tobacco Grower carries on its front cover a message from President James C. Stone to the members, in which Mr. Stone refutes the rumor, circulated in some parts of the Burley District, that the Association refused to sell the pooled tobacco when offered a good price for it, and another report of rumor that the Association would be unable to finance the 1924 crop.

In his message to the members, President Stone says that he had an offer for a large quantity of tobacco at a price that was six to eight cents less than what market conditions show it to be worth.

The Burley executive also says that the report of inability to finance the 1924 crop is absolutely untrue, that all necessary financial arrangements have been made, and that the association will be ready to receive the 1924 crop at the usual time and make the customary advance to the growers when they deliver their tobacco.

BELLEVUE LODGE CONFERS MASTERS DEGREE ON R. H. CARTER

Last Saturday night a number of members of Builing on Lodge F. & A. M., attended Bellevue Lodge at McVille, where the Master's degree was conferred upon Rev. R. H. Carter, of Petersburg.

Those who attended were highly pleased with the treatment accorded them by the Bellevue men, and were supper they were given. They also said that "Bob" Carter didn't get the best of it because he was a preacher, according to their way of thinking.

The draught in many sections of the country, breaking records of a half century in some places, is causing considerable anxiety because of forest fires and exhaustion of water supplies. Farmers in some sections of Boone county are hard hit by the long dry period. In many places where fall-sown grains already have been planted there is lack of moisture to start germination of the seed and where grains are above ground they are not doing well for lack of rain. Many farmers are short on stock water, and in the town of Burlington half of the citizens have been carrying water from their neighbors' cisterns and wells, and unless rain falls soon there is liable to be a water famine.

Dr. L. E. Card, noted poultry authority and head of the poultry department of the University of Illinois, has been secured to lecture at the short course in poultry raising, to be given by the Kentucky College of Agriculture Nov. 17-22, according to an announcement by Prof. Holmes Martin, head of the poultry section. According to Prof. Martin the course will concentrate in one week almost as much information and work as is usually given in a much longer term. It has been arranged to give busy farmers an opportunity to learn in a short time the essential features in the proper care of a farm flock.

The progress which children make in school depends to a large extent on the kind of backing they get in their homes. There is not always the same inspiration in a country school that there is in a city building where the rivalry between hundreds of eager youngsters has a tendency to wake all the children up. Home influence must be depended upon in a large measure to stir up the young people. Let our be homes where parent and friends are all time telling the youth what great things education will do for them, and inquiring about the progress they are making. Children from such homes usually go ahead.

In another column of this issue you will find the announcement of Newton Sullivan, Jr., as a candidate for County Clerk.

Mr. Sullivan was born, and has resided all of his life, in Boone county. He taught in the graded schools of Boone county for several years and has since been in the mercantile business in Burlington.

He is a well-known Democrat and will make a good official if he should receive the nomination and election.

On Tuesday evening, November 18th, the people of Burlington and surrounding country will be given a musical treat at the Burlington Picture House, by "Bill Schuchman" and the original Blue Grass Entertainers. Bring the family and enjoy an evening of music. See adv. in this issue.

Notes on the Election.

Could there be a more conclusive proof of the need for education in Kentucky than the result of the election Tuesday? What more convincing demonstration of the need for greater opportunity for the children of Kentucky to be educated, for greater educational facilities, than an election in which a majority of the voters of the state cast their ballots for Calvin Coolidge against John W. Davis, for Fred Sackett against Owsley Stanley, and against the plan that would have furnished greater educational facilities, wider opportunities, and better roads, without any increase in taxation?

At this writing we have not the detailed report of the vote cast. But it seems definite that Kentucky's electoral vote will be cast in favor of the continuation of the Republican administration; that Mr. Sackett will join Mr. Ernst as senator from Kentucky, and the two votes in Kentucky has in the senate will be in favor of the tariff framers for the benefit of the interests instead of for the benefit of the people.

For four years more the same group that selected Mr. Harding and Mr. Coolidge for the presidential ticket in 1920 and selected Mr. Coolidge and Dawes in 1924 will control the government at Washington, having been given lease on that power by a decisive majority of those who voted in the U. S. Tuesday.

What will be the result the future will tell. The man of mystery enwrapped in a shroud of silence becomes President by the vote of the people instead of by the hand of death. The man whose recommendations were flouted by the Republican congress, whose votes were overridden, chosen President, with largely the same Republican membership in the house and the senate. Will there be accord between the President and congress? Will the forces that dictated the nomination of Mr. Coolidge for vice-president in 1920 and for president in 1924 be able to control the senate and the house of representatives?

One thing the election makes practically certain—that the U. S. will not enter the League of Nations; that it will stand on the side lines, content to utter an occasional word of admonition or carry a bucket of water to the nations who are playing the great game in that great league.

Another thing that is certain is that the tariff will be continued or increased in accord with the demands of those who look upon the government as an instrument to be used for the private profit of those who control it instead of to be administered for the benefit of all the people.

A most probable result four years from now will be that those who dictated the nomination of Mr. Coolidge for president, financed and managed his campaign, will again dictate the nomination of some one of the same habit of thought and same agonizing; that the contest then will come between those who believe in a government by the people and those who believe in a government by the interests, with the pendulum so swinging that one far more progressive than John W. Davis, possibly even more radical than LaFollette, will be chosen in revolt against the rule of the interests.

In Kentucky a majority has voted in favor of the continuation of present conditions; in favor of one-room school houses in six thousand school districts; in favor of herding the citizens with clouded minds in fire traps and confining the prisoners in dungeons. A majority rejected a plan to make the University of Kentucky capable of accommodating more students, voted against giving to the normal schools funds to enable them to turn out an adequate supply of teachers, voted against the plan to divide the money that comes from motor licenses and gasoline fees with any objects except the roads.

Will Kentucky be content to let these conditions continue to exist? Unless the governor calls a special session or the regular session in 1926 be done until 1926. Should he call a special session of the legislature, that session or the regular session in 1926 will be called upon to consider the needs of Kentucky, and either to continue to deny to the children of Kentucky an opportunity for an education or to devise methods to raise greater revenues. It will be necessary either to increase taxes on present subjects of taxation or to find new methods of raising revenue. In all probability both will be done, an increase in the taxes on real estate and personal property with the imposition of taxes not now levied. Whether those new taxes shall be on coal or on tobacco, or on coal and tobacco, or on incomes, or on business transacted, will be decided by the legislature.

If the people of Kentucky desire to secure through taxation that which they decline to secure through a bond issue, which would have been redeemed without the imposition of any greater taxes or any new taxes, it is to be hoped that those who misled the people into the belief that the bond issue would have either required greater taxes or been a mortgage on their homes, and who have so far contented themselves with misrepresentations and generalities, will present some plan by which Kentucky may go forward and not, as heretofore, be united for the sole purpose apparently of obfuscating and condemning—Lexington Herald.

SAVING EYE STRAIN

Many people are careless with their eyes through these short days when the twilights come early. In former times when artificial lighting was so much worse, many eyes were seriously injured at this time of the year. People would delay lighting a lamp for considerable time after the twilight had faded, and they would read and read until they were unable to make out the letters, and their eyes and heads ached.

Today all forms of lighting have greatly improved, and there is no need for such strain. But many people still continue careless about their eyes at this time, and fail to provide enough or light when by a very little attention or a slight additional expense, the illumination could be made adequate. Eyesight is about the most valuable working tool that people have. If people will not take care of it, they scarcely deserve the great blessing of vision.

The home of Rev. and Mrs. R. H. Carter was the scene of a pretty wedding Sunday Nov. 9th at 6:30 p. m. The bride, Miss Mable Elizabeth Gaine, a beautiful daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James E. Gaine, were united in the holy bonds of wedlock.

The bride looked lovely in her dark blue traveling suit with grey accessories. They were attended by H. Alpha Rogers and Miss Bernice Grant David Clements and Miss Nell Stephens. After the ceremony the bride party went to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Stephens where light refreshments were served.

After a short trip thru the East by motor they will be at home at the groom's beautiful country home on the banks of the Ohio near Warsaw, Ky.

Responsibility

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

THE greater the honor, the heavier the responsibility; the higher the office, the more numerous the obligations which will carry with it to be met. We want the honor, we crave the distinction, we covet the office—we are not always eager to meet the obligations which inevitably go with these things.

"I'd like to have Bolton's salary," an envious young fellow said with reference to the president of a large corporation.

"I wonder how you would like to settle his troubles and carry his responsibilities?" I asked.

"Well, that's another story," was his reply.

I remember a conversation I had years ago with a city executive whose official record was noted for its inefficiency. I pointed out to him certain violations of law that were constantly occurring almost under his very eyes. He could sit in his office and look out of the window upon one of the worst resorts in town, and yet he made no attempt to correct the evil.

"Don't you know about these places?" I asked him straightforwardly.

"Well, of course, as a private citizen, I am pretty well convinced of their existence," he admitted, "but officially I do not know anything about them."

I watched a body of workmen yesterday—dead of the day, perhaps engaged in the repairing of a railroad crossing. The work was simple and it was quite evident even to an inexperienced onlooker like myself what ought to be done, yet they stood around inactive, doing nothing. The boss was gone, and there was no one of the twain who was willing to take on himself the responsibility of going ahead with the work.

Men marry, join church, accept office, become members of organizations too often without a thought of what these obligations mean, of the responsibilities which are involved. Most members of a committee or of an organization can be depended on to do very little work. More or less we are all given to shirking our responsibilities.

A QUESTION OF PERSONAL LIBERTY

Freedom is the one thing for which people will fight and die, and without which they are miserable.

Most every man knows that the dearest thing to every normal human being is freedom, yet there are millions of men who never grant their wives one breath of freedom.

While some men regard their wives as angels to be worshipped, others regard their wives as dolls to be dressed up and played with. Others regard their wives as slaves. Others regard their wives as scapegoats who are to blame for everything that goes wrong.

No real man, no matter how good and kind, and generous a father he has, could endure going to him every day and asking papa to please give him his carfare and lunch money, and enough to buy a new necktie. If he worked all day in his father's store or office and gave the very best that was in him to building up the business, he would regard fathers as a grinding tyrant and the champion tightwad if he got no pay envelope on Saturday night and still had to go to papa and ask for his car fare and lunch money.

Yet that is precisely the position of thousands of women whose husbands refuse to make them any sort of a personal allowance. To their families, they give service so great and never ending that money cannot ever pay it, yet they never have a penny of their own that they do not have to wheedle out of their husbands. Marriage should be a 50-50 contract.

People often marvel at women who show such Christian fortitude in bearing the loss of a husband who was an estimable citizen and a good provider for his family. The woman draws through her widow's veil the first breath of freedom she has ever had in her life, and that consoles her for everything else—Exchange.

ALL HERDS TESTED IN NINE COUNTIES

Nine Kentucky counties now are free from tuberculosis among cattle and testing is being done in 12 other counties, according to a recent report of the United States Bureau of Animal Industry and the State Live Stock Sanitary Board of Kentucky, which are cooperating in eradicating tuberculosis from the herds in the state.

Campbell, Mason, Bourbon, Henderson, Spencer, Hardin, Todd, Nelson and Bullitt counties are now free from tuberculosis, and testing is being done in Boone, Bekinsridge, Barren, Floyd, Fayette, Graves, Jefferson, Letcher, Muhlenberg, Pendleton, Scott and Shelby counties.

Last year 10,000 herds containing a total of more than 77,000 head were tested in the state, according to Dr. E. F. Biles, the Federal inspector in charge of the work. Less than 1 per cent of the animals tested were found to have tuberculosis. In 1920 2.5 per cent of the cattle tested had tuberculosis. On June 30 this year 29,188 herds containing 228,499 cattle had been tested in Kentucky. Reactors numbered 3,654 or 1.6 per cent.

Seeing Ourselves

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

THE Overmans and the Whites, near neighbors and friends of ours, have spent their summer vacations at the same village on the Maine coast. They had not known each other very intimately before going off together, but the place where they were staying was small and they came back each with a more definite opinion of the other than he had before. There is nothing like the associations of a vacation to show up the vagaries and weaknesses of an individual.

Mrs. Overman called on us soon after her return. We have known her a long time and are used to receiving her confidences.

"Did you have a good vacation?" I asked. It's a conventional question, but how else should one begin?

"Yes," she answered; "but don't you think the Whites are queer?"

"Well, he seems so selfish and overbearing with her, and she—to be really plain about it is tight—just mean, stingy tight. He's in rags, and she hasn't a decent dress to her name, and it isn't because they are poor. She's too close to spend the money."

It interested me. I had suspected that the Whites were frugal, and now my opinion was confirmed. A few days later Mrs. White dropped in.

"Wasn't it queer about the Overmans?" she ventured during our conversation. "They didn't get their meals at the hotel at all this summer. She did the cooking for the family in their little cottage, and she kept her nose on the griddlestone all summer helping her with the work. I know if it had been Fred he would have protected. She has him horribly henpecked, and the way she hangs onto money is a fright."

I said nothing. It occurred to me, however, that I had heard it said by those who have had something to do with the underworld that thieves are the most likely to accuse others of stealing.

A mass meeting for the burley tobacco growers in Kentucky has been officially called in Lexington Nov. 15th, at 2 p. m., at the Woodland Auditorium. The other burley producing states namely Tennessee, Indiana, Ohio, Missouri and West Virginia will have delegates at this meeting to report what action their states have taken in regard to eliminating the 1925 crop of burley tobacco.

On September 27th, a mass meeting of Kentucky growers was held in Lexington and approximately 89 per cent of the total poundage in the state was pledged for the cut out on that day, provided the other burley producing states would join with Kentucky in the movement. It is with a great deal of interest that the Kentucky growers await the reports from the other states. It will be finally settled on November 15th, whether the burley crop for 1925 will be eliminated or not. A tremendous crowd of burley growers is expected to attend this meeting, and it is hoped that every county in Kentucky that grows burley tobacco will be represented by delegates.

Anyway the politicians are not going to suffer for the present from the lack of jaw exercise.

The candidates who are beaten by the woman vote may not think that female suffrage has saved the country.

The people who are now considered merely to have flexible ideas of veracity, were formerly called plagiaries.

The junk dealers should look with favor on the way that a large part of the automobiles of Boone county are being run.

Not many persons so far have refused to accept a big income on the ground that the amount of their tax would be made public.

Being told not to hold themselves aloof, some young people think it necessary for four of them to ride in the automobile front seat.

Claimed the government needs a housecleaning. The politicians are all willing to boss the job, but many of them won't do any of the work.

The people may not yet thoroughly understand the issues of the recent campaign, but anyway 100,000,000 of them have shaken hands with the candidates.

We should remember that what we do for ourselves dies with us, but what we do for others lives long after we are called hence. Service to fellowman must take the place of selfishness and greed.

The Democratic party has survived defeat; it has survived "land-slides." The Democratic party is strengthened by defeat, and we are thankful for it. Democrats today are buckling on their armor for the next battle of the ballots.

Just 45 years ago Thomas A. Edison invented the incandescent lamp, he now predicts that the time is not far distant when electric light and power will be transmitted by wireless. And what will the poor coddler do then?

There is no beauty in poverty. It is not cruel, judging by reports from France and England relative to divorce and remarriages by wealthy American girls, who come to the conclusion that there is but little beauty and happiness among the rich, and a good deal of it is ugly.

The most comforting thought in the world is the assurance that we live in an ordered universe. There are no accidents. There are no chances. Nothing happens except in the regular course and order of things. The Creator of Natural Law does not step out of His role to interfere with the natural law He has created. He lets it work itself out in perfect precision. Meanwhile there are those who entertain the idea that a goodly part of the Universe was created for them only and persist in an attempt to improve the work of the Creator. Then there are those who ignore the fact of Natural Law, or any other law except the policeman's club. Great souls are scarce. If you know some of them stay close by them. They are steadfast, dependable the great gifts of life.

Analysis of the vote cast in Boone county on the 4th inst., shows a large discrepancy in the Presidential as well as the Senatorial vote, but the discrepancy from that cast at the August primary is greater in the Senatorial vote. It is hard for one to understand or explain this condition. Every voter who cast his vote at the Democratic primary election in August last, pledged himself to support the nominees of the primary at the regular election held last week. We have heard, but hope that it is not true, that a number of our ministers as well as other citizens, cast their vote in the last primary and then so far forgot their obligations and honor as to cast their vote at the regular election for others than the nominees of that election. One who violates his obligations and does wrong and dishonorable acts himself, cannot ask or expect others to refrain from doing wrong.

As the Bond plan has been defeated by 80,000 Boone county will get no assistance from the State Highway-Commissioner for two years. If a prominent newspaper advocating the Pay-as-you-go plan is correctly quoted in the dispatches. The plan seems to be to complete two highways north and south and one east and west through the state, which will take all State road funds available for construction.

If the bond plan had been successful Boone county would have had at least one quarter of a million dollars spent on the primary system of roads in the county, but on account of the defeat of the Bond plan this sum is not available for use on the roads in Boone county and our roads cannot be improved with the limited amount of county funds. So far as Boone is concerned we can only live in hopes that the future will provide better things for us.

ONLY A REVERSE

The bond issue fails where it should have carried. We record the defeat in the present vote, but, nevertheless, look with a hopeful eye toward the future. There has been a fire kindled in Kentucky this year that not all the little Kentuckians who united to oppose this great and constructive step forward can put out. We are going to have roads and a real State University and Normal schools and better county schools and decent prisons and asylums no matter what the foes of progress may do, and the spirit kindled in this bond campaign is the spirit that will, in the end, save Kentucky.

The looks back upon this fight it made for the bond issue without atom of regret. For the fight that we made and for the cause that we advocated we have not one word of apology. Few great victories for progress are won in the initial effort. It is satisfaction enough for this paper to have helped to inaugurate a movement which, even though temporarily blocked, is certain to win in the end, and to have gone on to honorable defeat with such men as Gov. Fields, J. M. Atherton, Arthur D. Allen, Judge Humphrey, Judge Hager, Arthur D. Allen and Desha Breckinridge.

The men and newspapers that assisted in blocking this great movement have much to answer for, and before this State is very much older, they will begin to realize it. It was a wanton, wicked fight that was made against the State bond issue, but, from the first, it was not a difficult fight to make. The temper of the times in Kentucky is ultra conservative; the opposition had a great advantage to begin with, simply by appealing to the negative spirit in the blood of the people. On the top of that appeal was piled an appeal to prejudice, a mass of misrepresentation and a persistent distortion of facts, which remain to disgrace the newspapers and the politicians guilty of misdoing. Particularly does the Post regret the villification of the Kentuckians in the eastern part of the State by the Louisville Courier-Journal and Times. We assure the people of Eastern Kentucky that these papers do not represent Louisville.

It will be necessary to begin over where we left off. But the Post will be here for many years, and never will we stop fighting until this battle is won.—Louisville Post.

The average person consumes 1,400 pounds of solid foods and about as much of liquids each year. In a life time one eats enough feed to fill a train of freight cars miles long. The scientists-statisticians should complete his work by telling us the average cost per pound for this food stuff and how many miles of freight cars would be required to hold the silver dollars used in payment.

You can't get the better of an argument with a man who refuses to talk.

PRECINCT VOTE ON THE BONDS

Inasmuch as there was a friendly contest between the respective precincts as to which one should return the best vote for the bonds, we have listed the precincts in the order in which they voted, according to percentage, on this question. For instance Bellevue voted 93.9 per cent, while Burlington No. 1 voted 93.9 per cent of her vote for the bond issue, with Petersburg No. 2 at 92.8, and so on down the line. This is published for the simple reason that it may settle some friendly disputes that may arise.

KEEP THE MONEY AT HOME

Several financial newspapers and magazines have been warning the American investing public against being lured into buying German securities, with which this country is now being flooded.

There never was a time when it was necessary for an American to seek investment elsewhere. There are plenty of opportunities in this country and they are worthy of support because money invested in American securities will build up American enterprises.

Many investors are persuaded to place their money in foreign securities with the promise of large returns. But there is danger for the United States if Americans in any considerable number invest their money in stocks and bonds of Germany or any other foreign nation.

If the investments should prove unprofitable, there is a chance that international bankers and influential investors might seek to compel our country to enforce their payment.

If they proved profitable, Europe would be even more infuriated at the United States and would set up the cry that she was being robbed. A spirit of hostility for this country which exists to some extent already, would be increased and the seeds of discord that lead to war would be implanted in the minds of the people.

Thus there is a double danger and loyal Americans, even though promise of returns may be especially bright, will not dabble in foreign securities, especially German, Austrian or Hungarian.

Fashion Indulges in Spirited Hats

The mode seems to have turned its back upon demure and unassertive millinery. Fashion is indulging in spirited and picturesque hats, some of them worn at a jaunty tilt while others are dignified, but wayward. Shmups are subtle and very generally becoming. Materials rich and varied. Velvet, brocades, metal tissues, felt, velours and satin, with combinations of many fabrics, insure a mid-winter season of brilliant headwear.

A soft velvet hat shown here is a debonair, off-the-face shape that is popular. As trimmings go, it is very simply finished with an ornament of ribbon plaited about a metallic cabochon. Below it one version of the Spanish sailor hat's plush shoes, just how adorable a sailor can be. It is trimmed with sequins about the brim edge and more ribbon that extends over the crown and ends in long ties.

Dr. Frank D. Vizetelly

Can you find "dum-dums," "cake eaters" and "gate crashers" in the dictionary? Not yet—but you may very soon, according to this man. He is Frank D. Vizetelly, LL. D., Litt. D., the managing editor of "The New Standard Dictionary of the English Language." The foregoing words, along with hundreds of others from the nascent vocabulary of the "flapper," the "sharple," and the "cackle," are now on the "waiting list" in the lexicographer's office. A certain percentage of newly coined language is sure eventually to become part of the legitimate circulating medium of conversation, to change from "slang" to language. And once the language has been enriched by the adoption of the racy and expressive words, they go into the dictionary.

Pine Tar and Honey Still Best for Chest

Colds and Coughs

Our mothers and grandmothers would never be without pine tar syrup in the house for coughs, chest colds, etc. This was many years ago, but modern medicine has never been able to improve on this time-tested remedy. Doctors say the pine tar is hard to beat for quickly loosening and removing the phlegm and congestion that are the actual cause of the cough. At the same time pine tar and honey soothe and heal all irritation and soreness.

The kind that has been used with never-failing success in thousands of families for years is that known as Dr. Jell's Pine Tar Honey. This is scientifically compounded of just the right proportions of pine tar, honey and other quick-acting, healing ingredients which the best doctors have found to aid in quick relief. It contains absolutely no opiates, narcotics or harmful drugs, so can be given to young children—fine for spasmodic cough. It tastes good, too. If you want the best, medicine that stops the severest cough overnight, be sure you get Dr. Jell's Pine Tar Honey. It costs only 50c at any good drugstore.

Some folks never exercise their judgment enough to keep it in training.

ROAD BUILDING DAY OF NARROW ROAD CONSTRUCTION GONE

Don't build the road narrow. But however it is built, have a right of way ample enough to provide for widening in the future. On these two hang all the law and the profits of modern road building!

An expensive fault of the narrow road is the concentration of traffic. Wheels moving constantly over the same places produce parallel lines of excessive wear. To prevent rapid disintegration of a single track road a heavier foundation and surface is needed than is required for a wider road.

Substantial shoulders at the sides in which the passing traffic may turn out are also necessary, as otherwise the wheels of vehicles turning out to pass will quickly wear ruts at the edges. In these water collects, to penetrate beneath the foundation, with disastrous results. A narrow road with soft earth shoulders is dangerous to motor traffic in slippery weather. To build the heavier foundation and surface needed to bear the concentration of traffic on a narrow road, and the substantial shoulders at the sides require as much money as to build a wider road. On a wide road, traffic is scattered, and wear is distributed. With a paved surface sufficiently wide for two lines of rapidly moving vehicles to pass in safety, the necessity for artificial shoulders is eliminated. To build a narrow road, thin and without shoulders, means a loss of the entire investment in a comparatively short time.

A narrow right of way requires drainage ditches close to the travel. With no shoulder between paved surface and ditch the chances of serious accident are largely increased. All drainage ditches tend to become deeper, so that the danger to traffic becomes constantly greater.

Before any program for beautification of highway is undertaken, some assurance that the rights of way are wide enough to accommodate future traffic should be had.

Motor vehicle traffic will increase as the mileage of hard roads increases. A general extension in the width of wearing surfaces will call for wider rights of way. To obtain wider rights of way now means an ultimate saving of a large sum of money and will prevent many future difficulties.

Great Influence of Better Roads

The following points show how improved roads influence farm home life:

1. Shortens the distance from neighbor to neighbor and so reduces isolation and loneliness.
2. Brings the town and the country home closer together, making it possible for the farmer and his family to enjoy the amusements and educational advantages offered in town.
3. Saves time in traveling from the farm to town and from town to farm. This allows more time for work, rest or pleasure.
4. Lightens the burden of marketing crops.
5. Social intercourse between town and country tends to break down barriers of misunderstanding, jealousy, suspicion and ill-feeling.
6. Improved roads make possible bigger and better consolidated schools and churches in town or in the country.
7. Improved roads offer greater incentive to hauling limestone and fertilizer in building up the farm and increasing its productivity and income.

Learning to Build Roads

The advisory board of highway research, which recently met in Washington, is composed of from sixty to seventy of the leading engineers and scientists of the country. More than $1,000,000 is being spent on learning how to build highways so as to give the best and longest service per dollar, and this group of men have assembled to discuss and exchange data on the experiments in progress on roads.

Roads Help Keep Pace

Good roads have helped the farmer keep pace with modern times. Who would go back to those days when the farm was isolated, especially in wet weather, the deep rutted dirt roads, the horse and buggy, or perhaps the mule, with its limited area of travel when a trip to town was considered a journey.

Remove Decayed Trees

Removal of all decayed trees bordering main line roads in Connecticut has been undertaken by the state highway department in the hope of removing the danger of highway blockades during heavy windstorms.

No actual cases of accidents involving falling trees across the roadway have come to the attention of the department, but it is felt that if this precaution is taken the probability of mishaps of this kind will be removed.

CARELESSNESS OR CAUTION

Highway fatalities are on the increase, according to the U. S. census bureau. The increase of three killed for each 100,000 population during the past year is due to 2,773 more fatalities from automobile accidents.

But even the 16,452 deaths charged against the automobile do not tell the whole story, as deaths resulting from collisions between automobiles and trains and automobiles and street cars are charged to the heavier vehicle.

Train grade crossing accidents cost the lives of 2,268 persons last year, it is estimated.

Indiana has realized the seriousness of the situation, and at a safety conference adopted a set of practical suggestions that will be incorporated in the governor's message to the legislature.

The conference recommended that a member of the public service commission be designated as "commissioner of safety," that an advisory council of seven members be designated, representing the public and industries, and that legislation to give the commission right to eminent domain within 300 feet of a grade crossing to remove obstructions to be enacted.

These suggestions are all very fine and some of them are already being used in other states, but no amount of legislation is going to save the lives of people at grade crossings unless they themselves are careful enough to be careful.

It has been proposed, even, that automobile drivers be compelled to stop before crossing a railroad or interurban line, but no one has found a feasible way to compel this observance.

In the last analysis, the terrible loss of life from this cause can be reduced only by the drivers of automobiles themselves. The fatalities will continue to mount, year by year, so long as carelessness, instead of caution, rules in the mind of the drivers.

ADVERTISING FISH

Mr. Fish could be made still more popular as an article of diet, if advertising was properly used, according to the retiring president of the United States Fisheries Association. This gentleman pointed out that this country was first settled by fishermen who lived by the net, but their descendants have become meat eaters to a large extent, because the meat producers have boosted their products. He urged more generous advertising of the fish foods.

Some people might say that the fish business is too well established to need advertising, fish having been used as an article of food for many centuries and far back of the dawn of history. Everyone knows about fish and likes fish, they would argue, so why spend any money telling people what they know already?

Yet this expert in the fish business says that it is necessary to advertise this product which everyone knows perfectly well, and he must know what he is talking about.

This suggests the truth that no matter how well a product is known, it can not reach its total maximum of sales unless people are reminded of its virtues and benefits and the satisfaction that comes from using it. People act on impulses that come to them as they go along. The product that is frequently advertised suggests itself to the mind much more constantly than one that is not advertised, hence the former gets the better business.

Incidentally the above suggests that no matter how well known a retail store is, it could increase its sales by advertising. If fish, which has been used as an article of diet for 100,000 years or more, needs publicity, the store that was started a few years ago certainly will do well to offer some regular reminders of its activities to the public.

THE WOUNDS OF WAR

Few people thought, when the bells rang out joyously on Nov. 11, 1918, that six years would pass and sorrow still in turmoil as the result of that war. When our people shouted in the streets and sang in their churches, it was fondly dreamed that the war was over and that the wounds would quickly heal.

The event proved otherwise. It was shown that war leaves deep and ragged wounds, which may require a generation for their healing. This is no cause for discouragement, for distinct progress has been made, particularly during the past year.

But it is suggested that the cost of war is by no means measured in the losses on the battlefield or the debt piled up for future years to pay. This is the bitterness between peoples, the moral effect on the young men exposed to the unwholesome ways of camps, the disorganization of industry.

The death of Albert H. Loeb, vice president of the Sears, Roebuck Co. and father of Richard Loeb who was sentenced to life imprisonment for the murder of little Bobby Franks, is attributed to a broken heart. The crime of his son weighed terribly on the father, who seemed to realize that his own neglect was in part responsible for the tragedy. The lesson is particularly pertinent at this time when the auto offers unusual opportunities to the young people and parents seem to be indifferent until too late to remedy the trouble.

TH' OLE GROUCH

GET AWAY WITH THAT NOISE! YOU MOVED HERE BECAUSE THIS WAS THE MOST PROGRESSIVE TOWN AROUND. AN' NOW YA KICK AN' YOTE AGIN EVERY IMPROVEMENT BECAUSE IT COSTS YA A LIL' MONEY, AN' YOU WITH ENUFF 'Y BUREAU OUT!

A FAST PACE

The dean of women in a big university has decreed that an automobile is not essential to higher education and that no woman student shall be permitted to keep a machine at school longer than four weeks.

A similar rule for men will be enforced at the university, it is announced, because the number of automobiles has multiplied so fast that the college town is over-run with them.

That which has become a college or university problem is likewise one for the high school, if the number of boys and girls who drive cars to school continues to grow as it has in the past few years. The time is not far away when the students will be demanding that the school authorities provide garages for them.

No one could find reasonable grounds for objecting to a high school student driving an automobile to school when the student lives in the country, several miles from the school, and no school hack facilities are provided. But there does seem to be a limit to the practice of admitting boys and girls, none of whom is allowed by law to operate cars, to drive to and from schools, when their homes are only a few blocks away.

In the long run, interest in the bank will net you more than interest in a race track bet.

Bad Coughs Ended Quickly by Double-Action Remedy

Remarkable results in quickly clearing up the severest coughs have been obtained with a prescription by a well-known specialist that does two things at once. It not only soothes and heals the soreness and irritation, but it very quickly loosens and removes the phlegm and congestion which are the real cause of the coughing. It is often astonishing how speedily the cough stops. The prescription is known as Dr. King's New Discovery for Coughs. It is particularly valuable for night coughing. To promptly end this annoying and weakening ailment, simply before retiring take one teaspoonful of Dr. King's New Discovery and hold it in your throat 15 or 20 seconds before swallowing. People who have been unable to rest on account of continual coughing have often gotten their full 8 or 9 hours' sleep by this simple method.

Dr. King's is excellent, too, for children's spasmodic cough, bronchitis, laryngitis, bronchial asthma and hoarseness. On sale at all good druggists. Ask for

HOW DOCTORS TREAT COLDS AND THE FLU

To break up a cold over night or to cut short an attack of grippe, influenza or sore throat, physicians and druggists are now recommending Calobals. The Calobals Calomet tablet, that is purified from dangerous and sickening effects. Those who have tried it say that it acts like magic, by far more effective and certain than the old style calomel, heretofore recommended by physicians.

One or two Calobals at bed time with a swallow of water—that's all. No salts, no nausea nor the slightest interference with eating, work or pleasure. Next morning your cold has vanished and your system feels refreshed and purified. Calobals are sold only in original sealed packages, please ten cents for the test-packet sure—thirty-five cents for the large family package. Recommended and guaranteed by druggists. Your money back if you are not delighted—adv.

Favored Costume
in New Aspect

The plaited skirt and overblouse make a combination that has many devotees, and their number shows no sign of lessening. One of the handsomest interpretations of this costume is shown here, developed in black satin with decoration of ecrú georgette, black satin tabs and flat ecrú buttons. It is very elegant and effective in black and white or brown and beige and makes the sort of daytime dress in which one is enough "dressed up" and not too much dressed, for almost anything that comes to pass in the course of the average day.

Millinery Mode Approves
White Silk Bengaline

The vogue for heavy corded silk finds charming expression in the chapeau made of heavy white bengaline. The sectional crown as shown in the picture is a favorite for this little hat of corded white silk. There are some outstanding points of especially smart significance in this model.
 One is, that the bengaline covers a firm foundation, rather than being a soft sports type. The narrow side band is an unusual feature. Silver ribbon is a very important factor in millinery this season. It lends its charm to this model, and an added touch of attractiveness is the white feather brush darting out from beneath the wee brim. In some instances white bengaline silk is combined with silvery white artificial satin, the fabric alternating in the sectional crown.

New Style Points in Coat Details

In describing coat styles for fall, "straight and slim" almost goes without saying. This silhouette may be taken for granted in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred. In the hundredth case "slim and flaring" will tell the story. It is in details of cut, shape of sleeves, color, methods of decoration and choice of fabric that we find features that distinguish this fall's models.

Pile fabrics continue in great favor, but they have been joined by heavy ribbed silks and certain novelty weaves in wool materials. In colors all the warm browns, dark greens, some deep reds and castor shades are among the rivals of black. A handsome brown coat is pictured, with dyed squirrel collar and banding on the modish sleeve. It is further enriched by a broad embroidery in self color.

THE END OF DISEASE

People often say, looking at the marvels of scientific advance, that it is impossible that there can be as many great discoveries during the next half century as the past fifty years have shown.

There are however many fields where wonderful scientific advance is already in sight. One of these is in the matter of human health. A former president of the American Chemical Society goes so far as to predict that within the next fifty years, scientists will have found means for curing and preventing practically all diseases.

This may be too hopeful a prediction, but wonderful gains have already been made in this direction. People 100 or more years of age may become very common within a few generations. But if disease is thus to be conquered, the majority of people must co-operate by obeying the laws of health, which are now so frequently disregarded and held in contempt.

Quite a number of farmers have had their farms poisoned against hunting the past week. Look over the hills and keep off their premises if you don't want to pay a fine.

POULTRY FACTS.

PLAN TO PICK OUT GOOD LAYING HENS

"If you were going bird hunting you wouldn't take a hound. Starting a dairy, you wouldn't buy beef cattle. Or if you wanted to go into horse racing, it would not be desirable to get a Shetland pony. Yet many people seem to think that a chick is a chicken, regardless of its individual qualities and purposes."

While some varieties of chickens are better layers than others, yet individual selection will greatly increase the laying qualities of any variety.

M. B. Landen, of the Florida Agricultural College, says: "When a bird has laid through one season, you can judge some of her performance qualities by color of her legs and condition of beak and plumage." The explanation continues: "Select a hen that has a large space for manufacturing and carrying eggs, and you get one that will produce more eggs than another, with less carrying space, even though of the same variety."

"It is no trouble to detect which has the greater ability to perform by examining the body outlines. The body should be wide and deep and well-proportioned, the back broad and rather flat, the breast bone rather short, necker-shaped and sharp, not round and plump as in a quail."

"The comb and wattle indicate the condition of the reproductive organs. A hen with a healthy, well-developed reproductive organ, has a large full comb and wattle, with full circulation indicated by warmth and softness of texture. The hen with a small, crowded or disused organ has a small, shriveled, really cold and coarse comb and wattle. The distance between pelvic bones and the pliability of the skin and abdomen indicate the present performing condition of the hen and her ability to lay."

Demand for Guineas Is Increasing in the East

Wild game, such as partridge, quail and pheasant, are becoming scarce in many localities. Besides, most states have laws which prohibit the sale of game birds as a measure to discourage hunters from killing more than they and their friends can conveniently use. There is, however, a good substitute for game birds and it is found in the guinea. The guinea is more than half wild anyway and has many of the characteristics of game birds found in the woods and fields. The demand from hotels and clubs is increasing. This is particularly true in the East, and the taste for this bird is growing in the Middle West.

When well cooked, guineas are attractive in appearance, although darker than common fowls, and the flesh of young birds is tender and of especially fine flavor, resembling that of wild game. Like all other fowl, old guineas are very likely to be tough and rather dry.

Feed More Meat Scraps and Sour Milk to Hens

The use of more meat scraps and sour milk in the rations for the farm flock will help to keep up the egg production through the hottest season of August and early September. The laying hen's diet to be full of all the necessary material should consist of grain, mash, animal feed, mineral feed, and water. The grain is usually taken care of, as is the water supply.

The difference which a mash can make in the laying is surprising, when the mash contains besides grain an abundance of milk and meat scrap material. These two foods supply the animal matter, while cracked oyster shells or grit furnish the mineral matter. Green food is essential, and if the flock does not have range, green grass or weeds are specially good for layers during the hot weather.

Provide Shade for Hens During Hot Summer Days

The poultry industry is being developed in many sections where there is very little natural shade. Summers are long and hot and poultry is certain to suffer unless adequate shade is provided. To overcome the absence of trees in the poultry yards, some plant castor beans, which grow rapidly and produce large leaves, thus providing shade for the chickens which they so thoroughly enjoy during the hot hours of summer days. Choose erect low shrubs, or provide shade by stretching gum or bamboo over frames constructed for that purpose.

Poultry should be provided both shade and plenty of clean fresh water. It is not only a humane act, but will pay in increased egg yield and more rapid development of young birds.

Big Mortality of Chicks

Poor methods of feeding and brooding are the chief reasons given for the heavy mortality of chicks. In the state of Iowa, it is said, nearly one-half of the chicks hatched on farms are never raised to maturity. Iowa farmers are probably no more careless in their methods of handling chicks than farmers in other states. This is a warning to the poultryman who neglects to use well-balanced rations in feeding his chicks, and watch the temperature of the brooder.

Union School Notes.

The boys of the 1st basket ball team of Union High School suffered their first defeat when they met the Walton team, at Walton, Nov. 7th in a game resulting in a score of 24 to 7. Although playing against wind, crying cold posts and a rapidly growing score for their opponents, the Union boys showed their sporting spirit by fighting until the last moment of play. The teams will meet on the Florence court Nov. 14th to play off the tie. The Black and Gold players are confident of the victory, which will make them champions of Boone and Grant counties. Remember the date Nov. 14th and help win the game by being there to encourage the boys who represent your school.

Get out the old Blue-back speller, refresh your memory a bit and come to the "Spelling Bee" to be held in connection with the regular meeting of the P. T. A. on Friday evening, Nov. 14th.

The school has recently added some new chemical supplies to the Laboratory equipment.

RED CROSS DUTY TO AID VETERANS

Spends Nearly Four Millions in Year to Lessen Burdens of Disabled Soldiers.

SERVES 63,700 IN HOSPITALS

Every Case Is Given Individual Service—Assists Families of These Men Everywhere.

Washington.—The need of individual assistance by ex-service men and their families from the Red Cross is as pressing today as it was immediately after the end of the World War. For six years this work has been foremost of all Red Cross services, and in emphasizing the steady public support of this work the Red Cross National Headquarters urges the largest enrollment this year during the membership campaign opening on Armistice Day, November 11.

Nearly four million dollars of Red Cross funds spent for disabled veterans and their dependents during the year ended June 30 last presents some idea of the magnitude of this work. The current year, it is estimated, will call for still further disbursements of funds for the reason that the Red Cross, through more than 3,500 Chapters in as many communities in the United States, has been called upon to help the ex-service men in making out their applications for the adjusted compensation granted in the so-called bonus law.

58,767 Soldier Cases a Month

The Red Cross work for the disabled soldier is designated "home service," for it gives individual attention to the man and his family approximating the interest and loving care of the home. Such service in the hospitals, camps, soldiers' homes and sanatoria, averaged 58,951 cases a month during the year. Assistance to ex-service men and their dependents averaged 58,767 cases a month. In addition, the Red Cross in the last twelve months provided 33,000 recreation and entertainment events in the hospitals and camps.

Thus the Red Cross, symbolized by the "Greatest Mother," still watches over two many thousands of men, comforts them, helps to lighten the tedium of their physical reconstruction, and in their homes lifts some of the burdens from their "own people."

Work in Communities Increases

The home service of the Red Cross was the most pressing duty of 1930. Chapters, an increase of 152 communities where problems affected by the war veteran's condition required solution through immediate and intelligent assistance. The chapters alone expended some $2,000,000 in this work.

The transient disabled soldier, usually suffering from disability or tuberculosis, is almost everywhere a grave problem. From national funds the past year $178,073.36 was expended in helping the chapters to care for these wandering men.

According to government report there are 4,800 veterans in civilian institutions, and in the national homes for soldiers the complications are increasing. The large groups of patients whose claims have been disallowed, of veterans of foreign wars, and the great number of men permanently resident in these institutions call for Red Cross work which cannot be avoided nor denied.

Definite Service to 73,700

Of a total of $4,500 ex-service men in hospitals and other institutions 73,700 were rendered a definite and specialized service by the Red Cross. In a single month 4,186 new cases were presented and a total of 50,135 was acted upon—figures which serve to illustrate the magnitude of the information and claims service engaging the attention of Red Cross workers. New veteran legislation amending the War Risk act which extends many additional rights to disabled ex-service men will reopen thousands of cases and require still greater Red Cross service.

When Congress granted a charter to the American Red Cross it charged the organization with the duty to act as "the medium of communication between the American people and their Army and Navy." This responsibility to the enlisted men and their families is met every year without restriction.

Serves Men on Active Service

The extent of this Red Cross activity during the last year embraced a total of 195,216 cases. There were 26,955 separate soldiers' and sailors' claims; 20,316 investigations of home conditions; 11,421 cases related to discharges, furloughs, etc. Assistance was given in 39,433 instances for personal, business or family problems; 744,220 visits were made to the sick or disabled, and nearly 40,000 letters and telegrams dispatched to the homes of enlisted men.

From June to September at the numerous military training camps the Red Cross provided information and home service to the trainees, also instruction in First Aid and Life-Saving. The entertainment and recreation events at the various Army and Navy hospitals reached nearly 8,000 during the year, and occupational therapy in nine Naval hospitals gave constructive and beneficial results and occupied the time of patients in the making of useful and ornamental things.

HELP US TO PLAY THE MAN

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

IT IS early in the morning as I write this. The sun is just coming up, and as I look out upon the world, there is a peace and a quiet and a beauty that thrills me. But suddenly there come to my mind all the things I must do—all I should like to do.

Labor with what seal we will, something yet remains undone. Something unaccomplished still waits the rising of the sun.

My courage fails me for a moment. I should like to run away from it all; I should like to go out into the woods alone and forget the irritations and the complaints, and the troubles, and the ceaseless routine of requests that the postman and the telephone and the tramping feet bring to my desk.

And then I think of Spencer, and the way he is meeting his difficulties. He's a handsome fellow only nineteen. He has a trade, a very exacting trade, at which he is earning his living. Every moment of his day is taken up. He has no pleasures excepting the pleasure he derives from hard work and from doing the irritating tasks that hold him six days in the week. He has all of the desires of youth for friends and pleasure and recreation, few of which he can gratify. He never complains, he never curses his lot. He's always smiling, always with a cheerful word on his lips. At home there are father and mother and a family of brothers and sisters leaning on him, needing his help, requiring his aid; and he gives it cheerfully and manfully.

I know when I think of him that there is no task which one cannot perform if he has courage, no irritation which may not be overcome with patience, no temptation which may not be resisted if one has principle and keeps faith in God. The day brings difficulties but they are seldom beyond one's strength, and the duty done brings happiness.

It must have been early morning when Stevenson wrote: "The day turns and brings us the petty round of irritating concerns and duties. Help us to play the man, help us to perform with laughter and kind faces, let cheerfulness abound with industry, give us to go blithely on our restless beds weary and content and unlabored, and grant us in the end the gift of sleep."

Simple School Frocks Varied by Fabrics

If it were not for the great variety of patterns which manufacturers of popular clothes have presented this season, styles in frocks for little school girls would become monotonous. The vogue is for dresses made on the simplest lines, like that shown in the picture and dress after dress shows no variation of this style. But popular fabrics save the day with stripes, plaids, cross-bar and other patterns and when plain materials are used designers enliven them with plaques, facings and bright touches of embroidery.

The dress pictured is made of striped flannel in blue and tan with collar and cuffs of plain linen. It may be taken as a criterion of good style for the young school girl and for her older sister. This simplicity in day frocks is not confined to the younger generation.

Th terrible thing about most mother-in-law jokes is that they're largely true.

SUMMER FEEDING OF HENS IS IMPORTANT

Nature will not supply enough animal protein in the form of bugs and worms during the spring and summer to supply the laying flock of poultry with what is needed to insure good egg production, says A. G. Phillips, head of the poultry department of Purdue university. In the spring when birds get onto free range and in the summer when they utilize the entire farm for exercise, it is a common practice to reduce the amount of mash containing protein and depend upon the grain as the large part of the feed to be supplied by those who keep poultry.

As the weather warms up, birds do not need as much heat supplied by the grain as they do in the winter. Consequently the grain consumption should naturally be reduced and mash consumption increased. In order to see that the birds eat more mash as the season progresses it may be necessary to feed practically no grain in the morning. If the Purdue mash of 50 pounds bran, 50 pounds middlings and 30 pounds tankage is used, the proportion of grain to mash in the spring should be two to one and in the summer one to one, or equal parts of grain to mash.

As a rule egg production begins to slump as soon as warm weather arrives, but if the mash consumption increases the slump will not be so great. The summer production can be very high and consequently very profitable. On farms where much waste grain is available it may be wise to confine the birds until about ten o'clock in the morning, thus compelling them to eat mash before they are permitted to roam over the farm. High mash consumption is absolutely necessary to insure summer egg production.

Green Feeds and Water Essential for All Hens

It is absolutely essential that layers be furnished green feed of some kind. The question of how to supply this green feed must be decided by the individual. For maximum egg production the bird must have access to fresh clean water at all times, which should neither be too hot nor too cold. One hundred hens in good laying condition should consume from 12 to 24 quarts of water daily, and in extreme hot weather even more.

When properly fed milk makes an excellent feed for laying hens. Skim milk or buttermilk are economical feeds and when available should be used instead of the higher-priced protein feeds such as meat scraps. Skimmed milk not only contains the valuable food nutrients, but it is in the form that is easily digested. Sour milk is preferable to sweet milk, since sweet milk when fed may not all be consumed before it sours, thus causing the fowl to have sweet food at one time, and then sour immediately following, which is not advisable. Furthermore, sour milk contains an acid that is said to be a benefit in controlling bowel troubles.

Grit in some form is very essential to the health of a flock and also means economy in feeding. It is also to be remembered that shells are just as important as any other part of the egg. A large amount of lime is used in building these shells. Unless some form of lime is supplied, hens laying heavily will not secure a sufficient amount to manufacture the shells.

Corn Gluten in Ration

Corn gluten feed makes an excellent addition to the ration, and may be procured through almost any feed store. It is highly palatable and may be fed to advantage in the dry mash with other feed, such as follows: One hundred pounds of cornmeal, 100 pounds of bran, 100 pounds of white middlings, 100 pounds of ground feed, 100 pounds of corn gluten feed, 100 pounds of meat scrap, 6 pounds of charcoal, 6 pounds of salt.

Poultry Hints

Keep a good, strong padlock on the hen-coop door.

Six roosters with each 100 hens should give good fertility and hatchability with Leghorns.

Ground where last year's chicks died isn't good ground for this year's chicks. Move the coops and brooders.

The Orpington is an English general-purpose breed that is winning quite a place in America. Orpingtons have white skin and produce brown eggs—an unusual combination.

A. A. Holberg, assistant poultryman at the Minnesota college farm, saves himself work in cleaning drooping boards by keeping them covered with a layer of fine sand. He says it keeps the boards more sanitary, too.

Feeding the chicks too soon causes diarrhea. The egg yolk enters the chick's body shortly before the chick hatches. The chick should have time to use up this yolk before it is given any other feed.

"If every tree in all the wood could take some mortal form and leave the place where it has stood through sunshine and through storm, The lofty pine would be a knight in armor strong and rare. The slender birch, with dress so white, would be his lady fair."

SOMETHING GOOD

Here is a choice pound cake which is not too expensive for an occasional indulgence:

Pound Cake.—Cream two-thirds of a cupful of butter; add one cupful of sugar, the well-beaten yolks of four eggs; add one-half of a cupful of flour, sifted with one teaspoonful of baking powder and then add one teaspoonful of milk. Mix well and add the rest of the flour and the stiff-beaten whites. Bake in a paper-lined pan for forty minutes.

A clever way to serve apple dumplings or any fruit dumplings, except too juicy fruit, is to slice the fruit into muffin rings, set in an agate pan and cover with a rich biscuit dough on top; bake as usual. Remove carefully and a shapely dumpling will result.

Raisin and Celery Salad.—Cut into small pieces two cupfuls of tender celery, two oranges, broken into bits, and two-thirds of a cupful of raisins, seeded and plumped over steam. Add one cupful of grated apple to a cupful of mayonnaise and cover the fruit. This is an especially delicious combination.

Casserolet.—This is a famous French dish which is both historical and appetizing. Soak over night a quart of lima beans; in the morning bring to the boiling point and drain. Add fresh boiling water, a teaspoonful of salt, and cook until nearly done. Now place in a casserole two cupfuls of cooked chicken or duck, the drained beans, an onion, chopped, one-half cupful of strained tomato, a quart of hot broth and a teaspoonful of kitchen bouquet. Bake one hour, then uncover; sprinkle with a little chopped parsley, brown and serve.

Poppin' Wafers.—When one wants to serve a tasty little cracker with a cup of tea or a glass of ginger ale, these: Take a cupful of popcorn, using only the fully popped kernels, put through a meat grinder and add to boiled frosting. Heap on salted wafers and bake in a quick oven.

"A little thing, a sunny smile,
A loving word at morn,
And all day long the day shone bright,
The cares of life were made more light,
And sweetest hopes were born."

SEASONABLE VEGETABLES

Now that the tender green peppers are in the market more plentifully we may indulge in an occasional dish of stuffed peppers. Almost any filling that is liked may be used. Parboil the peppers after cutting off the stem end and removing the white fiber and seeds. After five minutes of parboiling remove and turn them to drain. When cool fill with chopped meat or bread crumbs and nuts, seasoning to taste.

Vegetable Salad.—Line a salad bowl which has been rubbed with a cut clove of garlic, fill with alternate layers of sliced cucumbers, radishes, onions, green peppers and bits of tomato. Cover with a French dressing and serve at once.

The tender new carrots are delicious put through the meat grinder, added to a cupful of cooked fresh peas and a half cupful of chopped peanuts. Serve on lettuce after mixing well with a good salad dressing.

Gypsy Stew.—Take a few carrots an equal quantity of green peas and new potatoes and a cupful of the tender green onions. Cook until tender in water to cover, adding a slice or two of dried and browned salt pork, fat and all. When the vegetables are tender season with salt and pepper and add enough milk to make sufficient liquid. Serve hot.

Hot Slaw.—Cut cabbage with a slicer very fine. Bruise it with a potato masher to draw out the juices. Beat two eggs, add two tablespoonfuls of sugar, a tablespoonful of butter, a dash of cayenne and mustard and a cupful of mild vinegar. Cook in a double boiler until smooth, then stir into the cabbage while it is still hot.

A most delicious dish of cabbage may be prepared as a scalloped dish. Put the cooked cabbage into a baking dish in layers with buttered crumbs and bits of butter. Season and cover with milk. Bake until the milk has been well cooked into the cabbage.

NOW THAT HE IS a political accident no longer, but a President of the United States in his own right the country is going to see considerable change in Calvin Coolidge. He need not be expected that his tongue will loosen up to any great extent, or that any of his habits of a lifetime will be of a sudden changed, but in his attitude toward the administering of the affairs of the Government will have upon them his own trade-mark. He believes that the big majority by which his first term in the White House was approved by the people has given him a mandate to govern the United States in his own way and according to his own policies.

CONGRESS WILL again be in session here on the first day of December, to remain until the fourth of March, when it will expire automatically with President Coolidge's inauguration. There is not expected to be much legislation out of this short session. In both the Senate and the House there still exists those slender Republican majorities which were the cause of so much trouble to the Administration last spring when the tax reduction legislation was under consideration. Some tax measure will be discussed by the dying Congress. Action on the Mellon plan is not expected for another year. There will be also some legislation having to do with the federal budget, the usual appropriation bills, near hearing completion by the Budget Bureau.

A PARENTLY UNDISMAYED by going down to defeat with Senator LaFollette, the members of the American Federation of Labor are seriously considering the abandonment of their policy of "non-partisan political action" as the first step in the formation in this country of a new political party modeled after the Social Labor Party of Great Britain. Although a Democrat for many years, Samuel Gompers, president of the federation, is said to be in favor of such a move. If such a party is formed it would probably go into the presidential campaign in 1928 with its own candidate as it did this year with LaFollette.

LOTS OF GOSSIP is being heard now with regard to the personnel of the Coolidge Cabinet after March 4. It has been definitely determined that Hughes and Mellon will remain, but as to the others there is some doubt. Hoover is said to be ready to get out of the Commerce Department, while Weeks feels the same way about the War Department. It appears that Coolidge will have five or six Cabinet appointments to make, in addition to filling at least two vacancies on the United States Supreme Court.

THE OLD GUARD Republicans are already planning how they are going to punish LaFollette when the 69th Congress opens. If their present plans go through they will deprive him and all other so-called Republicans who supported him in the presidential campaign of all their committee assignments. LaFollette, for instance, is the ranking Republican member of both the Inter-state Commerce and Finance Committees. In view of his long service, in addition to holding the Chairmanship of the Committee on Manufactures with a private office only a few steps from the Senate Chambers. The loss of this Chairmanship would mean that his office would have to be located in another building two city blocks away from the Chamber.

POSTMASTER GENERAL Now has put his foot down again on proposals to increase the pay of postal employees. Second and third class postal rates are increased at the time. His position is that the Post Office will incur a deficit unless the department's income is permitted to increase in proportion to any additional outgo. This means that any newspaper publisher who finds themselves opposed to the pay increase proposal is increased postal rates in the classes designated by New will result in increased newspaper rates. It is one of the problems that Congress will have to tackle next month.

On next Thursday (Thanksgiving night) the patrons of Hebron Theatre will witness the play "TIF MAN WHO PLAYED GOD" by Geo. Arliss; and on Saturday night following, Doris Keane, in "Romance

THE APPLE SHOW.

Don't forget the apple show at the Odd-Fellows Hall, Fifth and Madison Ave., Covington, today (Thursday) and tomorrow.

The counties whose apple growers will contest in this show are Boone, Kenton and Campbell, the committee from Boone being Linton Hemmings, of Constance; F. H. Rouse and B. T. Kelly, of Burlington.

Two minute talks will be made by F. H. Rouse, Chas. Kelly, Linton Hemmings, J. W. Goodridge, Hubert Conner, W. H. Clayton, Sterling Rouse and B. T. Kelly, covering different phases of apple growing in Boone county.

County Agent R. J. Matson will also deliver a short discourse on "The County Agent's Standpoint." Other talks will be made by horticulturists and leading fruit experts from all over Kentucky, as well as from the State University. H. F. Link, C. A. Wicklund and R. J. Matson, county agents of Kenton, Campbell and Boone counties respectively, have labored incessantly to make this show a success—so Mr. Farmer go down and look 'em over!

SUPT. PARIS B. AKIN

Superintendent Akin was born and reared in Boone county. He received his early training in the rural schools of that county when he entered the Carrollton High School. From thence he went to Eastern Teacher's College at Richmond, from where he went to the University of Kentucky.

Not only has he had theoretical training but he has had a very rich experience in the school room. He first taught in the rural schools of his native county for a period of seven years when he was elected by the board of Education where he taught in the schools of that city for two years.

He was then elected principal of the Bedford, Ky., graded and Trimble County High School where he taught for two years. He then became principal of the Madison County School where he worked for the following four and one-half years, when he was elected county superintendent of Clark county in 1922.

As county superintendent Mr. Akin has attracted the attention of his co-workers as being a business-like administrator who is serving his constituents wholeheartedly. He believes in "pragmatic" progress, for that reason he prefers to do consolidation on a limited scale rather than attempt to consolidate on a large scale and cause a reaction.

Supt. Akin, assisted by Prof. V. H. Miller of the vocational High School department of the Clark County High School has developed the Public School and Agricultural Fair which has attracted quite a little attention both within and without the county. Just such leadership as Mr. Akin's furnishes is what is bringing many counties forward and incidentally becoming a great blessing to Kentucky. He should have the support and cooperation of every citizen of Clark county—Clark County Edition Kentucky School News.

DAIRY COWS INCREASE.

Boone county's dairy cow population is increasing according to figures announced by the Blue Valley Creamery Institute. The statement covers an area embracing approximately one-eighth of the state in this section, and is believed to hold true for the county proper.

A 5.7 per cent gain in the number of dairy cows two years ago and over is noted for the district over the preceding year, with the increase for the state as a whole was 6.3 per cent as compared with 1923. The entire United States shows an increase amounting to 6 per cent, government figures show.

The number of heifers 1 to 2 years old as compared to the total number of cows in this district seems to be below the average, indicating the intention to bring less young stock into milk in the near future.

In citing these figures the Institute calls attention to the fact that the United States needs 320,000 more cows every year if production is to keep step with the normal growth in demand for dairy products. There is a need for 2,000,000 more mouths to be fed in the U. S. with every passing year and with the increased consumption of dairy products per capita, this added number to the nation's herd will barely suffice to meet the increased demand.

In order to counteract a certain report which is gaining ground in some parts of the county, I wish to state that I will positively not be a candidate for County Clerk at the August Primary next year. Even had I the desire to do so, I have certain connections which would prohibit it but I do wish to thank some friends for their promises of support.

JERRY L. FOWLER.

A large number of recent candidates are now free to enjoy the delights of their home towns and old jobs.

Eat, Drink and Be Merry for—

THE HOME CIRCLE.

In summer time the people could not settle down in the home circle because they wanted to go automobile riding or on other out door diversions. Now they can't settle down because they are going to the movies or other shows, clubs, etc. Many philosophers lament this spirit, and assert that the home circle with its old fashioned sweetness and inspiration has almost ceased to exist.

It will pay parents to put in facilities for their young people making home pleasant. Those who begrudge them radios, musical instruments, etc., which would keep them contented at home for many evenings, may be rewarded later by seeing them drift away to other scenes and become estranged from home influences. The homes of Boone county need something more than chairs and tables. They need a family circle.

HOW TO LIVE LONG.

The average person may not be aware of the fact, but you can live six hundred years if you split your cholin.

This is the assertion of Dr. William Held of Chicago, who explains that cholin is the substance that coats glands, clogs them up and results in old age and senility.

So, to get at the seat of the trouble, the natural thing is to have a "cholin splitter," a disintegrator, as it were, which routs cholin and restores youthfulness.

Dr. Held insists that he has found a serum, made from the fresh glands of steers, which will do the work.

There is nothing new in the knowledge that cholin exists in the human blood, he says. It is poisonous poison, filtering into the blood from products of decomposition.

Thomas Parr, an Englishman, is reputed to have lived to the ripe old age of 154 and the Hungarian Zartini is said to have been 185 when he died. Dr. Held believes they absorbed some cholin splitter into their systems.

Medical science has not passed on the "secret" to long life, so most of us will suspend judgment and keep on absorbing our cholin until such time as those fitted by technical knowledge and experience come to some conclusion about the merit of the serum.

But the prospect of living to be six hundred years old has something that recommends itself, even though the means by which such an end is to be attained can not be regarded as very tenable.

EARLY XMAS BUYING.

This is a good time for the first call for Christmas buying. The merchants of Boone county have already splendid stocks of merchandise admirably adapted for Christmas gifts. The people who begin their holiday and winter shopping now, and get it mostly out of the way before the big rush starts in December, will do their purchasing under the most comfortable conditions.

They will get the very cream of the stocks, and have a chance at everything before the crowd has picked things over. There will never be any better chance to buy than right now.

Store clerks have time now when they can talk with customers and help them make the very best selections. In that way customers get the benefit of the judgment of the store people, and are in a position to learn what kind of stuff will give the best service and be most in accordance with modern styles and ideas.

SAVING THE COUNTRY

Once more the country has been saved.

We as a people do it every four years. It's a habit we have that was formed when our forefathers decided and made it a matter of record that we should go to the polls the first Tuesday every fourth year and elect a president.

So, regularly, as prescribed by the basic law, we go about the business seriously. Of course, not everyone agrees on how the country should be saved.

At times disagreements of a grave nature arise. Neighbors and friends cease speaking. They belong in different camps, both working for the same objective but along divergent lines.

Each honestly believes that his course is the right one and to the interests of the people. Each has a burning conviction that if the other side wins, the nation would be ruined.

Thus the saving of the country is accomplished every four years. Each time, few of the consequences that are predicted by the other side come to pass.

We all get back on speaking terms again and peace and harmony is restored.

The guiding star of America's destiny leads on. Not many calamities have come upon us. From them all we have recovered to carry on. Political campaigns will come and go, but the nation will live on, proud of its heritage, strong in its union and powerful among other nations of the world as an influence for good.

THE PUMPKIN PIE.

The season of the exquisite homemade pumpkin pie is at hand. The kind you find in restaurants are fair—but the variety that tickle your fancy, and your palate and your stomach, all at the same time, and as long as there's a last mouthful left, is the old-fashioned, home-made kind.

Indiana brags of its buckwheat cakes and sausage, Baltimore speaks with bristled breath of its oysters and sea food, and Iowa of her prairie chickens, Boston her beans, Portland, Me., her clams, El Paso her hot tamales, Los Angeles its fruit, Illinois its onions and pork, Ohio and Vermont their maple syrup. New York to cheese—almost every city and town in the Union brags of something "that is best" there than anywhere else in the world, but the golden, glorious pumpkin pie knows no state, no locality; it belongs to all of us alike.

There's no more eat down-right democracy in the pumpkin pie than in any other product of the fields.

But it must be done right if justice is to be done. A master's hand must build it, build lovingly and with wisdom. None must approach the making without due reverence and homage. The hand of the queen who stirs the milk and pumpkin, the butter and the flour, the sugar and the spices together must be a lady's hand, and the face that bends over it must wear a smile. Some of the maker's personality must be put into the pie in the shape of smiles and sunshine, else it will be a failure, and no failure is quite so bad as the failure of the pumpkin pie.

PARALYTIC STROKE

Miss Lucy Gaines, daughter of the late Oscar Gaines, who resides on the Burlington and Bullittsville road about two miles north of Burlington, suffered a stroke of paralytic last Saturday, and is in a serious condition.

The Sheriff's office has been a busy place the last two weeks. As the penalty goes on all delinquents December 1, people have been busy paying their taxes.

MRS. MOLLIE KENDALL

PASSES AWAY AT HER HOME IN WALTON, IN HER 83 YEARS.

Mrs. Mollie E. Kendall, aged 82 years and six months, widow of John A. Kendall, died at her home in Walton, Friday morning, Nov. 14, 1924, after an extended illness of diseases incident to advanced age.

Mrs. Kendall was born on Gunpowder creek about two miles south of Burlington, and was a daughter of Jonathan Utz. She was married to John A. Kendall in 1865, who preceded her to the great beyond, Nov. 14, 1881. She was the mother of three children, Cora, who died in 1883; Mrs. Edith Rouse, with whom she made her home in Walton, and Clem Kendall, of Florence. Besides her children she is survived by one sister, Mrs. Emily Berkshire, who resides on the Bellevue place near Burlington, who was celebrating her 91st birthday when the news of her sister's death was received; one brother, Henry, who is somewhere in the west, a number of nephews and nieces, and a host of friends.

Mrs. Kendall for many years lived on the farm now owned by Leslie McMullen. After the death of her husband she moved to Burlington, where she lived until about twenty years ago, when she moved to Walton where she lived until the final summons.

After a short funeral service conducted at the home by Rev. W. H. Cardwell, pastor of the Walton M. E. church at 10 o'clock Sunday morning, the remains were brought to Burlington and laid to rest by the side of her husband and daughter in the family lot in the old cemetery just north of town.

We extend them a hearty welcome and feel sure that that we will be drawn closer together in friendship because of their generous offer. Special trucks will meet a large delegation at the bus line in Florence and bring them to Burlington. The public is cordially invited to join us in welcoming these folks. The program will be held on the campus, the weather being agreeable, but if not, it will be held in the school house.

DOUBLE ANNIVERSARY.

CELEBRATED LAST SUNDAY BY MR. AND MRS. R. S. COWEN OF BURLINGTON.

Mr. R. S. Cowen entered the 60th anniversary class last Saturday, the 15th, when he reached the eightieth mile one in the journey of life. It was also the twenty-fifth anniversary of his marriage to his present wife, formerly Miss Lucy Rice, of New York. The dual celebration was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Cowen last Sunday, in Burlington, with about thirty relatives present, including Mr. Moses Rice, Mrs. Perry Rice, Miss Emma Rice and Shelby Rice, of Covington, and Mr. and Mrs. Grover Snyder, of Madison, Indiana.

Mr. Cowen is an exceptionally active man for his age and, judging by appearances, will live to see many other such occasions.

Tuesday saw Burlington's independent basketball team emerge victorious in a three game series with Hebron. The score was 44 to 12. This gives Burlington two games out of the three. It was hard to pick out an outstanding player for each team. Burlington used all nine of her men and put up a strong defensive and offensive game. It is to be hoped that the weather will permit many more games to be played.

GENERAL "CUT-OUT"

VOTED BY BURLEY LEAF DELEGATES FROM SIX STATES AT LEXINGTON.

That the 1925 Burley tobacco crop will certainly be "cut out" was positively and finally decided last Saturday by burley delegates from six states in convention assembled at Lexington.

From 800 to 1,000 growers were present when the meeting was called to order in the Woodland Auditorium by Chairman Land, of Kentucky. Speaker after speaker spoke favorably for a "cut out."

Then, just as the secretary was instructed to call the roll, Clarence LeBus, of Cynthiana, a figure in Burley history, gained the floor. He was continuously heckled and interrupted, but was finally allowed to talk. He spoke in opposition to the "cut out."

When Mr. LeBus finished the roll call was resumed, with 93 per cent of the delegates voting for a "cut out." A motion was made to make the vote unanimous, but Garrard county, Kentucky alone remained seated on a rising vote.

The states represented were Kentucky, Ohio, Tennessee, Missouri and West Virginia. These representatives of the Burley District, and they adopted the "cut out" resolutions with one county alone dissenting.

Resolution Adopted for Cut-out: The resolution in full as adopted follows:

Whereas, The Census Bureau at Washington on October 1, 1924, reports 428,000,000 pounds of burley leaf in the hands of the dealers and manufacturers; and

Whereas, The present crop is conservatively estimated at 250,000,000 pounds on hand; because of these figures, it appears that the growers of burley tobacco are unable to obtain a fair and reasonable profit over and above the cost of production of

Therefore, be it resolved: That we the delegates from the burley producing counties in Kentucky, Indiana, Ohio, Tennessee, Missouri and West Virginia, chosen by vote at public mass meetings in our respective States, pledge our counties not to grow any burley tobacco in 1925.

In addition to Mr. Land, representing the Kentucky delegation, the signers of the cut-out resolution were Henry L. White, chairman of the Ohio delegation; Quincy Gray, chairman of the Indiana delegation; Charles D. Hall, chairman of the Missouri delegation, and J. W. Bacon, chairman of the Tennessee delegation. The chairman of the West Virginia delegation was absent.

Judge E. C. O'Rear made a splendid speech during the meeting in which he incorporated a very convincing argument for the omission of a crop in 1925. He concluded his speech with the statement that "you will not be able to sustain the pool unless you enable your managers to sell at a fair price."

Dr. Yeaton was called and he pronounced it an attack of appendicitis. Mr. Hall was rushed to Christ's hospital, Cincinnati, Sunday afternoon about 3 o'clock, and was operated on about 5 o'clock. He rallied from the operation nicely and from last reports was doing nicely. It is to be hoped that the weather will permit many more games to be played.

THE MAGIC OF THE FUTURE.

Can you imagine by what magic a farmer could go to bed at night and wake up in the morning to find that his fields had been plowed without the aid of either human hand or team?

You probably can't, because it is beyond human conception, but B. C. Forbes, widely known economic writer and editor, says that it is neither a dream nor fairy tale.

Electricity, he says, will make this seeming witchery reality, because this is only one aim of a movement now in progress to revolutionize farming. Co-operation, Mr. Forbes emphasizes, between electric companies, their inventive geniuses and the farmers will enable the farmer to plow while he sleeps.

Such a development seems far away, but in the light of progress that has been made, it may be closer than anyone imagines.

THE SCHOOL AS A SOCIAL CENTER

The small town school should be a social center. Such a school located in an outlying village can be a wonderful help to a scattered neighborhood, creating new sources of enjoyment and friendship among many people who previously had been too isolated.

Also the town school located in a country center can furnish social enjoyments that will add to the advantages of the community. The people who have children in the schools have a common interest and they should know each other better. If they could be assembled once a month for entertainments, socials, and picnics according to season, it would promote better support of the schools, encourage the teachers, make the teaching job in this community seem more interesting, and wake up the children to realize better the advantage of the education they are getting.

WELCOME

Only five weeks until Christmas.

B. B. Allphig, of Cincinnati, was a business visitor to Burlington, last Friday evening.

Miss Sallie Rogers visited friends and relatives at Walton, Saturday night and Sunday.

John L. Jones, of Big Bone, was transacting business at the county seat, last Thursday.

L. D. McClason, of Taylorport, was doing business at the Court House, last Thursday.

John Rogers, of Bellevue, shipped a nice lot of fat hogs to the Cincinnati market, last week.

Next Thursday is Thanksgiving, and both of the banks will be closed, it being a legal holiday.

Mrs. B. C. Graddy, of Bullittsville neighborhood, was transacting business in Burlington, Monday.

Ira Aylor and son Hollie, of near Union, were transacting business in Burlington, Friday afternoon.

Mrs. H. W. Shearer and daughter, Helen Hall, spent the week-end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Hall.

Mr. James Smith, of Union neighborhood, was a business visitor to Burlington, on Wednesday of last week.

Election day has passed, the nation will live—and that that. Now let us give thanks and get ready for Christmas.

Turkeys are selling at 25 to 27 cents a pound on foot, which indicates that we will have no Thanksgiving turkey.

The Taylorsport Mother's Club will give an Oyster Supper and Dance at the school house on the evening of Nov. 28th.

Nov 26th

LOST—At the foot ball game at Burlington Nov. 17th, dark sweater. Finder please leave at D. R. Blythe's store, James Robt. Huey Petersburg, Ky.

C. L. Gaines as executor of the estate of Mrs. Fannie Snyder, will have a public sale of her household effects at her late residence in Petersburg, Saturday afternoon, Nov. 22nd. See adv. in this issue.

It may interest you to know that while walking with Mr. W. C. Weaver in the north end of town, a few days since, we saw Mr. Weaver pluck a hollyhock in full bloom from Mrs. Charles McKim's yard. Something very unusual for this time of year.

Wallace Cleveland, one of Burlington's oldest colored citizens, was badly bruised, last Wednesday evening, when a blind horse he was riding walked off of a bridge on Wool creek near B. R. Aylor's. The horse and rider fell a distance of about ten feet into the creek below, and fortunately, both escaped serious injury.

Nine boys and girls, the pick among 20,000 club members, the "cream" of Kentucky youth, will attend the International Live Stock Exposition in Chicago Nov. 30-Dec. 6, as a reward for their interest in better farming and home-making practices, as shown in their club work, according to T. R. Bryant, assistant director of the College of Agriculture extension service.

We are not worrying about turkey for Thanksgiving Day. If we have green enough for fried potatoes, and bread to crumble in the coffee, we shall have cause to be thankful and acknowledge our dependence upon the Compassionate Omnipotent who has supplied us with all of which we are worthy and with abundantly more than we rightly deserve.

Mrs. Maggie Clarkson, of near Union, was a visitor to Burlington, last Wednesday afternoon. Mrs. Clarkson had just returned from a visit with her aunt, Mrs. Mary Lancaster, a former Boone county citizen, at Mt. Washington, Ohio, who has passed her eighty-second birthday, and is still enjoying good health. Her daughter, Miss Edith, is assistant cashier of a bank at that place.

History will be made in the Methodist Episcopal church in Ohio and Kentucky next week when more than 4,000 men from the churches of these two states will convene at Memorial Hall at Columbus, Ohio for the sessions of the Methodist Men's Council, a gathering expected to inaugurate a new day in the men's church activities of the Cincinnati area of the church, which comprises the entire territory in both states.

The pastor of a M. E. church in Binghamton, N. Y., kicked up a real row when he asserted that "the average daily newspapers were not worth more than 15 minutes of a Christian reader's time." One news paper offered to give the church $1,000 if he would run the paper just one day. As a rule there are no better judges of newspapers than the publishers themselves—but they are not in business to promote "ideals."

One night last week a couple of the town's best citizens were telling stories about black snakes at one of the grocery stores. One of them told this story:

He said he killed a large black snake on his farm one day and noticed a large lump on the snake he decided to cut it open, when he found that it had swallowed a full grown rabbit. One fellow who was listening asked if the rabbit was still alive but he received no answer. It is claimed that a colored fellow who was present said that the rabbit ran away. Said he fu-ew.

Excepting one or two sprinklers the forty-five days drought that had prevailed in this section, was broken in this part of the country the latter part of last week with nice showers of rain, affording much relief and causing the farmers, replenishing the cisterns and branches, many of which were as dry as powder horn, and relieving the danger of forest fires that might have been caused by careless hunters that were expected to invade the fields in quest of game on Saturday, the first day of the hunting season. About two o'clock Saturday morning rain began falling, and continued until about 7 o'clock, putting a "damper" over the earth and on the army of hunters that caused a cessation of that song, "Oh, it ain't no rain no mo", and also saved the life of many a cotton-tail.

Believing in the educational value of good pictures of livestock, the United States Department of Agriculture is distributing a series of 14 pictures prepared especially for school use. Specialists in the Bureau of Animal Industry report that this series has met with an unusual demand. Pupils who are familiar with types of improved livestock as shown in the pictures, naturally attempt to bring about improvement of their farm animals on their home farms. Moreover, instructors find the pictures useful in improving the appearance of classrooms.

The dual purpose which such educational material fills is illustrated by a recent request from the agricultural department of a Maine High School. The instructor requests a set of the various farm animals which would be of value for classroom instruction as well as to cover the bare walls of the agricultural room.

Contrary to the view of a great many Boone county taxpayers the penalty will be added after December first this year and the same rule will apply next year.

The law enacted by the Kentucky General Assembly at the last session does not affect this year's next year's taxes. This law provides for the penalty to go on March first in stead of December first.

The first year to be affected will be 1925 and the taxes for that year will not be subjected to a penalty until March, 1926.

The Sheriff's office reports that taxes are coming in very slowly, probably due to the fact that most taxpayers are short of money at this season of the year. The new law was enacted in order to give growers of tobacco an opportunity to deliver their tobacco before the penalty is put on.

A very interesting program has been arranged for Tuesday afternoon, Nov. 26th.
At 1:30 Mr. S. C. Jones from the University of Kentucky will speak on the Use of Limestone in Soil Building. Mr. Jones has been in this county on several occasions testing Rock with our former county agent, W. D. Sutton and has many friends here. His subject should be very timely since Mr. Matson has arranged to get the state line pulver here next spring as mentioned in another article in this paper.

At 2:30 p. m., Mr. Ralph Kinney will speak on the Value of Alfalfa and other legumes. With the aid of lime, alfalfa is a very profitable crop and will undoubtedly be sown on many Kentucky acres if the tobacco cut out is put across. Mr. Kinney is also from the University and was one of the speakers at the show last year. He will also judge the corn show.

At 3:30 Miss Myrtle Weldon of the Department of Home Economics will speak on "What the Department of Home Economics has in store for the Farm Women." She is a very able speaker and will outline the new program which she and her staff will put across in Kentucky.
3:30 several reels of Educational movies.

All entries for the show must be placed for exhibit not later than Monday evening at 4 p. m., Nov. 24th except the ladies exhibits which are to be in place by 10 a. m., Tuesday Nov. 25th.

Very attractive ribbons will be given this year. They were given by the John R. Copplin Company, Covington.

M. E. SOCIAL.

The Ladies of the M. E. Sunday School entertained about 40 guests last Monday night at the home of Mrs. O. S. Edina. After an evening of joyful entertainment, a lovely lunch was served, and needless to say, heartily enjoyed.

Since the organization of the M. E. Sunday school about two years ago, it has grown steadily, due to the untiring efforts of the leaders, who were the founders. They never wait for originality in entertainment.

Ira Rawlings of Covington, who was convicted of violating the liquor laws some time ago, paid his fine of $200 and executed a bond of $1,000 that he would not violate the prohibition laws of Kentucky for one year.

Is your DeLaval separator in good running order?

If it isn't, then you may be losing butter-fat and shortening the life of the machine, and ninety-nine times out of a hundred it isn't the fault of the machine but due to the fact that it needs attention, adjustment, cleaning, or the replacement of some part.

Bring in your De Laval Separator to us and we will put it in first-class running order. Bring in the complete machine, and in order to save expense clean out the oil chamber and gears with kerosene or boiling water. You can do this just as well as we can.

COUNTY COURT CLERK

We are authorized to announce
NEWTON SULLIVAN, JR.
 as a candidate for County Court
 Clerk of Boone County, subject to the action of the Democratic Primary Election, August 1st, 1925.

"Keep cool with Coolidge." The country is certainly keeping cool even though there be a few hot spots.

In the United States it is a long, long road to a labor government—convincing evidence of lack of business ability.

An analysis of the vote cast at the recent election in this county indicates that all the scratching was not left to the "rooster."

France has just opened the highest radio station in the world. It is located on the Pic du Midi observatory and is 10,000 feet high.

During the past three years 31 motor car manufacturers have dropped out of the race leaving 351 at the beginning of the present year.

If we believed that some of our politicians tell us about our country, we would turn the key in the office door and take passage for the South Sea Islands tomorrow.

Some men who claim women should remain at home and not dabble with politics, would not probably object if they dabbled in business and earned some money.

Chicago proposes to construct a great underground garage under Grant Park, large enough to park 12,000 cars. The estimated cost is $8,000,000, and the question will be voted on in February. It seems to be the only practical solution for relieving the congestion in the downtown district.

Short courses in marketing and cooperation and dairying will be offered by the College of Agriculture at Lexington in January. During the week of Jan. 12-17, all phases of practical farm dairying will be considered for the benefit of farmers already engaged in dairying, or contemplating keeping cows for the sale of milk or butterfat.

Only a few years ago the Standard Oil Company increased its capital to $20,000,000 and acquired "the title of octopus." The other day the Central Banking Corporation, was chartered in Maryland with a capital of $500,000,000. It is a combination of a dozen mergers including several of the largest banking companies in the nation. It is not probable the price of bread will be reduced.

For the fiscal year ending July 1, 1920, the State and Federal governments tested in Kentucky 11,579 cattle compared with 77,347 animals examined the year ending June 15, 1924. From July 1, 1919 to July 1,
 1924, representatives of the State Live Stock Sanitary Board and the United States Bureau of Animal Industry have tested 226,499 cattle and condemned 3,654 because they had tuberculosis. Think of it—nearly 4,000 deaths of animals, a majority of which had been furnished with milk, cream and butter to our people.

In order to stimulate interest in the keeping of farm records a contest has been arranged by the Kentucky College of Agriculture for counties performing the best work in the keeping of farm accounts.

A total of $350, contributed by the Farmers Home Journal, Louisville, will be distributed among the winning counties. The first prize is $100, the second prize $75, the third prize $50, with seven smaller prizes.
 The contest will begin March 1, 1925, and end Feb. 28, 1926. Record books will be provided by the college and county agents will supervise the contest; in counties having agents in other counties leaders will be appointed by T. R. Bryant, assistant director of the College of Agriculture extension service.

Business is business, says the economist. But business without the added touch of humanity would be a most unendurable and on that foundation some good advocate could have a plea for the neighborhood store.

Too often do we hear the people of the small town or suburb say,
 "The Jones store stock is so limited,
 I don't bother to look for what I want there. I'll have to send to the mail order house." They forget that Mr. Jones was asked for that article very often he would have it in his store. Nor do they realize that after all Jones can sell them more than just the mere goods, that every purchase in his store pays a dividend of service to the community.

If they do not patronize their town store they cannot expect it to build itself into an asset to the town or to consider their interests in the town.

In hard times it is not the mail order house or the city department store that extends credit; it is the neighborhood storekeeper who provides food and clothing and takes the chance that he may collect when prosperity returns. It pays to help those who serve us.

Defeat of Senator Stanley brought the keenest regret to Democrats and even many of those who voted against him did not enjoy seeing him go down in the Democratic disaster in Kentucky. Whatever his enemies may have charged against Senator Stanley no one ever questioned his integrity, his courage and his ability. Had he possessed less courage he might have been more easily successful as a politician, but he never trimmed his sails for favor. No one ever has had to wonder where he stood on any question. He is fearless to a degree and delights in facing a hostile audience or meeting a dangerous situation.

Although he is famous in Kentucky as a ready campaign speaker of the kind that the Kentuckians delight to hear, Senator Stanley also is known as a profound student—one of the real scholars of the Senate.
 Because he affects nothing of the academic, he does not have as wide a reputation as his line as he deserves. An omnivorous reader, thoroughly grounded, he possesses a remarkable fund of information and his most classic opponents in the Senate found that he could hold his own with them.

Senator Stanley will not lack big opportunities. He has received offers from two big law firms in New York and one in Chicago, but he has not yet decided what his plans will be.

Now that it has all happened and Kentucky has gone Republican again, the Democrats have been taking their mind off their defeat by figuring out how it came about.

That LaFollette and the Klan were powerful factors is not to be denied.
 The size of their votes may not have been so impressive by themselves, but the way they cut left a tremendous effect.

The LaFollette vote was about 35,000. The Socialist vote never has reached more than 10,000, so counting this in for LaFollette at least 25,000 more were drawn from the Democratic and Republican ranks.
 The Enquirer straw vote indicated and the belief of politicians is that this was a 3-to-1 Democratic vote. This means an 18,000 to 6,000 division of the 25,000 LaFollette votes. In other words, the majority by which the Democrats lost the state almost can be accounted for in the LaFollette vote.

The Klan vote was damaging to the Democrats. It was powerful in Stanley's own district, the Second in the Seventh and the Eighth Henderson, Pendleton and Mercer counties went Republican for the first time in history.

Democratic leaders knew the Klan strength in the Second and Eighth Districts, but in the Seventh it had been successfully concealed, and there was consternation among the Democrats when the 18,000 nominal majority there was cut to 8,000.
 Both the men and women Chairmen of the Democratic organizations came from this district, and the fact that Judge Wilson and Mrs. Borne were not aware of the strength of the Klan in their own district shows how well masked the vote was.

Democratic county leaders tried to hold the Klan Democrats in line with threats to debar members who scratched or deserted the ticket from participation in the Democratic primary election next year and by refusal to place any of their members on county tickets. This plan failed to work, and it will give an interesting angle to the primary election races next year. Klan and anti-Klan politics may supersede all others in many counties next year as they did in Shelby this year, where a contest over the commission form of government, intended to break the Klan power, shattered the Presidential and Senatorial election and the road bonds.

The Klan opposition was exceptionally damaging to Stanley, who had picked up a lead of 10,000 over Davis in the Sixth District. The Klan vote and the opposition of the Anti-Saloon League in the dry counties almost nullified the advantage Stanley gained in the populous centers.

County leaders notified Democratic state headquarters Wednesday before the election that the Klan was winning operation against the Democratic ticket, spurred to action by the repeated speeches against the Klan made by Davis in the last week of the campaign.

While the election result was a shock to the Democrats, it was a surprise to the Republicans as well. The conservative Republican belief was that Coolidge had a chance to carry the state, but that Sackett would lose. As Stanley ran 4,000 ahead of Davis, this attitude was justified on the expectation of a close election.

Senator-elect Sackett has a remarkable record in one respect. He was elected to office the first time he ever ran, and that office was the U.
 S. Senate. Never until the Republican leaders persuaded Mr. Sackett to make the race against John Beth-un, for the Republican nomination, had he thought of public office.
 He has the satisfaction of qualifying as a stake horse at his first start.

Mr. Sackett is 55 years old. He was educated at Brown and Harvard and went to Columbia, where he practiced law from 1913 to 1918. In 1918 he married Miss Olive Speed, daughter of J. B. Speed, millionaire capitalist, of Louisville, and moved here, where he has practiced law and engaged in business since. He was Federal Fuel Administrator of Kentucky during the war, has been President of the Board of Trade and a leader in the State Bar Association. The Democrats lost the race in their own strongholds, such counties as Kenton, Fayette, Jessamine and Henderson, but the Republicans had surprises in their own bailiwicks that would have been just as unpleasant had they not been offset elsewhere. For example, the Fifth, Tenth and Eleventh Districts went Republican by 71,000 in 1920, when Harding lost the state by 4,000. This year these districts gave G. O. P. majorities of only 34,000, a loss of 37,000, yet the Republicans carried the state by more than 20,000.

GASOLINE SETTLES IT

A writer in a metropolitan newspaper takes the position that gasoline has forever settled the prohibition amendment, including the Volstead act.

His logic is good, in the light of the facts. There are more than five million registered automobiles, and motor trucks in the U. S. one for every seven persons.

Is there any sensible person who will admit that any one of these fifteen million drivers should be permitted to drink? We scarcely think so.

The motive engineer, who under the railroads and discipline of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, is not allowed to drink undertaking his duty, was never under any greater strain than the man who is driving an automobile in city traffic or on crowded country highway.

He needs a cool head, a clear eye and a steady hand to prosper. Not just his own life, but the lives of those who ride with him.

The power of the influence of public opinion is beginning to have its effect because at least half the people ride in automobiles and they are demanding that drivers of machines shall abstain from strong drink.

The influence for sobriety will grow with the development of the automobile and it is already expressing itself in more stringent laws to punish drunken drivers. More and more judges are sending to jail men who are caught driving automobiles who are intoxicated.

Gasoline is undoubtedly going to settle the prohibition question for all time.

REDUCING RAILROAD COSTS

The figures of railroad operation for September show that while the income was one per cent under the corresponding expenses last year, the operating costs were eight per cent lower. This was partly due to reduction of maintenance expenses, but not wholly so.

The railroads protest against the public demand for lower freight charges, and say that even now they are not earning a fair dividend. It would help their position wonderfully with the public if they could get their operating costs down so that they could be placed on a secure financial basis, and permit the freights on certain farm products to come down. It would help a lot to accomplish these ends, if railway managements and employees could work together enthusiastically and harmoniously to bring railroad operation to the height of efficiency.

The peril of monoxide gas and the increasing number of deaths from it, coupled with the fact that winter time will greatly increase this menace through the operation of automobiles in tightly closed garages, has resulted in a state-wide warning being issued today by Dr.
 A. T. McCormack, secretary of the State Board of Health.

The highly poisonous nature of the gas, which is colorless, tasteless and odorless, is due to its great affinity for the blood, according to Dr. McCormack who further explains in technical terms. It has a far greater affinity for the hemoglobin of the blood than oxygen—the hemoglobin attracting carbon monoxide about 200 times as strong as oxygen.

The poison attacks insidiously, gradually causing the victim to lose consciousness and even though the victim may become aware of the danger, he is often unable to escape because of the great loss of power to move.

Dr. McCormack explained that the ratio of 15 parts of monoxide to 10,000 parts of air is a highly dangerous mixture and often fatal. Test shows that twenty-five of gas per minute discharged by a 23 horsepower motor will contain an average of 6 per cent carbon monoxide or 1.5 cubic feet. In this proportion, it is figured that the same sized engine will poison to the danger point the air of a garage 10 by 10 by 20 feet within three minutes.

VOYAGE OF COLUMBUS TO BE BROADCAST FROM MEXICAN STATION

That one of the results of International Radio Week, scheduled for the week of November 24-30 will be the cementing of the Old World with the New, is the confident prediction of F. J. Oro, Director of Station C.I.C. Mexico City, who said in a letter made public at the offices of "Radio Broadcast" that that station was preparing to broadcast for the benefit of listeners in Spain an account of the voyage of Columbus.
 This broadcasting will be done in Spanish, thus adding a program in another language to the several already promised radio fans for that week.

LEGION NOTES

Washington, D. C.—World War veterans eligible for adjusted compensation are not applying for the benefits of the act in expected volume, according to Maj. Gen. Robert C. Davis, adjutant general of the army, who has issued a call to The American Legion and other organizations to expedite the filing of claims by every means possible.

When the Adjusted Compensation
 Bill became a law, The American Legion opened filing bureaus in most of the posts throughout the country where Legion officials urged and helped many thousands of veterans to fill out their applications and file them in Washington. Service officers of the Legion have been advised that on January 1, 1925 the U. S. Veterans' Bureau will release through the mails approximately 1,000,000 federal adjusted compensation certificates, or insurance policies to World War veterans. On March 1, 1925, the Bureau will also release a large number of checks covering cash payment to veterans whose compensation is $50 or less or covering the first installment to dependents, settlement of the amount of adjusted service credit being due with the latter in ten quarterly payments.

Approximately 1,500,000 veterans have submitted application, of which all but some 50,000 have been examined and either acted upon or returned by the Bureau for correction. Of the 1,500,000 applications gone over up to date, about 300,000 were found incomplete, principally because veterans either forgot to sign their names or to include their finger prints, which is required on all applications.

WHAT BECAME OF THE VOTE?

There are some things about this recent election in Kentucky which are hard to explain and for which no adequate explanation is as yet forthcoming.

In the first place John W. Davis although presumably strong in Kentucky, lost the State by a healthy majority, while Gov. Cox carried the State four years before. But even more inexplicable is the tremendous decline in the vote in Kentucky in 1924 as compared to 1920. Unquestionably the State has grown during the past four years, and in addition, we had this year the State bond issue to arouse public interest. And yet the total vote decreased at least 125,000.

Of course, the worst of the consequences of the decrease fell upon the Democrats. Four years ago, Gov. Cox, the Democratic nominee for President, polled 456,000 votes in Kentucky, and this year Mr. Davis, using round numbers, polled 364,000.
 Here is a falling off of 92,000 votes

What became of them? LaFollette got some of them, but not to say so many as that. LaFollette's total votes in the state was only 34,000. Before the LaFollette movement was ever heard of the Socialists were able to poll more than 10,000 votes in the State. A few of the LaFollette votes came from the Republican column; if we decide that the LaFollette movement drew away 20,000 Democratic votes, we still find Mr. Davis polling 72,000 less votes in 1924 than did Governor Cox in 1920.

And these votes did not go to the Republicans. The Republicans, too, suffered a heavy loss as compared to 1920. Mr. Coolidge carries the state by a good margin, but he only polled 387,000 votes in Kentucky as against 452,000 for Mr. Harding four years ago. Here is a loss on the Republican side of 65,000. Democrats and Republicans lost heavily as compared to 1920. The Democrats lost more, and therefore, lost the State. This is what the figures show, but the reason for those figures is hidden in mystery.

One theory that we hear frequently advanced is that the vote of the women is declining in Kentucky. We have no sure way of checking this up, but believe there is something in it. When voting was a novelty the women turned out in our State in large numbers, there is now a good deal of evidence to support the statement that, as the novelty dies out, the vote of the women diminishes.
 We cannot believe, however, that this is anything but temporary. Women are citizens, and they must vote in the future.

 cades, and still we hear some following complaining about race suicide.

In Sweater Coats
Style Is Emphasized

In fashion's school sweaters and sweater coats used to stand quietly at the foot of the class in dress accessories. But they have made rapid advancement in the last few years, and now dispute with other apparel for a place at the head. In the old days to be competent and comfortable seemed their sole ambition, but now their eyes are fixed on distinction, style and beauty as the goals to be striven for.

Advance showings of cheerful winter-sport clothes show sweaters and sweater coats as numerous as the flowers of the field and equally alluring. There is need and to the varieties of wearing and ornamentation, and some of them have scarfs to match in color but in lace-knit patterns. For instance, an orchid-colored slip-on sweater, bordered with narrow bands of purple, has a wide, lacy scarf finished with the same bands at the ends.
 The cozy sweater coat shown in the picture is of brushed wool in warm beige color bordered with white braid and white wool.

"SAVVY"

The Spanish are very particular. They have a verb "saber," meaning to know, while the verb
 "conocer" means "knowing acquaintances." It is a serious breach of grammar to confuse the two. "Savvy" is a corruption of "saber" brought in from Mexico over the border. When you ask someone, "do you savvy?" some think you are using a bit of slang of Spanish-Mexican descent.

Thomas Nelson Perkins

There is a report that Thomas Nelson Perkins of Boston may be invited to fill a vacancy on the reparations commission to represent the United States. He is a lawyer and a brother of James H. Perkins, New York banker.

Illinois carried a $100,000,000 bond issue by 800,000, while Kentucky defeated a $75,000,000 by 80, 000. Yet the Illinois road system is in much better condition and nearer complete than the road system in Kentucky.

IT MAKES A DIFFERENCE

It is not uncommon for people to remark that "it makes no difference what others think." But it does make a difference—a big difference.

A community is a collection of people.

This state is a collection of cities, towns, villages and surrounding countryside.

This country is nothing more than a collection of sovereign states welded together in a single and central government for their own protection and advancement.

The government is dependent upon the states, the states are dependent upon their cities, towns and rural sections, and all of these divisions are dependent upon the people, in whose hands rests the future of them all.

So it does make a difference what others think, because upon their thoughts, which is the basis for their actions, depends whatever course the nation will take.

If you and the "other people" think constructively and always have in mind the interests of your community, you will be better citizens, which is the only way the local community, the state and the nation can keep on advancing.

Although we were defeated we are not discouraged, for we know that great things often have small beginnings. Our boys have learned first how to accept defeat cheerfully.

"RAGTIME"
One of the most distracting periods for the neighborhood is the open window season while the neighbor's daughter is learning to play "ragtime." "Ragtime" is short for "ragged time" and originally was used as an adjective. It once was applied to the melodies sung and played by the southern negroes.

NO STATE MONEY FOR BOONE COUNTY ROADS

County Judge N. E. Riddell has received a letter from the State Highway Commission, which states that it would be useless for a delegation to appear before the commission seeking to have any other roads in Boone county taken over by the State at this time, because there is no state money available for taking on new projects, but that when the commission has these funds we would be notified.

Yet, during the bond campaign, we were told by our "Pay-as-you-go" friends, that bonds were not necessary. However, when it comes to the crucial test we find that bonds are necessary, or road work must be delayed.

B. H. S. NOTES.

Iron Independent team came over Nov. 11th and played basket ball with Burlington Independent boys. They were home defeated, the score being 44-12.

Professor Well was at the school house again Wednesday and we have several taking part in our orchestra. Mr. Rigo also made us a call last Thursday to sell us the instruments necessary for our orchestra.

Our three basket ball teams went to Hamilton Friday. Our boys won with a score of 18-8, Albert Kirkpatrick making ten of our points. Our girls also won with a score of 10 to 6, Catherine Huey getting three of the goals. For about the first time our second team of boys were defeated 14-10. This is the first game they have lost in Boone Co.

We observed from the Union school notes in last week's Recorder that that school had the audacity to claim the basket ball championship of Boone county. We are willing to give credit to whom credit is due and we should like to remind our friends in Union that Burlington is still in Boone county and hasn't been defeated, in that county, this year.

THE FARMER'S DEMAND

A recent writer in the New York Times, describing farm conditions in the northwest, pictures the typical farmer as making this remark:

"Something's wrong with the system that entitles a man to move out of his home, to work for eight hours a day in town than for working 14 hours a day in the country and investing thousands of dollars for the privilege."

Perhaps this may be an exaggeration. It is hard to believe that the average store clerk comes out as well in the long run as the average farmer. However, the farmer is in a position calling for both brains and capacity for systematic work. If a man lacks these qualities, he would do better to go in for some calling that requires a little less of intelligence.

Still there has been reason for the farmer's complaint. But how shall such conditions be prevented in the future? It will be well for the farmer to reflect that the wages paid in factories and stores were largely the result of organization. The workers in those lines got together and refused to work for less than certain amounts.

The prices put up the prices of the commodities on which they worked, so that often these products would not sell, and the employees had to lie idle. Still there seems but little doubt that organization has helped the wage earning classes on the whole, though they need to look out that by arbitrary insistence on unreasonable demands they do not do themselves more harm than good.

To hold his own in this highly organized economic system, the farmer must have equally good organization. He will be hopelessly left behind if he tries to play the lone hand. He needs not merely political organization, which will be helpful to some extent, but still more a business and selling organization, so that he shall gain something of the same power that labor has in selling its products.

GAINES-EBBANK

Miss Mable Gaines of Petersburg, Ky., and W. Ryle Ebbank of this county, were married at the Gaines home in Petersburg Sunday.

His character and reputation is of the highest type which coupled with industry makes a most desirable citizen. He has been engaged in the mercantile and farming business with his father at Brainerd and he will continue as a citizen of the county. It's A Go.

Boone County Schools to Have Movies.

Last Saturday a meeting was held in the court house at Burlington in which a committee of six cooperating with Mr. Matson arranged to purchase a Portable Motion Picture Machine. Those present at the meeting were A. B. Renaker, Prof. Gordon, Miss Beas Cropper, A. M. Yealey, W. B. Elder, Rev. R. H. Carter, E. F. Fish from the University of Kentucky and C. W. Durbin who demonstrated the machine before the audience.

The above committee is arranging to show motion pictures once each month in the different communities of Boone county. Their program will be along educational lines and will not take the part of or interfere with the movies now being shown.

They are planning to show reels of the school and other educational values along with some good comedies. The purpose of this program is to instill a bigger and better community interest and offer a new field of education to the boys and girls of the county.

Those representing the different communities are: Rev. R. H. Carter, Petersburg; Prof. A. M. Yealey, Florence; Prof. W. B. Elder, Union; Prof. C. W. Lucy, Hebron; Prof. W. L. Bowman, Verona. The Grant, Walton and Hamilton schools have also expressed a desire to be in the circuit and will undoubtedly sign up in the near future. Arrangements are being made in which any other communities can get in on the program.

Prof. A. M. Yealey and our County Agent have ordered the machine and it will probably be in the county ready for use by the latter part of this week.

Similar propositions are being worked in other counties in Kentucky and have proven very successful and of great value. If it proves as successful in this county as it has in others the committee will deserve much credit for their foresight and the way in which they are handling the undertaking.

T. E. DIXON, DEAD.

ANOTHER GOOD MAN GONE TO HIS REWARD. HEART TROU-BLE OF DEATH.

T. Everett Dixon, a well known citizen and farmer of the Richwood neighborhood, died at his home Thursday, Nov. 13th, 1924, of heart trouble. He was 61 years of age, and is survived by his widow, who was Miss Octavia Rouse, to whom he was married July 25, 1886, and four children, one son and three daughters. Funeral services were conducted at Hopeful church Saturday morning, Nov. 15th, by Rev. Royer, after which the remains were laid in the vault at that place.

Everett Dixon for many years lived at Limsburg; he was a good citizen and neighbor who was ever considerate of the welfare of his fellowman. His hospitality and genial nature made him a popular friend who deeply regret to hear of his death. His widow and children have the sympathy of a host of friends in this part of the county in the loss of a kind husband and loving father.

STATE LIME PULVER TO COME TO BOONE COUNTY.

At last the State Lime Pulver has been obtained for use in Boone county so that local farmers may obtain crushed Lime stone for agricultural purposes at nominal cost. This pulver was promised to Boone county more than four years ago, but has not been obtainable until this time.

After some effort by several of the local farmers and our County Agent the outfit has been secured, and Mr. Mout is proudly showing a letter from the State Department of Agriculture stating the crusher would be transported to Boone Co., and ready for use when spring weather opened up.

The State will furnish the crusher, tractor and a man to run the outfit. Some of the farmers who have obtained ground rock in this way have been able to put it on their acres for around 50 cents per ton. Some of the farmers are already piling rock to have in readiness for next winter and others who might become interested in this proposition should get in touch with Mr. Matson.

Union School Notes.

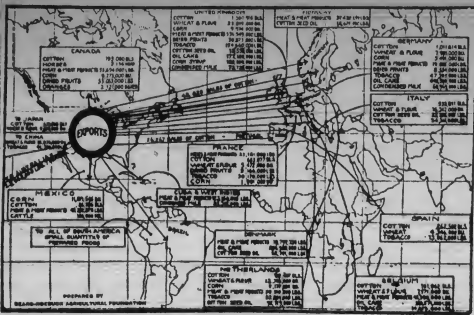

The Union first team basket ball players won the game with Petersburg at Petersburg, Nov. 11th, by a score of 24 to 7. They now feel themselves in trim to win the decisive game with Walton, on the Florence court Nov. 21st.

The old fashioned Spelling Bee in connection with the P. T. A. Friday night was thoroughly enjoyed. Miss Jane Bristol, former teacher in the Union school, was the winner.

Patrons of the school will meet at the school house Saturday Nov. 22nd with picks, shovels and plow to improve the playground.

Grant Williamson and wife were guests of Mauley Ryle and family, Tuesday.

Where U. S. Farm Products Go

Products of the American farm go to every civilized country of the world. Out of the United States each year is sent approximately one-half of the total cotton crop, one-fourth of the yield of the wheat fields, one-fifth of the porkers and huge quantities of corn and tobacco, dried fruits and other products of field and feed lot.

The accompanying chart, prepared by the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation, shows where the principal exports go.

In the United Kingdom more of America's farm exports are consumed than in any other nation. The United Kingdom uses more American cotton than any other country, her annual consumption averaging around 1,580,916 bales. Germany is in the market for almost as much cotton, using 1,011,814 pounds last year. The United Kingdom is the first market for American wheat and flour, tobacco, corn sirup and condensed milk. She also takes large quantities of dried fruits, oil cake, meat, meat products and corn.

Bright Outlook for Sheep

The sheep industry presents one of the bright spots in the present agricultural picture. According to the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation, but is still far from being back at wartime or pre-war figures. The United States produces only about 10 per cent of the world's total wool crop, but consumes 25 per cent of it. World production last year has been shrinking for four years and are now low. World production last year was 66 million pounds below the previous year.

The prices of both wool and lambs have been strong the past two years and the outlook for reasonable profits in sheep is excellent for several years to come.

There is less price variation due to quality in hogs than in any other animal in the live stock kingdom. Yet, quality speaks, even on the hog market, with top prices going to the smooth, plump porkers. According to the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation, during the past year choice fat-backs in the lightweight class on the Chicago market, averaging from 150 to 200 pounds, brought from 37 cents to $1.50 per hundred over common hogs of the same class. At the beginning of the year choice lightweights were selling 37 cents a hundred over the commons. Through February highest prices for lights were 51 cents over the low price. During March, April, May and June the spread narrowed only to widen again through July and August. In October top prices in the lightweight class were hovering around $10.00 while low quotations were two dollars less per hundred.

Butcher and bacon hogs are graded as choice, good and medium in the heavyweights, and choice, good, medium and common in other weights. Formerly there existed a grade known as prime, which possessed the maximum of condition, form and quality. At present it is extremely difficult to get this grade in the desired market weights. Choice hogs have the conformation and quality that are desired in prime hogs, but are not quite so well finished. Good pure bred sires are relatively cheap now and their use would insure higher quality litters next spring.

17 YEARS OF MEAT CONSUMPTION IN THE U.S.

More meat and lard was consumed per capita in 1924 than in any other year since 1908. This increase in consumption was primarily in pork and lard. According to the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation, in addition to providing the amount needed for domestic consumption, enough meat and lard was produced to export over two billion pounds, which is equivalent to about 18 pounds more per capita. As pork production is now being curtailed, the 1924 figure of meat consumption is not likely to be equaled in 1925.

HOW TO COMPLETE THANKSGIVING.

One of the greatest joys in the world is the knowledge of having done something for a less fortunate being.

The Bible teaches kindness, forgiveness, love and charity, but the greatest of these is the latter, and that noble sentiment is implanted in every man's heart.

There is no monopoly on charity, either. The rich and the poor alike can indulge, and it is doubtful if there is a more genuine pleasure than that derived from having rendered a helpful service to the man who is down.

There are many in Boone county who will perhaps require the touch of charitable hands—to whom a good dinner on Thanksgiving day will come as a blessing. It isn't the mere money that makes of charity the blessing that it is, it's the spirit back of it. The poor man's quarter will do almost as much good as the rich man's bank note.

The hospitality of a county is one of its greatest practical assets as a progressive community. It bubbles over with light heartedness, inspires confidence and hope and imparts to the recipient that indescribable satisfaction which makes him feel like "living again." I will increase energy, multiply productivity of hand and brain, inspire renewed vigor, confidence and loyalty to future interests and associations.

The characteristic of the good-natured and charitable man with the "glad hand," exercised within their legitimate spheres, are in reality the things that make life worth living, and do more than anything else to promote the "brotherhood of man."

OUR GREATEST INDUSTRY

The greatest industry in this country is now well under way, to continue for several months. It is one in which there are no strikes. It depends upon child labor, but its finished product is good citizenship. That industry is the American public school.

The American people, whose motto sometimes seems to be, "Let God do it," have a way of evading the responsibility for this great idealistic and practical enterprise, and leave it all to the teachers and the school executives.

They kick with great gusto when the high school graduate can't spell or write well. —Then the school, have failed in some other respect, yet they never ask themselves if the success of the undertaking does not depend in large part on home cooperation.

Teachers and school executives who have to contend with parental indifference, find that their plants turn out only an indifferent product. The success of the school operation can be greatly promoted and the children can be prepared for more useful futures if the school patrons will work with those in charge of the schools.

Teachers will testify that the best results are obtained when the school work is placed first and outside pleasures get secondary consideration. They will also bear witness to the fact that the best results are obtained when parents back up school discipline.

These are two things to keep in mind if we wish to accomplish the end in view—making useful citizens out of the boys and girls.

THANKSGIVING 1924

The whole world is beginning to emerge from the smoke and wreck of the Great War, a more hopeful spirit is pervading all nations. The world is growing better with signs of health and peace and prosperity, and there are grounds for thanksgiving on the part of all peoples.

This general outlook upon the world is one cause why we should join in thanksgiving unto the God of nations that in his goodness is leading the great human family to become increasingly conscious of its common life and needs and is rolling it through the shadow of the globe into a better day.

The year has been one of unmeasured prosperity and goodness. The harvests have reaped boundless fields of golden grain and our barns are full. Employment has been general and business has run at full tide. Peace has prevailed throughout all our borders, and no pestilence or great calamity has befallen us. It is of these material conditions and goods that we first think in connection with this day as it was originally observed with these things in view.

But there are deeper grounds for thanksgiving in the social and moral and spiritual life of our people. We need not be said that there are wide shadows of evil and some very black spots in our national life, but these are mostly such as are common to men. Really, America is sound to the core on the essentials of integrity and truth in our civil and moral life. There is no cleaner spot or more decent people on earth, and this is something to be thankful for, however much we have of which to be ashamed.

R. E. Berkshire attended the State vs. V. W. I. foot ball game at Lexington, last Saturday.

Some of the folks who gave up their farms when prices were low, will probably return and buy them back when prices have advanced.

AFTER THE ELECTION

(By Verne Prater)

Now that the election is over we will surely have good times from now on. As we were assured such by both sides, it didn't make much difference who was elected. We have the same president now as we had before the election, so we feel that times can not be any worse.

I do not believe that our government will do the volume of business during the next four years it did, the last four, as it hasn't as much to sell since they closed out all the oil and surplus stock. If the democrats had won, they wouldn't have found anything. After the Republicans got through, it's just like a flood hitting Key West—nothing left. The Republicans are a thrifty set. They get something to show that they have been there. I remember some one sent a Republican senator from here. He arrived up there late, and it took him like everything had been taken. A Democrat would have given up and come home, but not the Republican. He went up there for something, but there was nothing in sight on land or sea. So he went out on the ocean and dived and brought up part of the Maine, which now lies peacefully on the beautiful lawn of our city hall.

Show me a Democrat that has come out of Washington with anything worth while. They are too turn honest, lazy or ignorant to latch on to anything worth bringing home. I read in the paper where some Republican has sold enough government oil leases to give him more money than he could use. He gave some friend several thousand dollars without letting his friend know when and why he was giving it to him. Think of a friend like that. Just imagine waking up to find some one had placed several thousand to your credit and you not knowing why he did it. Oh boy! that's what I call pure love!

I'd go to the penitentiary with a friend like that. Of course, that may be what he had in mind, having a friend go along with him. No chance for him to go now; his side was elected. I'll bet that bird is out looking for greasy spots on government land so he can sell more oil leases. I don't believe the president knows anything about the oil business. Of course, he knows the oil is gone. No doubt he has missed the leases, but he thinks the janitor left the window open and they "blowed" out. If he knows he ain't going to tell. His lawyer advised him not to talk. He sure must have a hard boiled lawyer, for he sure ain't talking. That's the trouble with the Democrats—they talk too much. Wait until our grandfathers in good shape until some big talking Democrat went up to Washington and told the Republicans that we Democrats owned all the land and negroes in the south and we didn't have to work, we made the negroes do all the work? Didn't they come down here and persuade us to free the negro, so the negro could quit work, thinking we would all starve together? If we could have kept the negro, we wouldn't be working today. It would be today as it was then—the Republican and the negro would be the working class.

Doesn't history tell us that we had such a monopoly on work that one of our presidents had to spit his own nails? You don't hear of a president splitting nails now, do you? I should say not. He knows if he splits his own nails that some of his cabinet will haul them off and sell them while he is cutting down another tree. I tell you, it's not safe to have anything laying around loose up there. If I was a Democratic congressman or a senator I wouldn't take anything up there. I would wear tight breeches, lace top boots, a very short mustache and leave my false teeth at home.

I asked one of our congressmen if he was going to take his automobile up there. He has been up there once and he knows and he said "Not on your life!" I don't think he was afraid of losing his car. From the way he talked I don't think his father-in-law runs an account with any filling station up there, and as he has often said to me, you can't run a car without gas. I don't think he is very strong for gasoline any way. I read in the paper where he was making a speech before the water committee, trying to get some money to keep Tennessee river running by Chattanooga, and while he was raving the Republicans got all the gasoline. It looks like every congressman we send up there harps on keeping the river running by our beautiful city. I say all of them; I mean all the Democrats. If it wasn't that we lived on the banks of the beautiful Tennessee river the Democrats could go away with the expense of having an election, and from the way they rave when they come back to be re-elected you would think if it wasn't for them, the river would turn around at Knoxville and back the other way. They rave about harnessing the river. If it wasn't for the taxpayers keeping them up they would go back to the farm and harness old Maud.

I say let the river run along. We have a fleet of boats on the river now spending some of those millions that have been appropriated by the government. The next work I see they do is move the gang plank during high water. It seems to me it would be cheaper to sink these boats and throw the gang plank overboard. I feel just like I heard a father-in-law say, "Four years ain't long enough; it should be for life."

Special Correspondent of the R.E. CORDER

WASHINGTON BEGINS to fill up in anticipation of the opening of Congress on Dec. 1. The Senators and Representatives themselves are always a little behind, but the lobbyists and the other semi-official hangers on have lost no time in gaining vantage points for the siege with this "lame duck" Legislature. There will be some new faces in the Senate, notably in that seat which was once occupied by Daniel Webster and more recently by Henry Cabot Lodge of Massachusetts. William M. Butler, Chairman of the Republican National Committee and President Coolidge's campaign manager, has been appointed to occupy Lodge's seat until the Congressional election, two years hence.

CONTRADICTIONS are flaring up here and there in the Capital over the influx of negroes into white neighborhoods. In some parts of the city, the whites have attempted to exclude the negro, but the latter have set up the contention that there is no legal right to segregate them. It is true that the Supreme Court of the United States has rendered an opinion which apparently takes that position, but another test case is looked for. The problem is acute here in Washington, where the population is about equally divided between whites and blacks.

REPORTS OUT OF Washington that President Coolidge will have two vacancies to fill on the Supreme Court are based on the assumption it develops that neither Associate Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes nor Associate Justice Joseph McKenna will survive during the coming four years. Holmes is 83 years old and McKenna is 81, but neither has any intention of resigning. They want to die in the harness.

THE CAPITAL HAS been all excited about the liquor case in Maryland in which John Philip Hill, a Congressman from that state, has been seeking an interpretation of the National Prohibition Act. Hill made cider at his home in Baltimore and then invited the federal agents to arrest him. The court held that he was NOT guilty of violating the Volstead Act by his home brewing, but Prohibition Commissioner Haynes countered with the statement that enforcement would go on just the same and that the Baltimore decision did NOT mean that home-brewers could not operate with impunity.

AS FAR AS THE Government is concerned, there will be no effort at further tax revision in the short session of Congress. President Coolidge and Secretary Mellon have agreed that it would be fruitless to ask this Congress to put through a tax plan which it has already turned down. The Administration's great desire for additional tax reduction may result in a special session of Congress after March 4.

PRESIDENT Coolidge, indicating that he found it difficult to always get prompt agreement from the heads of the Government departments to proposals for sharp cuts in expenditures, told this story: A Vermont farmer, meeting another farmer on the road asked the latter for his horse and wagon. The second farmer said "no." If he said "yes," said the first farmer to a friend I would have had a horse and wagon.

JOHN L. LEWIS, President of the United Mine Workers of America and one of the country's outstanding labor leaders, is mentioned probable successor to Secretary of Labor Davis, who will leave the Cabinet in March.

MRS. CALVIN COOLIDGE will christen the dirigible Los Angeles at Bolling Field, Washington, in approximately a week, Secretary of the Navy Wilbur has announced. The dirigible will be brought down from Lakehurst for the occasion, and President Coolidge will attend. The age-old custom of breaking a bottle of champagne on the bows of ships will be discarded. Mrs. Coolidge will release a basket of white pigeons, symbolic of peace. Doves were also released when the sister ship of the Los Angeles, the Shenandoah, was christened at Lakehurst.

J. C. HANKINS DIES

WIDELY KNOWN MERCHANT AND FARMER OF BOONE COUNTY GONE TO HIS REWARD.

J. Clevie Hankins, well known citizen and farmer died at his home in Hebron Tuesday, Nov. 18, 1924, after an illness of two years or more, aged 87 years. Funeral services were conducted Thursday afternoon Nov. 20th, at the home after which the remains were laid to rest in Hebron cemetery.

Mr. Hankins was a son of the late John Hankins and wife. He was born October 26th, 1837, in the same neighborhood in which he died. He was an honored member of the Odd Fellows Lodge and the Christian church, having united with the Pleasant church in the year 1884, later transferring his membership to Ballittsville, where he was a loyal member until death.

For many years he was in the merchandising and under-acting business under the firm name of Rucker & Hankins at Hebron and Constance, and was widely known throughout the north end of the county. About twenty years ago he made the race for County Clerk, but was defeated in the primary.

A year or two after the organization of the Hebron Deposit Bank he was elected as Cashier by the directors, which position he held until he was compelled to resign on account of failing health about two years ago.

He was united in marriage on Feb. 14th, 1864, to Miss Malissa A. Utz, daughter of Geo. J. Utz. To this union one daughter, Mrs. Chas. M. Riley, was born, with his widow and other relatives survive him.

J. C. Hankins was a man. He was a man in every meaning of the term implies. He was a citizen to whom Boone county could point with pride and claim as a native son. Not only was he a good citizen but he was a Christian, and a gentleman at all times. Than this no higher tribute can be paid to man. Honor was with him while here, may peace be with him hereafter, is our attending thought.

In his business and social relations he was ever genial and kind, and endeared himself to all who came in contact with him, and those who knew him best can tell of his many kindnesses and his life of devotion to his loved ones. Many friends with the family mourn today his going away.

SCATTERED FAMILIES

The Thanksgiving Day observance of today shows a big difference from the one of 30 to 50 years ago.

At the earlier period, it was generally customary for sons and daughters to settle down near the old home. When Thanksgiving day came, they would hitch up the old nag or take a short railroad ride, and behold a Thanksgiving party that would fill the place with merriment.

The children were satisfied with the same locality, but as a rule the grandchildren have scattered far and wide. In many homes that once rocked with laughter and sport in the old days, today there is only the quiet peace of the older people dreaming dreams of the past. Yet there is no room for melancholy. The young folks who have gone far away cherish the ties of sentiment and relationship more than ever, and many of them are doing splendid work in the world of which the old folks can be proud.

NOTICE TOBACCO GROWERS

There will be a meeting held at the Court House in Burlington on the "CUT OUT" question Monday Dec. 1st. Every tobacco grower in the county is urged to attend this important meeting.

Atty. Jno. B. O'Neal, of Covington, and Atty. S. W. Tolin and H. H. Riley were taking depositions in the case settling the estate of Ezra Wilhoit Friday. The following witnesses gave their testimony: Hiram Long, Geo. W. Markberry, Sam Hambrick, Hugh Carey, Ed. Snyder and Late Aylor.

ANTI CUT-OUT

MEETING HELD LAST SATURDAY AT LEXINGTON INDICATES CONSIDERABLE SENTIMENT IN OPPOSITION TO MOVEMENT

About seventeen hundred Burley Growers met last Saturday at Woodland Auditorium in Lexington, under the same roof that sheltered a similar meeting just one week previous, this meeting however being assembled as a counter action to the one held the previous week.

The meeting held on Saturday 15th adopted the cut-out by a practically unanimous vote, and the anti-meeting held the 22nd voted against the cut-out by approximately the same majority. The purpose of the last meeting seemed to indicate, if the delegates reported correctly, that the delegates at the previous meeting did not vote the exact sentiment of their respective communities.

R. D. McMurtry, of Lancaster, temporary chairman of the convention, called the meeting to order, and was elected permanent chairman of the organization. McMurtry, in calling the meeting to order, said that he opposed the adoption of the cut-out resolution at the previous meeting because it could not be enforced without violence and lawlessness as in 1908, and that it would drive the industry into other states, thereby depriving the Kentucky farmer of his best money crop.

The following resolutions were adopted by the convention: Be it resolved, That it is the sense and opinion of this body of burley tobacco growers that a cut-out of the 1925 crop cannot be made, without intimidation and violence, whether it be by a majority or a minority, and that we are not willing to resort to such means for the purpose of effecting a cut-out of the tobacco crop in 1925.

Further, be it resolved, That we know it will drive the industry into other States, robbing us of our best money crop, impoverishing the tenants and driving them from our state and seriously affecting the financial standing of all land owners.

Be it resolved, That the so-called cut-out of the 1925 crop here and now be called off and this action is final.

Be it resolved, That should there be any further necessity for action to be taken that it be left to the chairman and secretary to call meetings and to take whatever action that may be necessary.

It is to be hoped that a peaceable solution of this problem can be had, and the only way it can be brought about is for the most judicious and level headed representatives of the opposing factions to meet in joint assembly and make an honest endeavor to arrive at a peaceable agreement. Of course it will be difficult, but there is no advocate of the cut-out in Boone county who courts lawlessness, and judging by the sentiment displayed at the meetings at Lexington some lawlessness will in all probability occur.

However, if the sentiment were everywhere as it is in Boone, there could be a "cut-out" and we think peaceably.

Kentucky faces the greatest shortage of cloverseed in its history and the farmers' salvation is to grow alfalfa. The statement is based on government figures, just made public, which show this year's production to be the lowest on record.

Production was poor in 1923; the total in the state dropping from 46,000 bushels in 1922 to 36,000. This year the production is only 32,000 bushels, or 89 per cent of last year.

Harold Arnold, twelve year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Arnold, was stricken by a severe attack of appendicitis last Sunday. He was reported to be in a serious condition.

FALSE IMPRESSION.

The Recorder is in receipt of the following: Boone County Recorder, Burlington, Ky., Dear Sir:

We have been informed that the proponents of the State Bond Issue, especially in those counties that carried it by large majorities, were carried by a false impression as to the actual vote of Lexington on the proposition. Your county being one of these we take this means of giving you the facts with the hope that any false impression that may exist will hereby be removed.

The vote in Lexington gave a majority of 228 in favor of the Bond Issue.

We are surrounded by a large agricultural community. Many people living in the city draw their livelihood from this source. As you well know the agricultural interests everywhere were against the Bond Issue. Indeed, our study of the vote convinces us that Lexington was practically the only community in the State in which agricultural is an important factor, that voted in favor of the Bond Issue.

We shall be glad to have you use this letter to inform your readers in the event you feel there are still those uninformed or misinformed as to the vote in Lexington.

COMMUNITY SERVICE

ON SUBJECT OF EDUCATION IS HELD SUNDAY NIGHT AT THE LOCAL BAPTIST CHURCH.

Education Week was intensely observed in Boone High School, as one half hour each morning was devoted to this subject. The week's observance culminated last Sunday evening in a community church service held at the Baptist church, all denominations participating.

Rev. Paul Gillespie spoke on "Education in the Home," followed by a male quartette rendition of "Home Sweet Home." Prof. Hook on "Education in the School" and Rev. Adams on "Education in the Church."

The program was concluded with another quartette "MY ANCHOR HOLDS," the significance being that every citizen should hold to these three basic institutions in our American life.

PRESENTATION

OF FLAGS AND BIBLES TO BURLINGTON SCHOOL CONDUCTED IN THE SCHOOL HOUSE SUNDAY AFTERNOON.

The presentation ceremony of the flags and Bibles to the Burlington school by the Daughters of America, of Ludlow, was driven indoors by the disagreeable turn in the weather just before the ceremony was scheduled to start.

The occasion was to have been more in the nature of a flag raising ceremony, but of course the weather changed the program. The school building however was never intended to accommodate such a crowd as assembled last Sunday afternoon. Both of the large upper classrooms were thrown together with the hall included could accommodate less than half the crowd, with that portion of the assembly who could not find room in the main hall, almost filling the corridors and lower class rooms.

The presentation of a flag and Bible for each room in the school was made by Mrs. Emma Whiting, State Secretary of the D. of A. and accepted by Chairman L. T. Cleve, of the County Board of Education, followed by a salute of the flag by the Campfire Girls of Burlington.

Rev. F. Schulz made a stirring address on the Foundation of our Public Schools. Rev. Paul Gillespie on "The U. S. Flag as the Living Symbol of the Ideals and Institutions of our Republic." Rev. W. W. Adams on "The Place of the Bible in our Public Schools," followed by a short talk on "Our School and the Community" by Mr. A. B. Renaker. The Daughters were accompanied by a splendid brass band whose splendid renditions served to accentuate the patriotic nature of the meeting.

Prof. C. M. Hook, who had complete charge of the meeting, should be heartily commended upon the capable manner in which he conducted this splendid ceremony. It is but an example of the manner in which this school is being handled under the present administration.

Hebron High School Notes

The Girl Reserve Club held its regular meeting Wednesday afternoon and had a recognition service for the new members. The new members of the Hi-Y Club will be initiated as soon as a copy of the ceremonial can be obtained.

Some of the High School boys went to Cincinnati and played the United States Veterans Bureau at basketball. They defeated the Bureau team by a score of 18 to 10.

A road and garage are being built to accommodate the new buses. Miss Jessie Gordon, Chester Goodridge and several students attended the funeral of Mr. Hankins last Thursday afternoon.

The third and fourth grades, with Miss Jessie Gordon as instructor, entertained with a chapel program last Monday morning. These programs are very interesting and the public is invited to attend them.

Mrs. Nellie Markland was a visitor of the school last week. Professor Lucy was absent from school on Monday afternoon. He attended the funeral of one of his friends near Independence.

A Parent Teachers Association was organized at Hebron on Friday afternoon. Only about thirty people were present as the weather was so bad. Professor Lucy, acting as temporary chairman, spoke about the purpose and needs of an association, then called on Mrs. Orie Ware from Covington to speak. After giving a short informal talk the following officers were elected: Mrs. C. V. Lucy, President; Mrs. J. L. Fowler, Vice President; Mrs. Walter Hafer secretary; and Mrs. Herbert Grant treasurer. Several matters of business were discussed, such as dues and the time of meeting. The next meeting of the association will be held in the auditorium on Friday afternoon, Dec. 5th, at two thirty. All parents and patrons of the school are urged to be present.

There seems to be an epidemic of drives for money for various purposes, and a fellow is expected to "come across" for all of them. The Red Cross, the Kentucky Orphan Home, the Church Homes, and local organizations—all of which have worthy causes and should be supported if you possibly can do so.

POOL BOARD VOTES TO COMBINE JOBS AND SAVE EXPENSE

Receiving Plant Manager and Grader's Positions Consolidated at All Points Receiving Less Than 2,000,000 Pounds.

Another step in the interest of economy was taken by the board of directors of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association at a special meeting Nov. 20, at Lexington, by which the offices of grader and warehouse manager at 34 receiving points in all parts of the district were consolidated, experience the past year at several points it is said, having indicated the possibility of this saving of the growers' money.

The board adopted the plan, which was proposed by President and General Manager James C. Stone and which had also the approval of Director of Warehouse, Robert E. Butty and Chief Grader John Corlis, after full discussion, as a permanent policy of the association.

Mr. Stone declared the purpose of the management to reduce the cost of operation in every possible way consistent with the efficient working of the Association. As finally adopted, the proposal to consolidate the offices of receiving plant manager and grader applies to all plants which receive less than 2,000,000 pounds of tobacco during the season.

Tom Middleton, of Henry county, who was elected a district grader at the last meeting of the board, declined the appointment to remain as an official of the State Banking Department and E. E. Boster, recommended as his successor by Chief Grader Inc. as his successor by Chief Grader Inc. to fill the vacancy.

Suspension

OF ROAD WORK NEAR IN KENTUCKY, IS REPORT DUE TO EXHAUSTED FUNDS.

HIGHWAY CONSTRUCTION TO BE HALTED DECEMBER 1—DEFICIT OF MORE THAN $7,000,000 IS CITED

With suspension of all road work, December 1, due to lack of revenue, the State Road Commission has been ordered to either discharge of trained men or continue to carry them on the pay roll until work recommences April 1.

In the summer months the entire personnel often is as high as 2,000, but the average number of employees in the Department of State Roads and Highways, not including day laborers used in maintenance work, is 600. J. S. Boggs, State Highway Engineer says.

A season of dull activity is in prospect so far as road work is concerned, as the commission at its last meeting committed itself to a policy of retrenchment.

The new commission, operating since July 1, has a "under" the new two-year biennial working period of finances, set by opinion of the Court of Appeals, and ruling of Attorney-General F. M. Daugherty, has let construction contracts totaling 495 miles of the state primary system, amounting to $8,494,000.

Estimates recently prepared by advocates of the present plan of operating placed the income to the department at $8,100,000 for from July 1, 1924, to June 30, 1925, and $9,620,000 from July 1, 1924, to June 30, 1926.

The road fund has a balance of $1,500,000. The present deficit is more than $7,000,000, with outstanding road warrants of almost $9,000,000.

It takes a year to complete a job after awarding of the contract, engineers in the department say. The engineers in the various branches are kept working on plans for roads as fast as 2,000 miles ahead of the actual letting. They say they have no idea what project will be advertised for, it being in the discretion of the Highway Commission.

The department is divided into divisions of design, construction, maintenance, and account.

The district engineers are authorized field representatives in charge of all construction and maintenance work in their districts. They deal directly with county authorities on all matters referring to construction in which the county has an interest.

Yet, our Pay-as-you-go friends during the campaign said we had ample funds for road work.

Mrs. Martha Hawes passed her 88th birthday last Wednesday. She is enjoying good health for one of her years.

In order to have a past you can be proud of, you have to go out and make it in the present.

Next Monday is party court.

SUCH IS LIFE

A CHANCE FOR THRIFT

Opportunity for the practice of genuine thrift absolutely apart from parsimony, is pointed to by fire loss statistics.

It is a national maxim of China that that which is burned up is lost forever!

It is shown that in one year there was a fire loss of $500,000,000 of property in the United States. By far the great majority of fires are preventable.

Half a billion of perfectly good dollars is a handsome enough sum to command anybody's attention, and it is a deplorable thing to think of its being wasted in fire loss. That sort of loss is absolute.

Nor is the situation made better by the reflection that property losses are so frequently accompanied by grievous and costly loss of life; as well as suffering caused by inevitable accidents and burns that stop short of taking life outright.

What is happening every day in the fire menace and waste, shows clearly enough that we are still a very long way from indulgence in over cautiousness against fire.

There are opportunities in the situation for all to contribute towards reducing these calamitous losses, and practicing a kind of thrift that is indeed worth while.

That half billion could be put to infinitely better use; but not to worse.

THOUGHT OF PEACE

At many public events, occurring during the week of Armistice Day, the subject of discussion was not so much the military achievement of the American people which terminated on the first Armistice day, as it was on that day.

It was frequently remarked that the late conflict was a "war to end war." What has been accomplished to date to realize this supreme object, for which our boys fought so nobly?

Probably the majority of the soldiers take this view of this anniversary. They are not so anxious to have their work glorified, as they are to see positive things done to secure peace.

Opinions differ sharply as to just what steps ought to be taken to create lasting peace. But this thing can be said positively, that putting a stop to war is the greatest terror that the world faces, and its tragedies and suffering throw a heavy burden of sorrow over all lands. Three fourths of our federal taxes go to pay the costs of war or preparation for war.

The first question that should be asked in regard to people who desire positions of power in the U. S. government, is as to what their policies are in regard to the prevention of war. Are they interested in stopping war, and are the plans which they favor for such purpose practical and likely to accomplish results?

This question should not be set to one side as of minor importance. It should be discussed by every fireside, in all places of public assembly, and in all organizations formed for human welfare. We must all study it, and form intelligent opinions on it, and demand that our statesmen develop some constructive policy for making an end to this great curse.

HIGH POWER RADIO

Superpower broadcasting is the latest phase of radio development. Commenting on the possibilities of developing these high powered stations, David Sarnoff, Vice-President and General Manager of the Radio Corporation of America, says that "such stations located 25 to 50 miles away from a city will not interfere with broadcasting of local stations."

"Progress in radio necessarily means progress both in broadcast transmission and broadcast reception. Super-broadcasting will deserve the sanction of the government, the public and the industry itself. I hope that wire line networks and radio relay systems for interconnections of broadcasting stations will be fully developed side by side with super broadcasting, for I think that such parallel lines of development will react favorably on each other and insure the speedy production of equipment and methods for general use embodying the best of these systems or possibly continuing all of them."

"The problem of super-broadcasting, like any other department of progress, will be settled upon the principle of public service. Ultimately performance, not opinion, will determine the direction of progress in the radio art."

GROP REPORT.

Kentucky's total production of tobacco of all types in 1924 is estimated at 385,485,000 pounds in the November crop report for Kentucky issued by the Louisville office of the U. S. Bureau of Agricultural Economics. This is not quite 6 per cent increase over the October 1 estimate, is a sharp decrease from the 494,190,000 pounds produced in Kentucky in 1923, and much less than the state's average annual production of 446,072,000 pounds 1918-22 inclusive. The average yield per acre this year in Kentucky, including all types of tobacco, is only 785 pounds, as compared to the 10-year average of 868 pounds.

The Kentucky corn crop this season is estimated at only 74,000,000 bushels compared to 87,159,000 bus. 1918-22 inclusive. Only about 72 per cent of this season's corn crop in Kentucky is reported as being merchantable and farmers also report they have only 3.6 per cent of last year's Kentucky corn crop still on farms. The average yield of corn per acre this year in Kentucky is only 25 bus. compared to a 10-year average of 27.7 bus.

This year's Irish potato crop in Kentucky is estimated at 5,700,000 bushels compared to 4,930,000 bus. produced in this state in 1923.

This season's sweet potato crop in Kentucky is estimated at 1,748,000 bus. compared to 2,060,000 bushels last year.

Fifty thousand bushels of first-class apples were grown in McCracken county this year, according to County Agent, W. C. Johnstone. There are now in cultivation in the county 10,000 barrels of fruit, mostly owned by dealers.

LEAVING A COUNTRY HOME

It is true on general principle that people accomplish the best results in the environment with which they are familiar. The average city boy will do best to grow up a city man, among the type of people whom he understands. That is a rule to which there are exceptions, yet it applies in the great majority of cases.

Also the average country town boy or girl does better to settle down in surroundings with which he or she is familiar. If these young folks have exceptional gifts, it may be desirable for them to go into some profession or occupation which they will follow under city conditions.

But when the boy or girl of just ordinary ability goes off to the cities with the idea that they are going to pick up wealth and position more easily than they could in the country, they are making a mistake. They do not usually know the ways by which success is attained in city conditions as well as the city young people do.

In these days when work can be had by any who are willing to work, they can probably make living under city conditions. But their increased earnings, if the same development, will usually be eaten up by increased expenses. Our plan is, that if they are to make any real success and build up a specially advantageous position, their best chance is to do it in an environment with which they are familiar.

Their best chance of all is usually in their own locality where they are known and where the friends of their youth are located. They understand country ways, they know what the country people want, the kind of service that succeeds in country communities. There are plenty of chances in Boone county where our own young folks can make good, and where their personal acquaintance and familiarity with the habits of the people and the ways of doing business will give them a considerable start toward success.

THE AIRCAB HAS ARRIVED

A New York automobile importer, is reported to have ordered 100 airplanes designed and made in France, that will alight either on land or water. He claims that a Wall Street firm has placed orders for several, to form an aerial taxi service for financiers and business men who live in the suburbs, and for trips to Washington, Philadelphia, Boston and other nearby cities.

These air taxis are geared to travel 100 miles an hour, and will carry five passengers, and at a rate on a par with that now charged by the Yellow taxi.

Of course there will be more or less risk and danger, just as there was risk and danger traveling behind the first railroad locomotive or on the first steamboat, but all that is a simple matter of development. This is an age of speed—and the auto, in cities, is admittedly slow, cumbersome and awkward. The air is the only place remaining for real comfort, and the airbus seems to be the real thing.

LEGION NOTES

Adams, Mass.—When the American Legion Post here held open house recently a blonde young man of obviously Teutonic descent hesitated at the door a moment, and then, evidently satisfied with the pacific atmosphere, sidled in and sat down. He chose a seat by an American Legionnaire who resembled him closely in feature. There was a good reason for both the hesitancy and the choice of a seat. The Teuton was a veteran of the Prussian Guard, and as such his recent aim in life was to annihilate his Legionnaire hosts, including his own brother, who is a naturalized citizen and a member of the Adams Post of the Legion. The former German soldier, readily picked out two members of the Legion post who had engaged him in hand-to-hand combat during the late war. Any fears he may have entertained of personal indemnities that might have been exacted by the Legionnaires were very quickly dispelled when the Legionnaires indicated that the war was over by fraternizing with the former enemy over a mug of beer—in a civilian variety, which proved it conclusively, if you follow the deduction.

Indianapolis, Ind.—An endowment fund of $5,000,000 for orphaned children of the World War and indigent and disabled former servicemen will be sought in a nationwide campaign to be launched soon by the American Legion, it was announced at national headquarters here. President Coolidge has accepted the honorary chairmanship of the Legion's national campaign to raise the fund, James A. Drain, National Commander of the Legion, announced.

Decision to raise the fund was made at a meeting of the Legion's national finance committee upon recommendation of National Commander James A. Drain. The endowment fund program was given authorization by the sixth national convention of the Legion at St. Paul pending approval of details by the finance committee, including, Wilder Metcalf, Topeka, Kan., chairman; John R. McQuigg, Cleveland, Ohio, and Edgar B. Dunlap, Gainesville, Ga.

The urgent need of raising the fund immediately was pointed out by Mark T. McKee, Detroit, Mich., a member of the Legion's child welfare committee. He declared that the existing facilities of the Legion for caring for the orphaned and helpless children of former service men, who were either killed or died as a result of their war service, are overcrowded. The Legion has a children's billet at Otter Lake, Michigan, under operation and one at Independence, Kansas, under construction.

"There are 5,000 children of dead World War veterans who need care right now," Mr. McKee said, "out of a total of 85,000 war waifs."

"These are Veterans Bureau figures," declared the chair man, "and four children at the Veterans Bureau children of a deceased war veteran with a request that they be cared for. The bureau turned the children over to us. Somehow we will provide for them, yet our present facilities will stand for no expansion."

National Commander Drain declared, "We must look close to home and see the great underlying misery caused by the great conflict. We must help the disabled man. He is our first obligation and he needs us now. The American Legion must keep faith with its fallen comrades by seeing that the helpless children that are rightfully theirs, because their fathers were killed fighting for their country. Bind up the wounds of the disabled and care for the widows and orphans must be our slogan."

Mr. Metcalf in voicing his approval said: "Our first and greatest duty is properly to care for the disabled man until he is able to care for himself, and it is also the time to save the children of deceased veterans from being punished because their fathers gave their lives for this country. These boys and girls deserve every chance their own fathers would have given them and the Legion, as foster parent, must give them that chance."

"We are pledged to care for the disabled and for the widows and orphans of those who are gone," said Mr. McQuigg. "Now is the time to redeem these promises."

PRESIDENT WASHINGTON'S FIRST THANKSGIVING PROCLAMATION

Whereas it is the duty of all nations to acknowledge the Providence of Almighty God, to obey His will, to be grateful for His benefits, and humbly implore His protection and favor; and

Whereas both houses of congress have, by their joint committees requested me "to recommend to the people of the United States a day of public thanksgiving and prayer, to be observed by acknowledging with grateful hearts the many and signal favors of Almighty God, especially by affording them an opportunity peaceably to establish a form of Government for their safety and happiness."

Now, therefore, I do recommend and assign Thursday November 28, to be devoted by the people of these States to the service of the great and glorious Being who is the beneficent author of all the good that was, that is, or that will be; that then we may all unite in tendering unto Him our sincere and humble thanks for His kind care and protection of the people of this country previous to their becoming a nation; for the signal and manifold mercies, and the favorable interpositions of His providence in the course and conclusion of the late war; for the great degree of tranquility, union and plenty which we have since enjoyed; for the peaceful and rational manner in which we have been able to establish constitutions of Government for our safety and happiness, and particularly the national one now lately instituted; for the civil and religious liberties with which we are blessed, and diffusing useful knowledge; and, in general for all the great and various favors which He has been pleased to confer upon us.

And also that we may unite in most humbly offering our prayers and supplications to the great Lord and ruler of nations; and beseech Him to pardon our national and other transgressions; to enable all, whether in public or private stations to perform our several and relative duties properly and punctually; to render our national Government a blessing all the people by constantly being a Government of wise, just and constitutional laws, discreetly and faithfully executed and obeyed; to protect and guide all sovereigns and nations (especially such as have shown kindness to us, and to bless them with good Government, peace and concord; to promote the knowledge and practice of true religion and virtue, and the increase of science among them and us; and, generally to grant unto all mankind such degree of temporal prosperity as He alone knows to be best.

Given under my hand at the City of New York, the third day of October, A. D. 1789.

KIND TO CORN GROWERS

The weather man has been kind to corn growers the fall. He has kept the temperature up above normal and closed up the clouds. The result is that the abnormally warm weather in October evaporated the surplus moisture from the corn, and as there was no rain to offset the effective work of a bright autumn sun, the corn crop has thrived and the pessimists are unmade because their predictions did not come true.

Well can you remember hearing a month or so ago that the corn crop was a dismal failure, because it was too full of moisture, lacked this, that and the other thing, and that the frost was going to get it in October sure.

Up to early November no killing frosts had been reported in the corn states of Iowa, Illinois, Nebraska, Kansas, Missouri, Indiana or Ohio, and experts estimated November 1st that eighty per cent of the crop in the United States was safe.

Due to the favorable weather, it is now believed that the total value of the corn crop will reach $3,000,000,000, which is $300,000,000 more than the September 15 estimate. An increase of 50,000,000 bushels is also seen as the result of the favorable weather.

All of which goes to prove that there is no use crying over spilled milk until it has actually been spilled. Crops are failures now and then, but a kindly providence generally intervenes at the right time and overcomes adverse conditions that nature has imposed.

KENTUCKY MASONS FOR

LAW ENFORCEMENT

Louisville, Ky.—At the recent session of the Masonic Grand Lodge of Kentucky, a resolution was adopted which provided that any person who obtained intoxicating liquors or narcotic drugs illegally and in violation of the laws of the United States was declared ineligible to be received into a Masonic lodge of this state, and any Kentucky lodge knowingly electing such a person would forfeit its charter. This resolution also provided that it would be a Masonic offense for any Mason belonging to this Grand Lodge to illegally purchase or possess intoxicating liquors or narcotic drugs, and that all Masons so offending should be proceeded against by the lodge to which they belonged.

WELCOME

Born—To Dr. and Mrs. M. A. Yelton a daughter Monday, Nov. 24th.

James Bristol and Harry Riley, of Union, were in Burlington last Friday.

Judge Sidney Gaines and wife, of Walton, were visiting relatives, in and near Burlington, Sunday.

Ed. Burris is having a sale of personal property on the 3rd of next month. Read his adv. in this issue.

Mr. and Mrs. Philip Drackett and children of Cincinnati, are entertained Sunday by Mrs. J. E. Smith.

G. K. Whitson, cashier of the Verona Deposit Bank, Verona, was doing business at the court house, last Thursday.

Dr. T. B. Castleman and wife, of Florence, were business visitors to Burlington, Monday morning. They made the Recorder office a pleasant call.

Born—On Saturday, Nov. 22nd, to Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Frank, of the Linaburg neighborhood, an eight and one-half pound girl—Alice Virginia.

A gentleman by the name of Miller, from Bourbon county was in Boone county looking for a farm last Monday. He was accompanied by C. H. Youell.

Florence Theatre is showing "Way Down East" Nov. 27, 28 and 29th. This is a great picture and movie patrons should not overlook this opportunity to see it.

Miss Ruth Walton, of near Cincinnati, spent Friday night and Saturday with Miss Irene Kirkpatrick. Miss Irene accompanied Miss Ruth home and spent Sunday and Sunday night.

J. F. and Edward Gross, of the Pleasant neighborhood, were visitors to Burlington Tuesday. They paid their respects to the Recorder office and watched the machinery in operation.

Any Madison owner in Boone county who hears the foreign broadcast during this week will please report that fact to the Recorder, giving the date, call letter, and time when heard, with record of the broadcast.

When the penalty will be added to your taxes is a question that is uncertain. The Attorney General ruled that the penalty will be attached on Dec. 31st and this reversed a former opinion rendered by that official. The law is not clear on that point and Sheriff H. B. Hume has received no notice of any change in the time when the penalty will be added to your taxes which is Dec. 1.

BETTER GAME LAWS

A movement is on foot this winter to secure better protection for wild birds, game, etc. through the enactment of better game laws in the state legislatures. Laws will be sought among other things, limiting the open season on certain kinds of game to every other year rather than every year.

All good sportsmen dislike the destruction of useful wild species which has occurred in the past. With millions of people hunting game, many of them in a very lawless way, it is only a question of time when many valuable species of animals and birds will exist only in memory.

Every lover of nature should favor such strict game laws, and should want them so well enforced that we shall keep as many useful animals and birds as we have now, and it would be most beneficial to the country if many depleted species could be permitted to increase.

THE COMMON COLD.

It is the testimony of physicians that no disease causes as much disability and affects such a large proportion of the people as the common cold.

The average person still regards a draft as dangerous and a sure-fire producer of colds, exposure and changeable weather as certain to be forerunner of colds, and bad air as the advance agent of this greatly feared ailment.

Medical science has discovered, however, that these are only predisposing agents and lower the individual's vitality and enable the cold germs to obtain a foothold.

That the common cold is a germ disease has been determined beyond all shadow of a doubt and those who wish to avoid "catching cold" can remain out of its clutches by keeping fit physically.

Correct living habits, such as plenty of fresh air, nourishing food, some exercise and a happy, wholesome outlook on life, will be productive of the vigor and vitality that is needed to hold the cold germ in check, though they may be present.

The common cold which may be productive of more serious ailments is not to be sneered at and the best way to escape its consequences is to be ready to meet it on equal terms and put it to rout.

THE THANKSGIVING FESTIVAL.

Thanksgiving day is observed with earnest feeling in a multitude of country homes, which lift up sentiments of gratitude for the bounties they have received. They regret that in so many homes today the real meaning of the day is forgotten, while people eat more than is good for them, and after dinner participate in various sports and amusements without a thought to the power that sends all these good things to us.

The farmers and other country people of America have had much to contend with. Still, when you compare their lot with that of the early pioneers who settled these regions, they have a great deal to make them comfortable and happy, and promote the development. It is well to see that side of the picture on Thanksgiving day.

EVOLUTION AND THE HORNEB ROOSTER.

Last Saturday evening John Uri Lloyd, author of "Stringtown on the Pike," gave a dinner at the Cincinnati Business Mens Club in honor of his two old Stringtown friends and boyhood chums, Frank and Albert Souther. After partaking of a luncheon, then we proceeded to the lecture room, where Prof. Lloyd, before a large and appreciative audience, read some papers on Stringtown on the Pike, also gave short lecture on Evolution and the Horneb Rooster. Perhaps some of the readers of the Recorder remember the Horneb Rooster in a side show at the old Florence fair, owned by Skinny Jim Smith.

F. E. SOUTHER.

What is expected to be the most important event in the history of the Masonic fraternity in the state of Ky., is the dedication in Louisville (Thursday) of the new $1,500,000 Shrine Temple on East Broadway, which is to be the scene of the autumnal ceremonies of Kosm. Temples for which extensive preparations have been made. That the northern section of Kentucky and Cincinnati are to be well represented is indicated by the large number of requests Ambassador Dr. Carlton has received for reservations on the special trains which are to leave Covington Wednesday night and Thursday morning.

Many Masons who were members of a class on which the Scottish Rite degrees were conferred in Indiana Consistory at Covington last week are included among the applicants for the Shrine.

Calvin Coolidge was the first man in a general run for office on his ability to keep his mouth shut and it was such a novelty the voters flocked to him in a body. Every man knows that many released overtalk their lips but it is a question whether the politician who even learns the lesson practically demonstrated by Mr. Coolidge. What a grand and glorious country this would be if the "hunk" printed and oral, could be suppressed.

GOOD ROADS ARE WORTH THEIR COST

The highway is not simply a road. It is not simply a surface. It is the assurance of a better civilization, influence of better communication between sections.

It is the silent, but persistent factor for the reduction.

It is the humble, but powerful foe of ignorance for the reason that it makes easily accessible our splendid systems of public schools to the people in the rural districts.

It is the safeguard of our food supply. It is a guarantee to the public against the prostrating influence of industrial upheaval and interruption to distribution therefrom.

It is the popular open-air theatre of enjoyment of the family.

It is the text-book of nature to our people.

It is the connecting link between the home and the factory.

It is the call to the open air; the great physician who makes no charges for his services.

The people who are opposed to good roads oppose them for the same reason that some people oppose our great public school system; that they are not informed.—North Carolina Highway Bulletin.

A REAL KENTUCKIAN

At the British Empire exposition, recently held at Wembley, England, one of the feature attractions was a "rodeo" or an exhibition of bareback riding, roping steers, etc. After all the professionals had completed their stunts a call was given for amateurs to contest for various prizes.

A bluejacket from the U. S. S. "Texas" now in European waters on the midshipman's cruise, responded to the call. In his Navy uniform, flag hat and all, he not only succeeded in riding a bronco, but he was the first to throw all corners in less than five seconds, and paraded the horse around the arena and afterwards rode in wild steer, amid the plaudits of the vast assembly.

He admitted later that he was a real jockey from Kentucky before enlisting at the Naval Recruiting Station at Louisville, Kentucky, but the account failed to state if in the gyrations of the bronco, he lost his hat.

W. H. RICE, DEAD.

W. H. Rice died at the residence of his daughter Mrs. Effie Snyder in Erlanger Monday Nov. 24, 1924, aged 81 years. He was a former resident of this county and President of the Florence Deposit Bank. He is survived by his son Robert Rice and daughter Mrs. Effie Snyder.

Another one of our old and respected citizens has passed on. He retired from active business service years ago, and had been residing with his daughter in Erlanger. His wife died many years ago. He lived the life of a Christian and was loved and respected by all who knew him. Funeral services were held Wednesday afternoon conducted by Rev. Stanbough. Under the Pastoral care had charge of the funeral.

B. H. S. NOTES.

Sarah Cropper, one of our Jr. girls, was absent from school one day last week because of a severe cold.

Bellevue Independent boys basketball team came out and played our Independent team last Saturday at the close the score was 22 to 12 in favor of our boys. The goals gotten on our team were Rouse 3, Hook 4, U. Z. 2 and Kirkpatrick 2, while Mathews made 3, Clere 1 and Williamson 2 on the Bellevue team.

Because of the bad weather we had to call our game off with Petersburg last Friday, however we won't give up, we hope to play them this week.

On account of the dark weather we dismissed school early Friday afternoon as it was impossible to study.

It seemed like old times with Mrs. Elizabeth and Mrs. Lulu Tolin teaching at B. H. S. this week, while Mr. Elder and Mrs. Elder attended the funeral of a relative.

COUNTY COURT CLERK

We are authorized to announce
NEWTON SULLIVAN, JR.,
as a candidate for County Court
Clerk of Boone county, subject to the action of the Democratic Primary Election, August 1st, 1925.

NOTICE.

The Democrats in Boone county will assemble in their respective precincts Saturday, Dec. 6th, at 1 p. m., and proceed to elect a precinct committee to serve for four years.
One person from each of the twelve precincts will be elected. All persons who voted for and supported the Democratic ticket at the November 1924 election are entitled to participate in the meeting. The committees selected at these meetings will meet in the Court House in Burlington, Saturday Dec. 13th, 1924, at 1:30 p. m., and elect a chairman, secretary and transact such other business as may be necessary.

C. W. TOLIN,
Chairman Democratic Committee
for Boone County.

Predictions that you don't bet on are the ones that come true.

Following the Golden Rule is one thing and catching up with it is another.

Men who profit by the ignorance of others never gain anything in the long run.

The modern girl is not very fond of walking, but she will walk a long way for a ride.

There are no candidates to condemn, but be patient—congress will soon be in session.

Troubles aren't helped any by carrying them in your face—and neither is your face.

Wise is he who knows when he has enough and works hard the rest of his life not to get more.

Elections always remind us that too many people take too much liberty with the ninth commandment.

Better observance of the Sabbath might be obtained by teaching the fish how unholy it is to bite on that day.

The hardest boiled egg is yellow on the inside. Remember this simple truth the next time some bluffer goes into action.

The election results are settled, but the country can not be considered really safe until we see how the football games go.

Formerly the great problem was how to bring out the bashful young people, but now the question is how to keep back the forward ones.

University students of Japan are organizing a federation to oppose military training in schools. The movement is nation wide and promises to produce results. In this respect Japan is one lap ahead of America.

According to Department of Agriculture records Americans consumed 50,000,000 pounds more butter the first nine months of this year than ever before. The total amount consumed during this period was 1,516, 690,000 pounds.

County Agent K. J. Bowles predicts that Estill county will have one of the best county fairs in the state next year. More than 6,000 people were present on the opening day of this year's fair, and on one day 3, 400 boys and girls marched from Irvine to the fair grounds. More than 400 head of stock and poultry were exhibited.

A notice of meeting to be held in the different precincts of the county for the purpose of electing Democratic committeemen will be found in another column of this issue.
Twelve committeemen will be elected as the precincts having two voting places elect one committeeman, the precinct and not the voting district controls.

Who can blame the big incometax payer for protesting against publicity of the amount paid to the government? It is asserted that in New York City alone not less than 5,000 organization agents have stormed leaders of finance, bankers and brokers for contributions. The old excuse does not stand in face of the evidence and the poor chaps are forced to devise means and ways to avoid the onrush.

The destruction of the battleship,
Washington, as a target, has raised a storm of protest and resulted in an application for an injunction. Secretary Wilbur says the ship is only about 75 per cent completed and only worth about $15,240,000, it stands. It must be scrapped or sunk under the terms of the Washington Naval Treaty, and the proposed tests are important in the development of the navy. The layman cannot understand why a new ship of this character could not be converted into one of the cruisers the armament says is necessary and for which an appropriation of several millions is asked, but the layman is more or less a "blubber" at best, and should hesitate to raise questions of this character.

THE AUTUMN SEASON.

People With a Dark and Gloomy View of Life Say That Autumn is Time of Melancholy

People with a dark and gloomy view of life say that autumn is a time of melancholy. They observe the yellow vegetation, the falling leaves, decay that is everywhere apparent, and it suggests the decline of life and the end of all things. They sit around with the blues.

Hopeful people with a bright outlook find pleasure in the crisp and tingling air of autumn, which puts new energy into the nerves and muscles. They feel that they can get out and do things which seemed impossible during the summer.

They are not only the yellow in decadent vegetable life, but the beauty of the colors that characterize the foliage of trees. They rejoice in the harvest period when nature comes to her fruition and offers man another bountiful crop, bringing abundant fruit and garden products and the world is glad for an exaltation in the life of nature.

Those who are engaged in business view autumn as a time when new enterprises can be promoted. If they are artisans or clerical workers, they are glad for the long evenings that bring social pleasures and opportunities for self advancement.

So while the dark-voiced folks gather gloom in all periods of the year, those with a bright glimpse of the future see pleasant prospects in each turn of the season as the season brings their succession of blessings to a beautiful and prosperous community such as this.

FOREST FIRES.

Very many people have always thought of forest fires as something very remote; a disaster that could never happen in this locality; a danger that never threatened because it has always been common to districts where there are large tracts of timber.

But they have been awakened from their feeling of security. Forest fires have burned over several hundred acres of land in Kentucky, Illinois, and Ohio, where forest fires are very uncommon.

This demonstrates that forest fire is a menace, even to Boone county, and that every precaution should be taken to guard against them.

Some of the fires are believed to have been started by a careless hunter. The extremely dry condition of the timber and underbrush made conditions right for the fire to spread rapidly.

The situations in other sections show a warning as to what may happen to any one who has occasion to be in wooded sections to use the utmost care. A carelessly tossed match, the sparks from a pipe, a cigar or a cigarette, might be the means of setting off the timber.

Hunters after game, fishermen, boys in the woods to gather nuts, and even farmers themselves at work, must take the matter seriously, if the damage that other districts have suffered, is to be avoided here.

FARMERS' QUESTIONS ANSWERED BY KENTUCKY EXPERIMENT STATION

Question—Should milk be heated to the boiling point in pasteuriza-tion? If not, to what degree should it be heated? Does pasteurization destroy any of the food value of milk?

Answer—Milk should not be heated to the boiling point in pasteuriza-tion. There are two methods of pasteurization—the flash and the boiling systems. The flash system merely heats the milk to 160 to 180 degrees
F. instantly by passing it over a heated surface, and then immediately cooling. The holding system consists of heating the milk to 145 degrees
F. and holding it at that temperature for 30 minutes. The flash method affects in any way the food value of milk. The latter method is perhaps to be recommended, as the lower temperature more nearly gives milk the natural flavor, and does not destroy the cream line—J. O. Barkman, Kentucky Experiment Station.

Question—A bed of marl has been found in my county. How much should be applied per acre? When should it be applied? What is the best method of spreading it?

Answer—Marl may be applied at the rate of from 3 to 6 tons per acre. On the average, marl contains about half as much as ground limestone; so it should be applied at about twice the rate of limestone. It may be applied any day in the year, provided the land is not too rolling.
When put on rolling or hilly land it should be disked in immediately. Ordinarily it is better to apply any lime material on the surface and disk it in immediately before plowing, or it may be applied after plowing and then disked. Most farmers are spreading marl with a shovel from the wagon. Some are using manure spreaders. When screened, it may be applied with a modern lime spreader.—S. C. Jones, Kentucky

RED CROSS NEWS.

"Totode there has been received from the 4,500,000 veterans, only 1,300,000 applications for Adjusted Compensation. There are 25,000 clerks on duty, ready to receive, verify and certify at least 30,000 applications daily.

It is imperative from the standpoint of economy that all veterans avail themselves of this opportunity right now. A further reason for prompt application upon the veteran is that the face value of the Insurance certificate is dependent upon the age of the veteran at the time of his application, the amount of insurance decreasing as the age increases.

If the veteran intends to apply for this Adjusted Compensation, he is requested to submit application now.
Recruiting Offices are ready to handle all cases.

Blanks can be obtained at the following Army Recruiting Stations:
Cincinnati Ohio, Federal Building.
Dayton, Ohio, 309 West 3rd St.

Portsmouth, Ohio, Federal Building.

Ashland, Ky., Federal Building.

Hazard, Ky., 112 North Main St.

Lexington, Ky., Federal Building.

Middlesboro, Ky., Federal Building.

The Recruiting Sargeants on duty at the above stations will be glad to help the veterans with the preparation of their applications.

Good results are being attained in the roll-call of Red Cross menbership, but there is no possibility of getting as much money as this noble society could well use.

The world is full of suffering in these days after the war, and there is plenty of it at all times in our own country. Many lines of work that need doing for human betterment, and which this society with its fine trained organization of workers, would be admirably equipped to handle, can not be taken up for lack of funds.

Since the armistice, the Red Cross expended $50,000,000 for men of the army and navy and world war veterans. To 180,000 soldiers, sailors and marines it is giving the same help that it gave during the war. These young men, away from their homes, obtain from this society a friendly touch and sympathy and practical help that they very much need. These and other splendid activities call for support. It would seem as if everyone should take out at least one membership.

Claimed that women should remain in the home, but the men are willing they should go down to the church and serve a 35 cent chicken pie supper.

His Hearing Restored
In Three Hours

Amazingly quick cures of obstinate cases of deafness and head noise are reported all over the country through the use of an old-time physician's prescription. This prescription, formerly known as Battle Snake Oil, has met with wide success all over the country.

William Holloway, Kansas man, says: "Before using Virex I was so deaf I could not hear a watch tick.
After three hours I hear better very good."

Such amazing reports come from all over the country and Canada.
The prescription which is known as Virex, is easily used at home and seems to work like magic in its rapidity on people of all ages.

So confident are we that Virex will restore your hearing quickly, and to introduce this remarkable treatment, to a million more sufferers, we will send a large $2.00 treatment for only $1.00 on ten days' free trial. If the results are not satisfactory the treatments cost nothing.

Send no money—just your name and address to the Dale Laboratories, 465 Gateway Station, Kansas City, Mo., and the treatment will be mailed at once. Use it according to the simple directions. If at the end of 10 days your hearing is not relieved, your head noises gone entirely, just send it back and your money will be refunded without question. This offer is fully guaranteed, so write today and give this wonderful prescription a trial.

Old-Time Cough Remedy—Pine Tar and Honey—Still Best

According to specialists, there is really nothing better or quicker-acting for coughs, chest colds, bronchitis, spasmodic croup and throat irritation than good old pine tar and honey. No matter whether the cough is dry and tight, or loose with much mucus, the pine tar quickly aids in the removal of the phlegm and congestion which are the real cause of the coughing, and relieving soreness, while the honey both soothes irritation and gives a pleasant taste.

A good compound, which has been used in thousands of families for many years, is Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar and Honey. It has many ingredients, but still remains the best, as it is a scientifically compounded of just the right proportions of pine tar, honey and other healing ingredients which the best doctors have found to aid in giving quick relief to the most stubborn coughs, narcotics or harmful drugs, so can give you relief without any harm. If you want the best, be sure you get the original Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar and Honey. Only 50c at any good drugstore.

DR. BELL'S PINE-TAR-HONEY FOR COUGHS

THE HILL AHEAD.

By W. W. Gaines.

When I was a boy ten or twelve years old we had an uncle who lived in Burlington, about four miles away.
The road to Burlington was a dirt road, a typical North Kentucky country road of that day, narrow, crooked, rough, unsurfaced, up and down hill followed the least bit of land, often impassable in winter, usually fairly good in summer.

One warm, dry day in August, a week-day, was, mother took us children with her for a day's visit to these Burlington kin. These "spend-the-day" visits were great occasions in the country, especially for the children. They meant a day's relief from the tiresome home work, the jobs and the chores, and instead the novelty of new surroundings.
They also meant a dinner, with dessert, and, in this particular instance, also, a lot of other children to play with. So we youngsters, as soon as we heard of it, were all excitement about the trip.

Well, in due time Old Tom was hitched up to the buggy. Old Tom was the old family buggy horse, a white horse, old, gentle, slow, lazy, and, best of all, reliable. He would take you where you were going, if you gave him time enough; and he would bring you back again all right.

A sore distanced before we reached Burlington the road crosses a creek.
As we drove down the hill on one side of the creek you could see the same road winding its way up the hill on the other side. I looked at it, startled, in the distance, and said to mother: "Look at that road up the hill over your head. Did you ever see as steep a hill? Why, it is nearly right straight up and down. We can never get up it in the world." But as we drew nearer the hill its steep-ness seemed to lessen. More and more the hill lowered until when we finally reached it and started up it was not a steep hill at all. It was an easy hill. And Old Tom took us right over it without any trouble at all.

And right there I learned a wonderful lesson, one of the most helpful lessons that ever came to me.
The hill ahead is not as steep as it seems.

I am much older now than I was when I took that little trip with mother to Burlington. I have had, I suppose, the usual number of experiences and problems, and fears, and difficulties that are common to men.

And I have found that with me the hills ahead have largely vanished as they were reached. Many a hill that seemed dreadful in the distance we have found to be of easy grade when we actually came to it and we went right on over it "in high."

Hundreds of times, as situations would confront me, I have recalled that childhood hill and the great lesson it taught me. Perhaps no lesson out of any text-book ever taught me as much. It is one of the priceless lessons of life, the lesson of hope profited by it times without number.

And I cherish the recollection of it.
Whenever I revisit my childhood scenes, as I sometimes do, I love to travel again that old road, and to go up again the self-same hill, and to reflect on the good lesson it taught me on a day a long time ago.

How many difficulties, along thru the years, that had been giving me fear and anxiety. I have found had been leveled down, and how many trials and problems that were distressing me I found had disappeared.

I am sure that this has been true in your experience also.

Certainly this ought to be true in the life of every Christian.

Does not the Good Book say something about the burdens being made easy for us and the afflictions light.
Let us not be troubled about the hill ahead.

We can go over it all right.

MORE FRUIT FOR

EASTERN KENTUCKY

W. W. Magill, extension hori-cultural for the College of Agriculture in a recent trip through eastern Kentucky counties, found much interest in fruit growing. Men who have developed orchards are receiving good results. He said, and many farmers are considering plantings of large and small fruit.Blessed is the man who invented interest, but most people like it served without taxes.PAYING FOR THINGS

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

"WHAT a wonderful man George Newton is," an acquaintance of mine said to me when I was in Cull-fornia this summer.

I had known George well half a dozen years or so ago, and so I was interested.

"Yes?" I said inquiringly. "What wonderful thing is he doing now?"

"He has such enthusiasm; he's always pushing something." And then he went on to tell me of a scheme in which George was interested and which involved the expenditure of many thousands of dollars.

"How much is George putting into it?" I asked.

"Well, I don't know that he has invested anything," was the reply; "he's just promoting the scheme."

I recalled that while in college he was a sort of social and political promoter. If there was a dance to be given, or a boat to be distributed, he always managed to get into the committee; he was keen for every enterprise that presented itself, but he always saw to it that someone else paid the bills. No one was more eager than he to send the band to Columbus or Madison or to put on a monster celebration at homecoming, but it was the faculty, or the merchants of the town, or the alumni of Chicago, or the Salvation Army who in his mind should assume the responsibility for payment, not George. His schemes were reserved for the promotion of his own personal pleasure. He never "chimed in," he never plunked down the cold cash, to further the worthy enterprises which he advocated. He furnished the enthusiasm, the wind, as it were, and he expected the other man to shell out the money. I was interested to see that long after he was out of college he held to the same theory.

My father used to say that what we believed in and what we belonged to we ought to be willing to pay for.
It is a long time since he first preached the doctrine to me, but I have come to believe he is right. Education, religion, ideals are worth all that they cost, and the more we pay for them the more they mean to us.
What we pay little for we are likely to value lightly.

Any enterprise which we support raises in our estimation. The more we give, the more we sacrifice, the more we love the thing for which we have sacrificed.

Simple Day Dresses
Sure of Approval

The pretty wearer of this feature daytime frock may not know just where she is going—before the day is over—but she is on her contented way.
Wherever she may find herself there is one thing that she may be sure of and that is the fitness of her dress for all usual daytime requirements.
It is made of crepe satin in the straight-line mode, and has a panel at the front of the material held in impeccable knife plaits. There is a grille, also made of the material. It is used as a covering for cord, which is worked up into small medallions and sewed together. Such a frock makes a background for pretty accessories—as costume jewelry and neckpieces—that tone it up when necessary, and almost any sort of hat looks well with it.

HOW DOCTORS TREAT
COLDS AND THE FLU

To break up a cold over night or to cut short an attack of grippe, influenza or sore throat, physicians and druggists are now recommending Calabate, the nasaleucal Calomet tablet, that is purified from dangerous and sickening effects. Those who have tried it say that it acts like magic, by far more effective and certain than the old style calomet, heretofore recommended by physicians.

One or two Calabates at bed time with a swallow of water—thats all. No salts, no nausea nor the slightest interference with eating, work or pleasures. Next morning your cold has vanished and your system feels refreshed and purified. Calabate are sold only in original sealed packages, price ten cents for the one-market size, thirty-five cents for the large family package. Recommended and guaranteed by druggists. Your money back if you are not satisfied.

RUPTURE IN LITTLE CHILDREN.

Little children and babies often have hernia or rupture. The most common form of hernia is naval or umbilical hernia. Hernia also occurs in the groin but this type is less frequent than the umbilical hernia and is confined almost entirely to boy babies.

Before birth the baby received its nourishment from blood vessels entering thru the umbilical cord. At birth the cord is tied and cut and the opening should close in one week. Sometimes the muscles fail to unite and an opening is left which is covered only with fat and skin. Thru this opening the intestine protrudes to a greater or less degree and the child is said to be "ruptured." The cause of hernia is usually an infection of the stump of the cord or long continued crying which keep the edges of the muscle separated. Keep the stump of the cord well covered by small squares of sterile cloth and report any inflammation or discharge to the physician at once so that an infection may be checked. During the first two weeks a close fitting band helps prevent hernia, especially if the baby cries a great deal. Do not have the band too tight or the baby will have colic.

If a baby has developed hernia it may be corrected by drawing the edges of the hernia together and taping the abdomen from one side to the other with oxide of zinc adhesive plaster. Use two strips six inches long and two inches wide. DO NOT PUT a button over the hernia, this increases the rupture instead of helping it as it is almost impossible to keep the button on proper position. Leave the adhesive plaster on for ten days, remove gently and wipe the skin with a little benzine on a soft cloth or pad. After the skin has dried apply new straps. If the skin has become irritated leave the straps off for a few days and use a flannel binder. It may take a few weeks or several months to cure a rupture and the quicker the adhesive is applied the sooner the cure.

WORLD'S LARGEST

"BABY" BEEF SHOW

Lexington, Ky.—Boys and girls from 13 Kentucky counties will show 380 calves at the third annual fat stock show at the Bourbon Stock Yard in Louisville, Ky., Dec. 10-12. It will be the largest "baby" beef show in the world, according to all statistics available.

Selected thousands of calves distributed by railroads, packing companies, cattle breeders' association and other companies, firms and business men will be divided among the club members in prizes. Last year's show attracted national attention, and put Kentucky on the map as one of the leading states in beef cattle club work.

Calves will be shown from Garrard, Mercer, Warren, Marion, Fayette, Barren, Washington, Carroll, Lincoln, Wayne, Nicholas, Boyd and Caldwell counties where "baby" beef clubs are being conducted by county agents and the College of Agriculture extension division.

A total of $1,000 will be divided among the 10 best carlot exhibitors. The first prize of $250 will be given by the Louisville & Nashville Railroad Co., which will give $50 for the best calf, and $100 for the best carlot. The Fairbanks-Morse Co. will give $50 to the three best exhibitors of 5 calves each. There will be a ring termed economic production in which quality and finish and cost of production will figure. The L. & N. Railroad has offered $200 to be divided among the best winners in this ring. In another ring the record books of the contestants will determine the awards.

What has become of the pug dogs that once were the sign of affluence—that graced the hearthstone of many homes—That were a mark of aristocracy?

A New York newspaper writer says there are only two pug dogs in New York City. How the knows is beyond comprehension, but if he's right it's useless to try to locate a pug dog in Rush county.

Think what the present generation is missing in not having a pug dog in every home. For the benefit of young people who never had the companionship of a pug dog, a general description of a pug dog might be apropos.

A pug dog was just a pug dog—and that's about all that could be said for one. He derived his name from the fact, evidently, that he had a pug nose. Or perhaps pug noses got their name from pug dogs. That's too deep a question to go any further.

Although pug dogs, pugs were seldom playful. Hence, the word pugacious, meaning disposed to fight, and the noun, pugacity, meaning an inclination to fight. Hence, also, the sporting term, "pug," meaning a prize fighter.

Pug dogs always growled more than they barked. They were generally too lazy to bark. They grew fat with age and slept most of the time. Noah Webster called them pet dogs, but he probably never had one or he would have called it by another name.

It really isn't fair to label the pug dog any more when there is none of the breed left to uphold the fair name pugdom.

The difference between success and waste is judgment.

New Way to Stop Night Coughing

Those who have suffered the tortures of sleeplessness due to continual coughing at night, and who as a result often feel utterly worn-out and useless during the day, need no longer permit their systems to be weakened and their vitality sapped by this distressing ailment. For through a very simple treatment the trouble can be stopped almost at once, and people often get their full night's rest undisturbed after the very first trial.

Here is the method: Simply get a bottle of the prescription known as Dr. King's New Discovery from any good drug store. The night before retiring take one teaspoonful and hold it in your throat for 15 or 20 seconds before swallowing it. This prescription has a double action. It not only soothes and heals the soreness and irritation, but it quickly loosens and removes the phlegm and congestion which is the real cause of the cough. So your throat is left wonderfully soothed and cleared of irritating matter, you can sleep soundly and restfully, and the cough is usually gone in a very short time.

Dr. King's New Discovery is a remarkable remedy for coughs, chest colds, whooping cough, croup, bronchitis, laryngitis and bronchial asthma. At all good druggists. Ask for

PASTURE HELPS TO PRODUCE TON LITTER

Lewistown, Ky.—Ennicks Bros. members of the Kentucky Ton Litter Club being promoted by the College of Agriculture, raised 10 purebred Duroc Jerseys to weigh 2,460 lbs., when six months old. The pigs are on red top pasture and were fed corn, middlings and tankage. They gained an average of 1.8 pounds per pig daily after they were weaned, at a cost of $7.19 per 100 pounds. They were marketed for $10.75 per cwt., and hence returned a good profit. Every 56 pounds of grain fed the litter produced 13.1 pounds of gain. In other words, every bushel of grain marketed through the pigs brought $1.42. Ennicks Bros.' litter is but another demonstration that farmers may obtain an increased price for their grain by marketing it through hogs, provided they have good pasture, according to Prof. E. S. Good, head of the animal husbandry department of the College of Agriculture, County Agent J. E. McClure of Daviess county officially weighed the litter.

COLLEGE SHEEP AT THE INTERNATIONAL

Lexington, Ky.—The Ky. College of Agriculture and Experiment Station will show 23 sheep at the International Livestock Exposition in Chicago Nov. 30-Dec. 6. The flock will comprise an aged Cheviot ram, a Cheviot ram lamb, 6 Cheviot ewes, 4 Hampshire ewes, 5 South-down ewes, 3 Suffolk ewes and 5 grade ewes.

A flock exhibited by the college and station at last year's International won 3 reserve championships and 6 first prizes, and a total of 24 prizes on 16 head. The show flock this year, and for the last two years, was fitted by Harold Barber, who has showed 2 champions and 3 reserve champions at the International in the two years he has been shepherd for the college and experiment station.

Gilbert Sims, Mercer county farmer, estimates that treating his 41 lambs for stomach worms increased his profits by $150. County Agent J. R. Spencer assisted in drenching the lambs on July 24, after a buyer had refused to purchase them, on account of their condition. The four best lambs then averaged 66 pounds. They were drenched again in 10 days when they already showed improvement in condition. When marketed two weeks later they averaged 71 pounds.

50,000 IN LIFE-SAVING SERVICE OF RED CROSS

Additional 50,000 Water Safety Experts Probable Gain of Summer Campaign.

A boy watched an expert give a class a lesson in the way to revive a person unconscious from water immersion. The next day the boy tried it on a bathing companion and saved his life. Such a boy justifies all the effort and the cost of the Life-Saving Service, American Red Cross officials declare. The Red Cross method of restoring partly drowned persons is so simple that the continual large sacrifice of life must decrease as an informed public insists upon general instruction in prone pressure practice to induce respiration.

The Red Cross Life-Saving Service in every part of the country, autumn and winter, is engaged in teaching this method as an integral part of swimming and life-saving. This service has grown from a single expert in 1914 to a corps of almost 50,000 active life-savers. In this tenth year of the work it is predicted that the total 50,000 more experts will be eligible for membership in the corps. This large accession in a single year is confidently expected as the result of the campaign among 22,000 troops of Boy Scouts under a plan to qualify at least two life-guardians in each troop.

During the past year 4,746 men, 3,374 women, 3,731 boys and girls successfully passed the right tests of the Red Cross—an increase of 5,331 over 1923. Intensive instruction is developing hundreds of qualified examiners for the Red Cross Life-Saving Corps, who supplement the teaching staff maintained by the national organization. The cause of water safety is therefore penetrating to new sections and eventually will cover all American territory.

Recognition of this Red Cross service for humanity is growing rapidly. At the request of the War Department every military training camp had life-saving instruction last summer. Municipalities have adopted the Red Cross course, public and private schools are offering it to students, business, civic and athletic organizations are promoting campaigns, and police departments are making it a part of the conditioning process for their recruits.

Volunteer life-savers throughout the country, the American Red Cross reports, are eagerly advancing the cause of water safety, 315 volunteers receiving medals for giving from 200 to 300 hours' service in two or three years. In addition 36 rescue bars to medals were awarded members of the Red Cross Corps who saved one or more lives during the year.

It is for the purpose of extension of life-saving that continued support through membership is sought, and the American Red Cross urges all persons to join or renew membership during the enrollment campaign opening Armistice Day, November 11.

Red Cross Invites All Into Neutral Army of Service

There are 3,059 counties in the United States and more than 3,500 Chapters of the American Red Cross. The Chapter is the local unit of the national organization, formed to carry out the program, services and policies of the Red Cross. The industry of these 3,500 local units is a voluntary and steady outpouring of well-doing and sympathy which softens human suffering and distress wherever it arises. This work is absolutely neutral, for the Red Cross knows no race, no creed, no color.

The strength of the American Red Cross being in its Chapters, the organization annually invites the people to join or renew their membership during a Roll Call which always begins on Armistice Day, November 11.

"It is this annual enlistment of millions of Americans under the banner of the American Red Cross which makes possible the continued work of this great and democratic organization of mercy," says Judge John Barton Payne, head of the national organization. "Membership in the Red Cross is a privilege within the reach of everyone. The need for service grows more insistent each year. To keep pace with the demands which come from every section of our country, we must have the people's loyal support. Our capacity for service in the year to come will be limited only by the extent to which we receive support for our work in the coming Roll Call."

The invitation of the American Red Cross is unlimited. The enrollment period, Armistice Day to Thanksgiving, is everyone's opportunity to join.

Annual Summons to Service
The annual nation-wide Roll Call of the American Red Cross to enroll members for 1925 will open on Nov. 11, the anniversary of that tense and never-to-be-forgotten Armistice Day six years ago, which silenced the crashing arms of the World War. The enrollment will continue for 17 days, through Thanksgiving Day, Nov. 27. Preliminary to the Roll Call period will come Red Cross Sunday, Nov. 9. During the 17 days set aside for the enrollment more than 3,500 Chapters of the Red Cross and their thousands of branches will invite the people to join the Red Cross or renew their membership.

"Think not so much of what thou hast, not as of what thou hast, and of the things which thou hast, select the best and then reflect how eagerly they would have been sought if thou hadst them not."

SEASONABLE GOOD THINGS

Now that the luscious pineapple is so plentiful let us use it often in various dishes as well as "putting it up" for winter use. In preparing pineapple it is said that, cut from stem to blossom end, avoiding the core, the slices will be more delicious than when cut round.

Pineapple-Strawberry Cocktail.—Cut large berries in halves, put a few into cocktail glasses; sprinkle with powdered sugar and add crushed or grated pineapple to fill the glasses. On top place a whole, perfect berry. Chill thoroughly before serving.

Pineapple Fluff.—Take one pint of preserved pineapple; soak overnight with a pound of marshmallows, quartered. Whip one pint of double cream very stiff and add the other two ingredients; beat well to mix, and chill before serving.

Stuffed Tomatoes.—Select small-sized tomatoes, cut a slice from the top and remove the centers. Fill with chopped cucumber seasoned with onion and a bit of green pepper, if liked, and add salad dressing to taste. Fill the tomatoes and chill before serving.

Cheese and Pineapple Sandwiches.—Mash one large cream cheese; add one-quarter of a cupful of heavy cream, whipped. Add an equal measure of finely-chopped pineapple and, when well-mixed, spread on thin slices of bread which have been covered with mayonnaise dressing. Put together with a lettuce leaf dipped in mayonnaise.

Strawberry and Pineapple Jelly.—Soak two tablespoonsful of granulated gelatin in one-quarter of a cupful of cold water for five minutes. Place in a saucepan over the fire one cupful each of strawberry and pineapple juice. When the mixture boils stir in the gelatin and one-quarter cupful of sugar. Tinge with a bit of green coloring. Fill individual molds two-thirds full. When firm, drop in large strawberries dipped in sugar. Serve, when molded, with whipped cream.

WHAT TO HAVE FOR DINNER

"Since Eve ate apples, much depends on dinner." The planning of good dinners suitable to one's means and family is no small problem.

Filet of Beef With Vegetables.—Wipe a three-pound filet and remove the fat. Put a half-pound of butter in a hot frying pan and when melted add the filet and turn frequently until well seared and browned, then turn occasionally until well cooked—about thirty minutes. Remove the meat to a serving dish and garnish with a cupful each of peas and carrots cut into fancy shapes. Season well and add one-half pound of mushrooms sautéed in a little butter. Serve with:

Brown Mushroom Sauce.—Mushrooms are to be had for the gathering these days, as the fields are full of the delicious vegetable until frost comes. Take one-fourth cupful of the fat from the frying pan, add five tablespoonsful of flour and stir until well browned; add a cupful of soup stock, a third of a cupful of mushroom liquor and one-half pound of mushrooms which have been cooked in butter five minutes. Season with salt and pepper; just before serving add the remaining butter in the frying pan. The liquor of mushrooms is obtained by cooking the stems in cold water to cover. Simmer until reduced to one-third of a cupful.

Brained Beef.—Try out two thin slices of salt pork and remove the scraps. Wipe three pounds of beef cut from the rump and sprinkle with salt and pepper and flour; brown the surface in hot fat, turning carefully not to pierce the meat and allow the juices to escape. Place on a trivet in a deep earthen pan or baking dish and surround with the following vegetables: One-fourth of a cupful each of onion, turnip, celery and carrot cut fine; add a teaspoonful of salt and one-half teaspoonful of peppercorns. Cover with three cupfuls of boiling water and cover closely, cooking four hours. Hasten the meat every half hour, keeping the liquid at the simmering point. Serve with a brown sauce made from the liquor in the pan.

Forty-two per cent of the farmers in the United States blame their financial difficulties on the low prices of farm products, according to the Bears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation, which has completed a study of the primary factors affecting the financial difficulties of the farmer based on a survey made by the United States Department of Agriculture. Seventeen per cent of the farmers feel that high taxes are the direct cause of the farm depression, eleven per cent blame the high costs for farm labor, ten per cent feel that high freight rates are responsible, ten per cent blame the high interest, six per cent credit the depression to reckless expenditures during boom period, and four per cent think it was too much credit.

An inquiry made by the Department of Agriculture through both bankers and farmers shows that on an average 5 per cent of the farm owners in 15 corn and wheat-producing states lost their farms through foreclosure or bankruptcy during the late depression. Four and a half per cent more had turned over their farms to creditors without legal process, making a total of about 9.5 per cent who had lost their farms with or without legal proceedings. An additional 15 per cent were really bankrupt, but were holding on through the leniency of their creditors. By groups of states the percentage of owner-farmers who lost their farms since 1920 were as follows: Five East North Central states, nearly 6 per cent; seven North Central states, over 9 per cent; and for the three Mountain states nearly 20 per cent. The percentage of tenants who lost their property ran materially higher.

Records of the Department of Justice indicate that in the pre-war years, 5 per cent of all the bankruptcy cases were farmers. During the deflation 14 per cent of all bankruptcy cases were farmers. In some of these states where in pre-war years the farmer bankruptcy cases represented about 7 per cent of all such cases, this percentage in 1922 had risen to nearly 80 per cent. These losses have not been due to inefficiency on the part of the farmer, points out the Agricultural Foundation, as practically all of them were incurred by men who had been doing fairly well until they entered the period of drastic deflation.

Buying Power of the Farmer

The purchasing power of farm commodities continues to rise. Latest estimates show an average of 4.8 points higher for the first eleven months of this year than during the corresponding months of 1923, according to a report of the Bears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation, based on the new index numbers of farm prices prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.

Farm prices show a combined value of 134 on November 1, 1924, as compared with 100 in 1913. This combined index number includes 30 farm commodities which represent more than 90 per cent of the value of products sold by farmers, the Foundation points out. Using August, 1909, to July, 1914, as 100, the purchasing power of these products stood at 87 on November 1 of this year. In 1918 the purchasing power was 108, decreasing to 69 in 1921. In 1922 it rose to 74 and by 1923 the average stood at 78. During the first eleven months of this year the purchasing power of farm commodities averaged 82.5 as compared with 77.5 in the same period a year ago.

Advances in grain, which averages about 22 per cent of the total value of farm products sold, and in price of meat animals, which averages 27 per cent, have been the largest factors in the increase of the farmer's purchasing power since 1921. The grain farmer received during the early part of this year prices about 10 per cent above the pre-war five-year average. This had risen to 30 per cent increase by July. At the same time the general price level of commodities the farmer has to buy ranges 30 to 80 per cent above the 1913 level.

CHINA SHIPS MILLIONS OF EGGS TO U.S. EVEN WITH GREAT INCREASES IN OUR OWN EGG PRODUCTION AND A TARIFF WALL IMPORTATIONS ARE HEAVY.

Chinese hens are laying millions of dozens of eggs to be beaten into American cakes and candies, in spite of the increased height of the tariff wall. Enough Chinese eggs are coming into the United States annually to furnish approximately one dozen for every family. But the Chinese hen does not compete with the American hen in supplying the eggs for the breakfast table. Of the 23,710,000 dozen coming in last year practically all were in the dried or frozen form, according to the Bears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation.

The American hen cannot be accused of loafing on the job. In addition to furnishing all the eggs needed for American use, she produces a huge surplus for export. Last year this surplus amounted to 30,000,000 dozen—6,200,000 dozen more than were imported. The American exports were largely eggs in the shell, which sell at higher prices than the frozen and dried eggs from China.

In 1914, just a decade ago, there were 19,000,000 dozen Chinese eggs imported. By 1918 the imports totaled 22,400,000 dozen, and in 1920 the number had climbed to 21,600,000 dozen. In 1922, the year the tariff went into effect, only 25,827,000 dozen were imported. Last year the number was still further reduced, with only 23,710,000 dozen coming in.

Present prices are not especially attractive to imports. The demand is for strictly high quality eggs, the production of which for the home markets the American hen monopolizes.

OPEN POOL PLANTS DECEMBER 15-17

RECEIVING HOUSES OUTSIDE OF LEXINGTON READY FOR BUSINESS DEC. 17; ECONOMY ON PART OF GROWERS ADVISED.

Lexington, Ky.—Receiving plants of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Cooperative Association in Lexington will be opened to receive the tobacco of its members Dec. 15 and plants outside of Lexington on Dec. 17. It was announced at the offices of the association Saturday. Announcement that arrangements had been made for the financing of the 1924 crop and the payment to the growers of the usual advance on the delivery of their tobacco already had been made through the press of the burley district.

Growers who ship their tobacco in hogheads, instead of delivering by wagon or truck, are asked to separate the different grades by marking with paper or some other way, so that the grades may not be mixed in the hogheads.

It was said that the time of opening the receiving plants was delayed on account of the dry weather this fall and the consequent fact that not much tobacco has been stripped out and prepared for delivery to the association.

CAPT. D. W. BEDINGER

Too late to be reported in last week's issue, we received news of the sad death of Capt. David Wade Bedinger, who formerly resided near Richmond in this county.

He was plunged to instant death when the plane motor ceased to operate and caught fire. His death occurred on the flying field at Ft. Riley, Kansas, where he had been stationed since his return from the Philippines, where he was until recently.

John C. Bedd, of Walton, brother of the deceased officer, upon receipt of the message, went at once to Ft. Riley from whence he accompanied the body home where the remains were placed in charge of Undertaker C. Scott Chambers. Funeral services were conducted from Richmond Presbyterian church.

Capt. Bedinger was graduated from Centre College at Danville, Ky., in 1899, from whence he went to Miami University at Oxford, Ohio.

Capt. Bedinger leaves to mourn his loss several brothers and sisters and a host of other relatives and friends in this county.

The body of Captain David Wade Bedinger, aviation surgeon, who was killed when his airplane took fire while flying above Ft. Riley, Kansas, last Wednesday, was brought to Richmond, his old home, last Friday.

Funeral services were held Saturday in the little Presbyterian church where an airplane piloted by one of his comrades on the flying field at Ft. Riley, Kan., where he met death, circled above the edifice. The plane also flew above the depot when the train bearing Captain Bedinger's body drew into the station and escorted the funeral procession to the church.

BETTER THINK ABOUT THOSE PRESENTS

The real reason why such a disagreeable rush is being made at the post and express offices and stores at the holiday period, is that so many people put off selecting their gifts until the last moment. Some of course have no ready cash on hand and are forced to wait until the last minute before spending it.

But there are many more who have money ahead and could just as well make their gift purchases in November or early December. But as a result of a certain mental inertia, they fail to decide what they want. It will take until about ten days before Christmas before many of them will wake up and decide what would be suitable presents for their families and friends.

If people want to make suitable gifts they should put a little more heart into them, and keep them in mind for a longer time. If they would right now think what they want to give, they could decide within a few days and get the matter finished up where they would not have to worry about it.

Burlington radio fans received the programs broadcast by several of the foreign stations last week. Programs from WKAQ Porto Rico, and KGV Honolulu were also received. CXL Mexico City was received on a loud speaker. Programs were broadcast for this test by London, Aberdeen, Berlin, Paris, Cardiff, Brussels, Birmingham and others. The test made last week shows that international broadcasting is an established fact. Just think, at your own fireside in the good old U. S. A. and hearing a musical program in London.

Plucking Her Geese

EIGHT MONTHS IN JAIL

FOR THE KILLING OF JAMES SLAYBACK.

Harmon Smith, 40 years old, 615 Washington street, Covington, was found guilty of involuntary manslaughter by a jury in Judge Leslie T. Applegate's division of the Kenton Circuit Court, for the killing of James Slayback, 55 years old, 511 Montgomery street, Covington and was sentenced to serve a term of 8 months in jail.

Smith was indicted on a charge of willful murder by the Kenton county Grand Jury, for the killing of Slayback who was shot when in an argument between the two men at Sixth and Washington streets, Covington, the night of July 26.

Smith took the witness stand and made a plea of self defense. He asserted that on an afternoon of July 26, he purchased a bottle of liquor and had gone to his room on Washington street, where he met Slayback and his brother, James W. Smith, and another man. He asserted that after he and Slayback had drunk from the bottle Slayback demanded money of him which he refused to give. Slayback then threw him on the bed and after choking him took $3 from him.

Smith asserted that he had a gun in his hip pocket, and that after Slayback ran from the room he ran after him in an effort to secure his money. He asserted that the argument was renewed on the street, and that when Slayback attacked him he drew the gun and shot.

James Smith testified that when Slayback started to choke his brother he ran from the room and went to Covington fire department headquarters, nearby, and asked firemen to call police. He asserted that the firemen went to the scene after telling him to stay in the fire house.

Firemen told of reaching the scene in time to take the gun from Smith and to take Slayback to the hospital.

The case was tried in almost record time by the Court, it being the first murder case to be heard by Judge Leslie T. Applegate since he assumed office. Commonwealth Attorney Orris S. Ware conducted the prosecution, and Smith was represented by Attorneys Lewis F. Brown and E. L. McCutcheon. A jury was obtained in a short time, and the testimony and arguments were finished and the case given to the jury by 5 o'clock.

The jury deliberated only a short time before reaching a verdict of involuntary manslaughter.

1925 AUTO LICENSE PLATES NOW ON SALE AT COUNTY CLERK'S OFFICE

Fifteen hundred owners of automobiles in Boone county, Tuesday, Dec. 2nd, began buying license plates for 1925 at the County Clerk's office. The rates will be the same as last year and are based on weight and horse-power of the cars.

The new plates have figures larger than those in use this year, and light green over white figures and letters, and the hundreds and thousands are separated by a dash. The law requires that all motor vehicles have a new license plate by Jan. 1 if operation is desired.

And here's Christmas almost at us again. It seems as though it may have been but about four months since last Christmas. On the contrary in days of youth, it seemed almost an eternity from Christmas to Christmas. Christmas still comes but once a year, but the years are passing more rapidly. At any rate, it seems so.

CUT-OUT ORGANIZATION

OF BOONE COUNTY MEETS IN COURT HOUSE MONDAY AFTERNOON ON CALL OF CHAIRMAN

Pursuant to a call, issued by C. C. Sleet, of Beaver, county chairman of the cut-out organization, delegates from each precinct in the county met last Monday afternoon in the court house at 1:30 p. m., to re-discuss the important question of tobacco growing in 1925.

These delegates, five from each precinct, were selected by the growers of the respective precincts. Saturday afternoon, Nov. 29th, at 1 p. m.

Mr. Sleet was elected chairman of the organization in Boone county several weeks ago, when it had been ascertained after a series of mass meetings, that the sentiment in Boone county was overwhelmingly in favor of eliminating the growing of the weed next year.

Several fine speeches were made in favor of the movement as already launched by the growers in this county. Chairman Sleet said, "we are anxious to select a chairman from each precinct so that we may have a working organization. Boone county is overwhelmingly for this movement and we do not intend to be bluffed by a bunch of housemen and 'pin-hooks' such as assembled at Lexington in the anti-cut-out meeting."

R. J. Matson was elected secretary and J. G. Renaker, of Florence, treasurer of the organization. Money is being made up to finance the movement. Each precinct chairman reported his precinct as being decided in favor of a cut-out. A rising vote was taken and it was unanimous for the movement. There were about 150 growers present including delegates.

BOONE COUNTY BOY ON LEXINGTON HI FOOT BALL TEAM

Terrill Riley, a product of this county, was honored with a position on Lexington High School's fast foot ball team in its annual Thanksgiving game with Somerset High.

Terrill had been a substitute all season and had gotten into but one game this year previous to the game on Thanksgiving, but owing to the sickness of the regular right-half back young Riley was called into action for this entire important game, which was witnessed by thousands of people in State University's new stadium. He was one of the best ground gainers during the game. Though the boy is light, he makes up for it in determination.

Terrill is the eldest son of E. C. Riley, who is very well remembered in this county for his splendid efforts in behalf of Boone county's school system.

MISS LUCY GAINES.

Miss Lucy Gaines, who was stricken with paralysis two weeks ago, last Saturday, died at her home near Bullittsville, Friday night, Nov. 26, aged about 63 years. She was a daughter of Oscar Gaines and wife. She is survived by two brothers, Wm. and Wilson, and one sister, Miss Anna, with whom she made her home. Funeral services were conducted on Monday afternoon, Dec. 1, at Lebanon Lutheran church before a large concourse of relatives and friends, after which the remains were laid to rest in the Lebanon cemetery by the side of her father and mother. The brothers and sister have the sympathy of all in this their sad hour of bereavement.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to publicly thank our friends for their kindness and assistance during the sickness and death of my wife.

LOCAL HAPPENINGS

Bud "Otis" McKain, of Phoenix, Arizona, is visiting relatives and friends in Boone county. He spent Saturday and Sunday with Ed. Rice and wife in Burlington, where he met many of his boyhood "chums" of forty years ago. Mr. McKain was born in Boone county and for several years, with his mother and brother, lived in Burlington. They left Burlington in the eighties, going west, located at Phoenix, where his mother died last September. After a few weeks visit with relatives in the county he will go to Florida. "Otis," though somewhat older, looks well, and his friends and relatives were glad to meet and shake hands with him once more. Since leaving Boone he has been in many of the States, and it is real interesting to hear him tell of his travels.

The repair work on the Burlington and Florence pike has been completed by the State Highway Department. This work was done to put the road in condition for travel this winter. Bids were received at Frankfort last week for the reconstruction of this road, the work to begin in the spring of 1925. The lowest bid received for the work was just a little over $75,000. The road is to be rebuilt and covered with six inches of stone rolled and waterbound, and several new culverts are to be installed. After this work has been completed the state will put on a carpet treatment, consisting of tar and pea gravel or screenings. The road has been greatly improved and is now in good condition.

School was dismissed on Wednesday afternoon for Thanksgiving and did not take up until the following Monday.

The Parent-Teachers Association will hold its regular meeting on Friday afternoon, Dec. 5th, at 2:30 o'clock. An interesting program has been arranged and all interested in the school are urged to be present.

Edwin Walton was absent from school last week on account of sickness.

Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Smith and W. A. Smith and wife entertained the following guests Thanksgiving day: Irvin Rue and family, Grant Williamson and family and Martin Willamson of Burlington, Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Hughes and son, Stewart Blitt, Bert Smith and Gladys Smith of Newport. The men spent the day hunting. No mention need be made of the result of the hunt except that it was a success from a social standpoint.

These snappy nights the air is clear as crystal and the radio fans are having things all their own way.

It must be admitted that any grower has a legal right to raise tobacco in the face of a cut-out. He has the same right to say away from his neighbor if his house is on fire or his family is sick in bed, but there are very few who will take advantage of this legal right.

WHAT ARE WE DOING TO BETTER OUR FINANCIAL CONDITION IF THE RAVAGES OF MISFORTUNE AND OLD AGE SHOULD HIT US?

Hello! Young folks, I come within your circle once more, like our old friend, Jack Frost, on the first blast of winter's chilly breezes, with my usual little winter contribution in our good, old county paper—(may it live forever and a day, and then some) but—I hope I will not be as contrary, aggravating and capricious as He is sometimes, when He "nips" our fingers and toes, just for fun, you know, and thinks it but a nice little joke on you and me, and laughs in a riotous peep. As ever, I am ready, and willing to help to encourage the unwary feet of the young thoughtless and adventurous over the rough, uncertain and untrodden pathway of life, that is invariably strewn with flimsy, gaudy gilded gauze of veneering of pleasures full of pitfalls, that ever appeals to our human vanity, that looks so harmless, innocent and inexpensive financially, and is so alluring, many of these pleasures contain the very essence of the poisons of the Asp and Cobra the most deadly known reptile of the forests in permanent physical disease, which there is no escape from—death.

There are many pleasures in life that are good, wholesome, innocent and full of life-giving tonics to our bodily organs, for both body and mind; but, even these can be made harmful and injurious by over-indulgence, so as fear-borne agonies of life, we are permitted to choose our own destiny of life—either a long, happy and vigorous old age, a life of honor of deeds, that will outlast any so called everlasting monumental designs of marble that can be placed, after we have quit this mortal coil, or succumb to a short duration of life, made up of "nothings" of more or less of crimes emboldened of cunning, selfish greed, to be forgotten by those we loved best, almost before the awful "thud" of the clouds have ceased to sound over us, when we have returned to the elements, from whence we came.

Questions I have used for a title for this little writing, I think, should be worn as a "Frontlet," in the true old Jewish fashion, and upon the heart of every young reader, whether rich or poor, for Dame Fortune, is never steadfast, but very fickle and capricious in Her smiles. Oh! how often have we heard the shallow saying, which I consider criminal to the young minds—and, by supposed older friends, too, "Eat, Drink and be Happy while we can, while we are young, for that is all we will get out of life anyway." I can only answer, "Tempt not prosperity to day, for we know not the adversity of tomorrow" is not for us that, while we may be at the acme of popularity with our cultured, refined and wealthy friends, the petted and spoiled darling kings and queens on our base ball, foot ball, basketball, butterfly and lawn tennis courts today, by a little accident, a foot slip, or unusual twist of other bodily organs, we may be made helpless for life, dependent upon surgical skill for bodily ease, through the rest of our days, and, through misplaced investments, or other causes, our homes are swept away—(calamities rarely happen single)—"Is then, that Dame Fortune of good luck, is so fickle, as maybe we will never keep up, make sport and entertain the spoiled and pampered children of the 'Upper Tens' or 'Four Hundred' again, Dame Good Luck turns her smiles to more of a fertile soil, to bask in the Honor and Glory of the more fortunate of the present. LINCOLN TOOK PLENTY OF TIME ON GETTYSBURG TALK 'TIS SAID.

Urbana, Ill., Nov. 29.—Contrary to any general belief that Lincoln's Gettysburg address was either unprepared or a hastily written effort, it was a result of careful thought, and much work, according to Prof. Daniel Kilham Dodge, of the University of Illinois. He is convinced, after years of research work, that Lincoln's success in writing and speaking was the result of constant effort and that standard English to the Civil War President was an acquired dialect.

"It often has been assumed that Lincoln, like Goldsmith, was a master of English style by the grace of God and without special effort on his part," Prof. Dodge said. "Nothing could be further from the truth, for we have abundant evidence both internal and external, that Lincoln's success in writing and speaking, as in the practice of the law, was the result of constant effort."

"Just as he made thorough preparation of his law cases, studying his opponent's side as carefully as his own, never depending upon the inspiration of the moment, so he bestowed infinite pains upon the preparation of his speeches, generally writing them out in full and committing them to memory. He summed up his practice as an attorney in these words of advice to a law student: 'Work, work, work, that is the main thing.'"

"When he did speak without preparation, as with the short speeches on the journey to Washington in 1861 or the response to a serenade the evening before the delivery of the Gettysburg address, the result was anything but successful. Unlike Seward, he had not the tongue of a ready speaker. He realized this defect himself."

"This negative characteristic undoubtedly was due in part to the fact that standard English was an acquired dialect with him and therefore he lacked the spontaneity in its use of one to the manner born."

"But this defect also had its advantages and it is to a great extent responsible for his later complete mastery of the spoken word. It contributed to making Lincoln a progressive artist, advancing step by step from the crude 'Communique' of 1832, through the rather sophomoric efforts of the late thirties and early forties and the more restrained speeches of the fifties, to the mark of high literary distinction of the Cooper Institution Address, the two Inaugurals and the Gettysburg Address."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

PREVENTING NAIL BITING

Nail biting is a symptom of a condition and cannot therefore be considered a serious thing in itself. Biting the nails makes them grow out ragged and ugly but aside from this there is no special harm done except that the fingers carry dirt and germs to the mouth.

The habit of biting the nails is usually the result of a nervous or mental condition and the cause of such a condition must be looked for and corrected. Frequently nervousness in a child is the result of malnutrition of overfatigue due to lack of rest and sleep and to improper feeding. Or it may be due to poisons absorbed from infected teeth and gums, diseased tonsils or from eye strain. Sometimes an unhappy home condition with a child frightened or worried by family discord may be the cause of the nervous condition. The underlying cause of the child's nervousness must be discovered before any attempt is made to break a child from biting his nails. To do this may require a careful study of the child and his home surroundings; he should be weighed and measured to see if he is up to his weight for his height and years, he should have a complete physical examination and his health habits should be studied to see if he is getting sufficient rest, food and outdoor exercise.

After the cause of nervousness has been found it will be easier to break the child of the habit of biting his nails. When the habit is of long standing it may be necessary to apply splints or a stiff card board cuff to the elbows in such a manner as to prevent the fingers being brought to the mouth. Putting castor oil, linseed, red pepper, etc., on the fingers does practically no good.

It cannot be too strongly impressed that nail biting is the result of a physical condition which must be corrected, otherwise it is wiser not to talk to the child about the habit as it impresses it on his mind and may lead to disobedience and bad behavior.

THE ADVERTISING OF THE SEASON.

It takes a lot of money to engage in retail trade successfully today, to buy the large stocks of merchandise that must be carried at present high prices, and to have the ready cash and credit with which to pay the wages and other costs of the present time. Business men who go to all this heavy expense, and yet fail to take the necessary steps to market their goods, promptly through adequate advertising, would seem to be missing their best chances of success.

Many splendid business ventures fall short of being satisfactory, just because the proprietor has not the courage to finish up his job. The farmer may go to great expense to plant a crop and cultivate it until it gets up to a certain point well along toward harvest. Then some emergency may come up requiring some little additional expense, which is small compared with all he has previously expended. But this last call for money may daunt him, and he may fail to do this one little thing which would assure his final success. He may thereby suffer considerable loss, when with but a slight additional cost, his success would have been complete.

It is a good deal the same with advertising, particularly at this time of year when the merchants have so much invested in their winter and holiday stocks. A small proportion of their total sales applied to advertising should give them a big success, while without proper attention to publicity their results may be doubtful or unsatisfactory.

The newspapers are loaded at this time of year with advertising. The merchants can not expect to hold the trade that normally belongs to their home cities, unless they keep up with the splendid publicity work that is done in other centers that reach into their own territory.

IT IS NOW UP TO AMERICA

The action of Stanley Baldwin, the new British premier, in postponing consideration of the Geneva protocol, is looked upon as an effort to give America an opportunity to decide on a line of action on the question of armament reduction.

In France there has been talk of the substitution of a new plan but no action will be possible until England or America, one or the other, paves the way.

Senator Borah will undoubtedly take advantage of the opportunity to press his plan of making a declaration of war a violation of international law, which closely follows the League of Nations for the outlawry of war. The American State Department views all such matters as armament in a legalistic and official way. On the other hand Senator Borah, practically sure to be head of the Foreign Relations Committee is not afraid of enthusiasm. He likes a policy with a popular potentiality and wants an issue which will get the American people up on their toes. He contends that the World Court to be a genuine tribunal, must have written into the law a provision that war is not recognized as a legitimate method of settling international disputes. All war is a crime, and all real Christians will endorse the Senator's position.

MADE IN AMERICA

When you go down to the store some day between now and Christmas to buy toys for the little folks, there is only one remote chance that you will carry home any that were made outside of America.

It is not so long ago that most of the toys were made in Germany and millions of dollars of American money went to Europe, when it should have remained at home to provide capital for the employment of American labor.

The war changed all that. It shut off German imports, and if the Germans could have transported their toys to America's shores, the prejudices engendered by the war would have made their sale impossible.

Thus the American toy business was built up, and this year it will exceed $66,000,000 which was the record established in 1923. This does not include children's carriages, wagons and sleds made and sold in America last year, which brought the total up to more than $90,000,000.

This is a very substantial industry that should be supported by Americans as they come to the season when games and toys are purchased as gifts. It provides employment for thousands of men and women, who in turn spend their money for other American-made products and the produce of the farm, which thrives best under the stimulus of a good home market.

POWER OF THE RADIO VOICE.

It has been estimated by Dr. Alfred N. Goldsmith that a radio broadcast station is roughly a one-horse power. One half a ton from the ground to the height of thirty-three feet in one minute. The electric unit used in speaking of a broadcasting station is the "watt." It takes slightly less than 750 watts to make a horsepower. The average American broadcasting station radiates from 500 to 1,000 watts. It is calculated that the human ear is about as sensitive as the eye, so far as the amount of power required to give a definite sensation is concerned.

By radio the weakest voice, even a whisper, can be built up to a one-horse power voice. This means that the voice of a speaker broadcasting from the average station is increased over fifty million times. In other words, if everybody on earth were to get together and shout at once, the voice power produced would still fall far short of the strength of a voice broadcasting by the station. The world's call would be only about one-thirtieth as strong as that of the radiophone station. The power of the human voice, in loud speech or song, is only one-hundredth millionth of a watt. Yet this feeble power is sufficient to actuate a sensitive microphone and be heard almost around the world.

LEGALIZING 2.75 BEER

Encouraged by the decision of a Baltimore jury, which found that home made wine containing 11.64 per cent alcohol did not come under the prohibition law, wets in congress are reported to be organizing a new drive for modification of the Volstead act.

Fortunately for this country, Baltimore juries are not construing the law for us. The mere fact that this jury came to such a conclusion does not mean that such a construction of the Volstead act, with the predominant sentiment of the nation. Representative Hill, who proposed the case, has the power of the prohibition enforcement law is known as a leading wet, and his position probably had some effect on the jury's verdict.

The decision of twelve men in the Maryland court settled nothing. Those who fought so persistently for many years to make the manufacture of intoxicating liquor illegal, will not tolerate any tampering with the amendment to the constitution or the law that deals with its enforcement.

Women were outraged by legalized rum for decade upon decade and their pleadings were in vain. Now when a woman talks to a politician, he knows she has a vote, and that's the kind of language he understands. Wets may make their feeble assaults, but they are attached to a forlorn hope as long as the 19th amendment is in force.

THE NEW FARM COMMISSION.

President Coolidge has appointed a new commission to consider farm problems and attempt to place agriculture on a more stable basis, and the organization is to begin its work at once.

There have been so many investigations of agricultural conditions and such a vast amount of talk, that many farmers will be skeptical as to what will be accomplished by having one more commission go over this question. They will feel that once more there is likely to be a lot of talk and not much action. The commission may make some good suggestions, and then the whole thing may be put away in a big government report without anything being done by Congress.

It is probably true that the farmer's troubles are primarily economic, and only secondarily political. What they need first of all is better business methods and more scientific ideas of raising their products. The government can not solve this end of their problem, though it may be able to remove some obstacles, and possibly supply some capital for development that may be needed.

One great trouble has been in the past that there has been no unity of sentiment among the agricultural classes as to what they thought the government should do. It was once the dream of the Germans that when they got together, there were four opinions, and it has been about so with the farming classes. They must get together on some plan of action, so that there shall be a general demand for the same coming from all over the country.

Our public men must bear this truth in mind, that agriculture is the most important industry in the United States. The country can not possibly be prosperous unless the farmers and the country centers that depend on the farmers, are doing reasonably well.

THANKSGIVING

Long, long ago, in a strange land with only the Indians for friends, with the prospect of a long dreary winter before them, with half their former number dead, the Pilgrims offered thanks to their Father for their plentiful crops, for the freedom which they had found in this new land and for His kindness in protecting their thrifty band. Yes, they gave thanks whole-heartedly and gladly. But we, with our many comforts and luxuries, our great and powerful government, our times of peace and plenty, forget the Creator of all in our greed and egotism. If we had to endure the starvation, disease, loneliness and privation of the Pilgrims for only a few months, I fear many would curse Him who allowed such conditions to exist. But did Jesus not say "If ye abide in me and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will and it shall be done unto you?"

And again if the Pilgrims were living today, would they not be willing to offer any sacrifice for the comforts which they were enjoying? Everyone knows the story of their journeys and marvels at the complete faith which prompted them to leave their friends and relatives and, with a very small band, attempt to cross the huge body of water in boats which were none too safe and begin life in a strange land where there were scarcely any white people. They began civilization in this new country so that they might worship as they chose. They accomplished their aim and as we, their descendants, still enjoy that privilege ought we not

Thank God for rest, where none is lost.

And none can make afraid, For Peace that sits as Plenty's guest Beneath the homestead's eaves."

O favors every year made new, O gifts with rain and sunshine sent The bounty overruns our due, The fullness shames our discontent.

MAKING GOLD FROM DROSS.

The modern scientist announces that the centuries-old quest of transmuting dross into gold has been realized. It is claimed that a fusing heat supplied by a current of 176 volts of electricity, in conjunction with a quartz lamp, will convert quicksilver into gold. On the other hand chemical and mineral experts announce that transmutation might be possible under three millions of volts, and assert the claim of 176 volts. Even though transmutation should prove practical, what would be the benefit? Gold and diamonds and precious stones are only valuable because of their scarcity. If iron were as scarce as gold it would probably be equally valuable. From a practical standpoint iron is even more valuable than gold and granite and limestone more useful and indispensable than diamonds.

On the other hand it is not so long since Darius Green and his flying machines were ridiculed to the point of effacement, but the flying machine promises to soon revolutionize the business and transportation systems of the world.

So, too, gold, if made plentiful, might result in still other beneficial changes in a cumbersome and oftentimes dangerous business system.

RURAL CHURCHES

The rural school is a failure and asinine denominationalism is the cause.

This is the indictment returned against the religious denominations at the annual conference of the American Country Life association in Columbus, Ohio.

And there are few, even though they be strong denominationalists, but that will admit there is some ground for the indictment.

In a rural life where consolidated schools, unified farm bureaus and co-operative marketing associations have been developed, the church stands as the only community organization that is divided.

Everyone has seen the tragedy of the failing rural churches in the bleak, stark abandoned church buildings that may be found in many rural communities.

Left to their own resources, without the interference of countless denominational officials, most communities would unite on a church that would serve the needs of all the people.

But perhaps the rural churches need an example from their big city brothers.

Only twenty-one days until Christmas.

KENTUCKY MASTODONS

The discovery by a Gallatin countian of a fossilized mastodon jaw with three perfect teeth attached, in the dry bed of a creek near his home at Sparta, appears to prove that these prehistoric animals lived and died elsewhere in Kentucky than at Big Bone Lick, Boone county. For nearly 200 years Big Bone Lick has been known as a cemetery for the gigantic mammoth and for the mastodon, which apparently lived and died together, as they remains have been found buried side by side in the marshy alluvium by the lick.

There is no human record of any of these animals, although from rude carvings found on their bones, it is believed that they existed in the age of man. Big Bone Lick was found and described as early as 1729. The Indians frequented the lick, not only to ambush game but to manufacture salt for their winter's use. It was at Big Bone Lick that Mrs. Mary Ingles, the first white woman in Kentucky, escaped from the Shawnees who had taken her prisoner nearly five months before at her home on the Kanawha River. The story of her escape relates that she procured, just before she fled a tomahawk from a Frenchman who sat on a mammoth's skull cracking walnuts.

Christopher Gist, the surveyor and explorer who went into the Ohio country in 1775, writes of obtaining two teeth from traders who had just come from Kentucky. He was a little confused as to the location of the lick, which he placed "upon a small creek which runs into the S side of the Ohio about 15 miles below the mouth of the great Miami River, and about 20 miles above the Falls of the Ohio." Big Bone creek, of course, is much farther up the stream from Louisville than twenty miles. The lick is about three miles from the river and hundreds of skeletons of these extinct animals have been taken from the vicinity. The hunter who described his find to Gist spoke of the tusks, "which he called horns, and said they were upward of five feet long and as much as a man could well carry."

Big Bone Lick, the burial place of these huge pachyderms of another age, has contributed much to geologic and zoological lore.—C.-J.

WINTER EXERCISE

The physical culture experts tell us we must keep up physical exercise through the winter as well as summer. To which men reply that their daily work gives them all the exercise they need.

Also the majority of the women folks say that their housework gives them all the physical development they can stand, and they too want to occupy a stuffed chair at home or elsewhere.

A lot of these folks get into a sluggish habit through the winter. Their supposed weariness may come from the fact that all their energy is expended in their work. Some of them would be helped if they would put themselves out of their easy chairs and do some active stunts like bowling. And it would do a lot of them good just to walk a couple of miles or more before or after an evening meal. The human constitution needs the application of a little leg power to make its wheels turn around.

WAR ORPHANS

The American Legion is about to issue an appeal for orphaned children of World War veterans. There are said to be 5,000 of these helpless little ones who need care. They are a casualty of the war who should be looked after just as much as the disabled soldiers.

The war deprived many families of the earning power of their breadwinners. Had these men never had to go to war, their children would be well off for today. The country is in debt for the sacrifice of these men, and their children are the ones to whom the debt should be paid.

Such a need is a test of the good spirit of our country. We have received the benefits that came from the service of the soldiers. Now it is up to us to see that we appreciate all the noble sacrifice that was made and the courage that was shown.

Mrs. Fraulien Allison, Dead.

Mrs. Allison is survived by one brother E. A. Allison of Carlisle, Ky., besides two granddaughters to mourn her loss.

Undertaker Philip Taliaferro had charge of the funeral arrangements.

Frank Allen, of Big Bone neighborhood, and Fred Hell, of Point Pleasant neighborhood, while attending court Monday, called at our sanetum and had their subscription pushed up another year.

MORE APPLE SHOWS

FOR NORTHERN KENTUCKY

Covington, Ky.—The recent northern Kentucky apple show held here was so successful that plans are already being made for a show next year. Liston Hemphling of Boone county, Edward Neumeister of Kenton county and Charles Grazian of Campbell county, northern Kentucky fruit growers, comprise next year's show committee.

The two-day show and show course was held under the direction of the Kentucky College of Agriculture, the Kentucky State Horticultural Society, the Louisville & Nashville Railroad Co., the Covington Industrial Club and business firms of northern Kentucky and Cincinnati. From 60 to 125 growers attended each meeting, and good-sized crowds saw the exhibits.

Two hundred trays and 400 plates of apples were exhibited. Liston Hemphling won the sweepstake prize in the tray class, and Edward Neumeister in the plate class. An exhibit of 30 apple pies was a unique feature of the show. Prof. C. W. Mathews of the University of Kentucky and Frank Beach of the Ohio State University were the judges. Frederick Schaber, Alexandria, Ky., was secretary-treasurer of the show.

Among the speakers at the show course were Mayor Daniel O'Donnell of Covington, Secretary Ben E. Niles of the Kentucky State Horticultural Society, C. J. Hayden of the L. & N. Railroad Co., Prof. Beach, Prof. Mathews, W. W. Magill of the College of Agriculture, County agts. C. A. Wicklund, R. J. Matson and H. F. Link of Kenton county, Boone county and Campbell county, respectively, and the following fruit growers: Frank Rouse, Chas. Grazian, Chas. Kelly, Mike Schumacker, Henry Dickens, B. W. Scott and Geo. Eubanks.

APATHY DECREASES

The national apathy that has been growing with each succeeding general election was checked this year with a comprehensive Get-Out-The-Vote campaign, that, according to unofficial returns, with many districts missing, resulted in a gain of almost four per cent in the percentage of votes cast.

The crusade was carried on by scores of non-political organizations such as fraternal orders and lunch clubs, as a patriotic duty, because in a nation in which less than fifty per cent of the electorate participates in the selection of a chief executive, there is danger ahead.

Demagogues have thrived because the apathy has become so pronounced, because a lack of interest on the part of voters permits them to take advantage of ignorance and intolerance.

The campaign rolled up an increase of 15,000,000 votes—which was twenty-five per cent more than the increase in eligible voters over four years ago.

More than 400 persons carrying concealed weapons were arrested in Chicago in one day last week, as a result of Mayor Devers drastic order to "clean out the gunmen."

Terrorized by killings, safe blowings, highway robberies, and other forms of crime, the people of that city are demanding action, which the authorities finally seem disposed to take, with a view to relieving the intolerable situation. The first step is very properly directed towards disarming the criminal element, more than 1,000 of whom were jailed in a few days.

One thing is responsible for most of the homicides recorded from day today. A man who habitually carries a gun in a civilized community is generally a coward or a criminal—often both. The habit is a national menace and will continue to be until restrictions are placed on the manufacture and sale of firearms.

As in existing development of the present Chicago situation was the announcement by one of the leading head order houses that it would no longer sell firearms of any description.

In your article under heading "Fruit Growers" in Recorder received there is an error in the list of premiums awarded to me. Only seven are stated and there should be fifteen. Following is the correct list:

COUNTY COURT CLERK

We are authorized to announce
NEWTON SULLIVAN, JR.

as a candidate for County Court Clerk of Boone county, subject to the action of the Democratic Primary Election, August 1st, 1928.

NOTICE.

The Democrats in Boone county will assemble in their respective precincts Saturday, Dec. 6th, at 1 p. m., and proceed to elect a precinct committee to serve for four years. One person from each of the twelve precincts will be elected. All persons who voted for and supported the Democratic ticket at the November 1924 election are entitled to participate in the meeting. The committee selected at those meetings will meet in the Court House in Burlington, Saturday, Dec. 13th, 1924, at 1:30 p. m., and elect a chairman, secretary and many such other business as may be necessary.

G. W. TOLIN.

Chairman Democratic Committee for Boone County.

No doubt many young men and old folks too would do well to heed the signal, Danger, Go Slow. This is a good motto for those who operate the little Ford, good for these young folks who are just reaching manhood and womanhood.

Some folks, when they get seated behind the steering wheel of a "car," lose what good sense they ever had, if any. If many a man had gone slow he would be living still, if many a woman had gone slow, she perhaps would not have become penniless, if many a boy had gone slow he perhaps would have finished education and made a good solid citizen.

County and town officials should see that signals are put up at short bends to read, "Danger, Go Slow" for those who do not know enough to do so without warning.

Some one has compiled a list of the monuments erected to the glory and memory of nearly every department connected with the active prosecution of the war—except the nurses who worked themselves to death caring for the sick and wounded. Then there was the Salvation Army lass and her life-saving doughnut right back of the line. A national monument to her would be a statue that every doughboy would salute, isn't it time the woman's war work be recognized?

The Chamber of Commerce of the United States has filed with President Coolidge a protest against the publicity of income taxes paid and demanding the immediate repeal of the publicity provision of the law of 1924. The Chamber calls particular attention to the fact that President Coolidge was opposed to the provision and had insisted that American institutions guarantee to citizens sanctity in their private affairs.

Florence King Harding, widow of Warren G. Harding, twenty-ninth president of the United States, passed away at Marion, Ohio, on Friday last. As the wife of a senator for six years she won a reputation as a gracious hostess and a wholehearted and democratic participant in many public charities. During her brief tenure as mistress of the White House she made many warm friends and the grief at her death is sincere, deep and universal.

"Golden Rule Sunday" will be observed Dec. 7. On this day Americans will be asked to observe the day by entering a dinner costing no more than 1 cent and giving the balance of what they ordinarily would have spent on the meal toward relief work in the Near East.

The National Grange demands that electric light and power be furnished not only to farmers, but to all customers at the same through super-construction and operation of super-power plants. Evidently the Grange does not fear being classed as "radical."

The Giants and the White Sox are coming home from their European trip discouraged over receptions given on the continent. The trouble seemed to be that European "fans" were all in America.

Many of the men of Boone county have been celebrating the hunting season by hunting through the cloths for their winter overcoats, which are usually just where they put them last spring.

A friend inquires what "folk songs" are. Well, you can hear them every morning when the folks sing after the men, "Don't forget the yeast cake."

If the students are asked what have been the great historic events of 1924, they will probably give several of the foot ball scores.

Some of these loud hollers at the foot ball games could get a job doing the political campaigns shouting for the candidates.

Every man for his job. A street sweeper, if he does his work right, is just as essential as the man who builds streets.

The men have been willing to work pretty regularly since they had these good looking stenographers.

AND BEHOLD

The Prodigal Wants to Dictate to The Family

The story has many times been told of the dissatisfied son, who, thinking that he could increase his fortune in other fields, on his own responsibility, left his parental fire-side for these selfish reasons. The story goes that the young man soon found that there was more truth than poetry in the old proverb—"All is not gold that glitters"—and he returned home begging forgiveness, dejected and empty handed. He was then indeed ready to recast his lot with the remainder of the family. He had not looked far enough into the future, when he left he knew not where he was going, nor what he was going to do when he arrived.

This is the version of what once really happened as it is recorded in the holy writ, and the parallel of the story is happening every day in this world of ours. As we say, the above is a true version, but, dear reader, what do you think that family of the long, long ago, would have done if that son, upon his return, instead of falling upon his knees, when yet afar off, in the penitential attitude that he did, had walked boldly in and said—"Look here I see things have not been going to suit me since I have been gone, I am going to take charge here now and see that affairs are conducted aright?"

You might think it impossible that a son would act like this, but some prodigal sons are queer individuals.

Here is the present day version of the prodigal son story, read it and weep. A certain man was part and parcel of a very old political family. Like the prodigal son of old he thought he could see a brilliant future in store for him in another field, so he ventured forth upon his own responsibility, just as the other boy did. Well he learned his lesson too. But here the story is slipped into reverse, and the young man upon his return walks brazenly up to the door and says—"Let me in I want to run the house."

The young man's name is Wm. H. Bornhorst, and the family is the Democratic party. Every Democrat knows the story—Mr. Bornhorst did even worse than the ancient prodigal when he attempted to outwit his own brothers HON. A. B. ROUSE. He sadly failed, and is now trying to get back by the old Democratic fireside, and in doing so is shocking the whole family when he says to W. N. Hind, Chairman of the Sixth District Executive Committee—"Move over Bill, and give me fire up."

What do you think the family should say? It's a joke.

KENTUCKY JERSEYS MAKE BIG RECORDS

Raleigh's Irma Oxford, owned by R. C. Tway Jefferson county, and tested under the supervision of the dairy department of the University of Kentucky, is the new junior three year-old Jersey champion of Kentucky. She has just completed a record of 663 pounds of butterfat and 14,057 pounds of milk in 365 days. She raised the former state record for this class by nearly 100 pounds. She produced more than 50 pounds of butterfat in each of nine months, and reached her peak in her eleventh month, when she produced 74 lbs.

Second place for all Kentucky Jerseys is now held by Jolly's Dewdrop, a six-year-old cow owned by Harry Hartke, Kenton county, which recently completed a record of 15,596 pounds of milk and 781 pounds of butterfat. This is an average production of five gallons of milk and 2 pounds of butterfat daily for a whole year. Needless to say Jolly's Dewdrop was well fed, and returned a good profit for the feed the consumer. Good comments Prof. J. J. Hooper, head of the dairy department of the University of Kentucky. She was given a little extra care in being milked and fed three times daily.

Valentine's Dora Nea, owned by Perrault Bros., Mason county, by producing 10,028 pounds of milk and 641 pounds of butterfat, recently became the senior four-year-old champion of the state. She also still holds the junior two-year-old state record of 522 pounds of butterfat.

Twenty-two Kentucky cows on official test produced 3 pounds of butterfat each in two days in October. Jolly's Dewdrop led the list by producing more than 5 pounds. Leader's Silver, a Jersey owned by Perrault Bros., was second. Seventy-two Jerseys, 20 Holstein-Friesians and 1 Guernsey were on test in October. Twenty-five per cent of the total number made the honor list.

USING ONE'S HANDS

The old fashioned country school paid little or no attention to teaching young people to work with their hands. It considered that their job was simply to train the mind. It considered that training the hands was the business of the homes where these young people came from.

But many of these homes were too busy to train the young folks in mechanical skill and often they did not know how to train them. The old folks thought it was easier to do things themselves than to break the young folks in. The result was that millions of young people who came up without any manual skill, which they needed to make a success in country enterprises, went off to the cities and took the jobs. Modern education must fit its young folks better for rural conditions.

We never advocate that people should vote for a woman simply because she is a woman, but we do wish that they would get over the idea that women are not as capable as men. If voters would only give the benefit of the doubt and look in to qualifications, a great many more women would hold office. There are women in every branch of professional and business life who are known to be eminently successful, yet the general feeling is that an elective job is too big for them to handle.

Since the tumult and shouting of the recent elections have died, people are beginning to realize what an important part women had played in the drama; not only in voting and campaigning, but also in winning elective office. Two women have won governorships, at least eighty-eight women have been returned to the state legislatures of the nation and one to congress while another was elected a secretary of state. To be sure a great many of those who ran for office did not win—but there is significance in the fact that so many were nominated and that there and there they did win. In twenty-two of these United States women entered the competition for state offices. In eleven, women were nominated for congress. This much has been accomplished within a brief four years toward recognizing the capabilities of the formed stay-at-homes. What does the future hold? And what has this year's history-making meant to the women of the country as a whole?

KENTUCKY FAVORED IN LAMB PRODUCTION.

Kentucky occupies an advantageous position in the production of spring lambs, and, by maintaining and improving the quality of their lambs, sheepmen in this state have before them an almost unlimited field for a profitable business. Practically the sole problem is to produce a high quality of lamb, buyers and butchers told breeders.

The demand for prime spring lamb exceeds the supply in eastern cities, according to H. K. Nickell of New York, and will continue to increase. It provided a high quality product can be secured. His company buys thousands of Kentucky lambs and considers them among the best. Other packer representatives, butchers and buyers voiced similar sentiments.

The keynote of the conference was the production of better lambs and their standardization. The best lambs are sired by purebred rams, and are docked and trimmed, according to speakers. The College of Agriculture extension service has gathered figures which show that such lambs grade better and sell at higher prices than those sired by scrub rams, and not docked or trimmed.

An extensive campaign is being conducted to encourage the production of more and better lambs in the State. Since Kentucky is favored in lamb production, she should take advantage of the opportunities offered, Dean Thomas P. Cooper of the College of Agriculture emphasized. It was brought out at the conference that sheep and lambs have been selling this year at 85 per cent above their average price in 1913, while cattle have averaged only 17 per cent higher, and hogs are bringing about their prewar price.

SPECIAL SONG BOOK FOR BOYS' AND GIRLS' CLUBS

A special song book for junior farmers and homemakers, members of boys' and girls' clubs, containing more than 150 songs that have sowed the seed of truth, has been completed by Miss Anita Burnham of the College extension division.

It contains patriotic and folk songs, a few standard hymns, Christmas carols, club parodies and rounds, and the new state club song, entitled "The Kentucky Junior Clubs." This song was written especially for boys and girls' clubs by Miss Jessie F. Caswell of the University of Kentucky, with the music by Mrs. Isabelle C. Hutson.

Kentucky is said to be the first state to have a song book containing both words and accompaniment. This book is not only the first of its kind, but is the largest collection of club songs now in print, according to Miss Burnham.

While the song book was designed primarily for club work, yet it is suitable for general gatherings. Miss Burnham said it contains many songs enjoyed by old and young. More than 2,500 copies of the book already have been sold. Many school teachers, county superintendents and others have sent in orders. Only a nominal price is charged. Miss Burnham is receiving orders through the College of Agriculture.

The Kensington Rune Stone, one of the oldest records in American history, was discovered near Kensington, Minnesota, and appears to be very ancient in character. The assumption of the scientists who have been puzzling over its genuine-ness is that it was inscribed and left here by the Norsemen who were exploring this country as early as the year 1362.

New Way to Quickly Stop Worst Cough

A remarkable new and simple method for treating a cough gives relief with the first doses and usually cures a severe cough in 24 hours. The treatment is based on the principle known as Dr. King's New Discovery for Coughs. You take just one teaspoonful and hold it in your throat for 15 or 20 seconds before swallowing, without eating or drinking. The prescription has a double action. It not only soothes and heals soreness and irritation, but it quickly loosens and removes the phlegm and congestion which are the direct cause of the coughing. People have been astonished how quickly the coughing stopped with this new treatment, and the whole cough condition goes in a very short time.

The prescription is for coughs, chest soreness, whooping cough, spasmodic croup, etc. It is excellent for children as well as grown-ups—no harmful drugs. Economical, too, as it costs only one teaspoonful. At all good druggists. Ask for DR. KING'S NEW DISCOVERY FOR COUGHS.

PITY THE POOR POSTMAN

Now comes the season of the year when we search our failing memory in vain for the names of the folks who have sent the handsomely engraved greeting cards last year; when we try to decide whether we should try to match the gift that came late last year, and when the poor postman looks forward to the unhappy days and wonders if he can hold out.

Pity the poor postman! Give him a chance to get through another holiday season without becoming round shouldered and bow-legged from carrying the heavy loads with which we burden him just before Christmas.

Mail them early and not any more frequently than you have to. And remember, also, to wrap and pack them correctly. Then Uncle Sam will have no quarrel with you.

It's entirely proper too, if you want to make your friends and relatives real curious, to write on the parcel, "Please do not open until Christmas."

And above all other things, if you have the Christmas things, if you have the Christmas greeting card complex and want to send every one a card, go on Christmas eve and slip them under the door.

Then the postman may have a chance to eat turkey at the regular hour Christmas day.

HOGS RETURN PROFIT WHILE HARVESTING CORN

Hogs harvested a field of corn for R. H. Meng, a farmer living near here, saved him the work and expense of gathering and marketing the crop, and at the same time got for him more than the market price for corn, according to County Agent Homer J. Kline of Warren county and Grady Sellard of the College of Agriculture extension division.

Mr. Meng hogged down 13 acres of corn and soybeans. Six pounds of Haberlandt beans were planted between the corn rows. On August 25 fifty hogs were turned into the field. They had access to mineral mixture, but received no other feed. In 31 days they gained a total of 3,989 pounds or more than 2 1/2 pounds each daily.

The hogs were then marketed at an average of $9.85 per 100 pounds. For both corn and soybeans, Mr. Meng received $1.11 per bushel. Not counting the beans, he marketed his corn for $1.20 a bushel. In addition, he saved the work and expense of harvesting the crop. The hogs were purebred Spotted Poland Chinas.

FORCES OF PROGRESS

Two kinds of effort must be prominent in any attempt to push ahead a country town. First, an active group of people who are willing to work to accomplish results. Second, some powerful agency which shall arouse the rank and file of the people to take hold and assist that effort.

No small town can expect to make much progress unless it has some element of active pushers who will take the initiative and organize needed movements. Country towns do not grow just because of wishing.

The country newspaper stands ready to perform a big share of the second phase of work, by communicating the news of progressive movements to the people, and presenting the local causes in a favorable light. Hence a successful country newspaper is one of the essentials in country town progress.

RECORD DISASTER YEAR KEPT RED CROSS BUSY

In 192 Places in United States Its Relief Operations Cost $737,603.

One hundred and ninety-two disasters resulting in 735 deaths and injury to 1,933 persons, rendering nearly 44,000 homeless and causing property losses estimated at more than $44,750,000, established a new record in the United States in the year ended last June 30, according to reports of the American Red Cross. In all of these disasters immediately relief activity was applied by the Red Cross, which expended $737,603.37 through the national organization and the local chapters in assisting stricken communities.

As the nation's chief relief agency, whose service covers over 48 years, the Red Cross is expected to be on duty almost as soon as disaster strikes any locality. This trust and confidence is amply justified by the increasing equipment of the Red Cross, which has recently organized a mobile disaster unit of experienced workers ready in all parts of the country to respond on the instant to a call for active duty. This unit is capable of operating in several disaster areas under one general direction, and recently was at work in seven communities in five states at the same time.

Ability, alertness and increasing skill of volunteer workers in more than 3,500 chapters are reasons for the preparedness of Red Cross for disaster operations, be the call for a disturbance in a restricted local area or for millions in relief funds for a staggering catastrophe such as the earthquake in Japan.

The Red Cross, however, is far from being self-satisfied, for the organization is giving the most serious consideration to measures for preventing disasters. Its relief fund for reconstruction and rehabilitation policies have won for it nation-wide regard. That this important work can always measure up to every demand needs the continued support of the American people through Red Cross membership. The annual enrollment will begin Armistice Day, November 11, and every American is urged to join or renew membership, in the Red Cross.

Help yourself by helping others with your dollar Red Cross membership. The dividend in good works is guaranteed.

Frenchmen who hear American theater-goers demanding "encores" must be considerably surprised. "Encore" is used in French to mean "bis." The French audience who wish a number repeated shout "bis," which means "twice." "Bis" is also used in music when the chorus of a song is to be repeated. "Encore" is an example of the change in meaning which frequently accompanies the Americanization of words.

THE FIRST CHAPTER

Kentucky is now officially operating under the pay-as-you-go plan. Roads will be built only as the revenue in hand permits contracts to be awarded. No means exist for improvement of the State's penal, charitable and educational institutions. And the governor of Kentucky, in obedience to the mandate of the people, will see that the State lives strictly within its resources. Completed returns now show that the $75,000,000 bond issue, by which a great progressive program for the state would have been inaugurated, was beaten by a majority of 98,466.

The first chapter in the pay-as-you-go scheme is a blank page.

There are no funds available for road-building and there will be not in the near future. Therefore, road-building will cease.

There are no funds available to improve the Reformatory at Frankfort. Therefore, convicts will continue to sleep two a cell under conditions which are barbaric.

There are no funds available to enlarge the Feeble-minded Institute. Therefore, a great many feeble-minded persons now roaming the state will continue to do so, committing whatever crimes, such as attacking women on the streets, comes into their heads.

Incorrigible boys and girls will continue to occupy the same campus at Greendale. Thousands of insane persons, crowded into the state's three hospitals, daily are under the risk of a fire which would probably be a holocaust.

The University of Kentucky will continue to run away from higher education's sons and daughters of Kentuckians who pay taxes to support the university. Teachers in the rural sections will remain abominably paid. Schoolhouses will continue to be unfit for the stabling of cattle, to say nothing of being unfit for the education of young children.

These are the circumstances under which the pay-as-you-go system makes its debut.

It is the duty of the governor of the State to divert revenue for the eradication of these conditions only as money is available. Most of the money that comes into the treasury must be used for current expenses, with little or nothing left over to make the capital improvements needed. Thus it is extremely questionable whether any State improvement can be made or quite soon.

The governor will observe his duty in contracting no expenses for which revenue is not available. However, he is open to suggestion. "If any citizen of our Commonwealth," says he, "can suggest a feasible method for financing these needed improvements, I shall gladly give same my unstinted support."

Magicians are out of date. Therefore, the Post doubts whether such a plan will be forthcoming.

Lacking such a miraculous method, the pay-as-you-go plan will be marked by an indefinite period of utter inaction.—Louisville Post.

SUPPORT THE HOME PAPER

A news bureau recently sent out a list of cities and towns which were offering special inducements for industrial enterprises. Eight states were represented and in every instance those who might be interested were advised to address inquiries to the editor of the home towns newspaper.

This is but one example of how the home town newspaper is always on duty; how it is constantly striving to better the community which it serves, not for any selfish purpose, but because it has the welfare of the community at heart.

The home town newspaper is the beacon light that reflects the glory of the people and the natural advantages that the town possesses. It is ever alert to opportunities for progress.

Countless numbers of town would be a dismal failure without a newspaper. Their light would be hidden under a bushel, never to shine forth and become the danger to come in.

Everyone recognizes the value of a newspaper and the unselfish work that it does in building up the community, but all too few show their appreciation in a substantial way.

With the revenue from subscriptions alone, no newspaper can live, but every person should be a subscriber and thus lend their support to an enterprise that always puts the best interests of the community before every other consideration.

From those who are first to benefit from the constant efforts of the newspaper, the merchants, should come to the financial support that is the first essential in publishing a newspaper.

This newspaper or any other newspaper can not continue to be the standard by which the community is judged without advertising patronage. Advertising must be forthcoming if the newspaper is to continue as the medium which the community expresses itself; if it is to go on as the advance agent for the people, weekly performing a public service that no other agency is willing to or can perform.

Support the home newspaper for your own good as well as for the good of every person living here.

If thou takest a wife, let her be more contented than any of her fellow citizens. She will be attached to thee doubly, if her chain is pleasant. Do not repel her; grant that which pleases her; it is to her contentment that she appreciates thy direction.—Proverbs of Pith-Hotep, about 3500 B. C.

Cough Remedy Mother Gave Us Still Best

Pine Tar and Honey Bait

All Modern Drugs

In thousands of families it has been the custom for many years to keep pine tar and honey always on hand for coughs, chest colds, bronchitis, spasmodic croup, and throat irritations. Our mothers knew that it was good, that it often broke up the worst cough in 24 hours, and that it could be given to young and old alike, as it contains no narcotics or harmful drugs.

And now we are told that in spite of the fact that modern medicine is still no better or quicker cough remedy, doctors say the pine tar quickly loosens and removes the phlegm and congestion that cause the coughing, also healing soreness while the honey not only gives a pleasant taste, but helps soothe irritation.

The original compound, made up many years ago and used by millions of people, was Dr. Bell's Pine Tar Honey. This is scientifically composed of just the right proportions of pine tar, honey and other quick-acting cough healing ingredients which the best doctors have found the original and the best; be sure and no other. Only 30c. at any good druggist.

TUBERCULOSIS STORY — FIRST OF SERIES

Kentucky's pennies have been called on to fight the white plague—65,000,000 of them.

The quota of Kentucky in the sale of Christmas seals, the little stickers that adorn Santa Claus' gifts, has been fixed at $60,000 as this State's share in the battle to eliminate tuberculosis. The headquarters of the Christmas Seal Sales are the Kentucky Tuberculosis Association, 532 West Main Street, Louisville with Dr. J. S. Lock, executive secretary in charge.

The Christmas Seal with its double barred red cross, the emblem of the National Tuberculosis Association which is familiar in every corner of the nation, dates to an idea of a Danish postmaster in 1903. However the idea did not reach America until 1907 when the first efforts at selling the little penny seals were in behalf of a Delaware tuberculosis sanatorium and brought in $10,000.

The originator was Einar Holboell, postmaster in a small town in Denmark and in appearance a counterpart of Santa Claus. Seeing the countless stamps pass through his office during the Christmas season, this big, benevolent Nordic conceived the idea did not reach America until at a penny to help the tuberculosis children in his town.

Miss Emily Bissell of Wilmington, Delaware heard of this plan in 1907 and used it with the result that the following year it was taken up nationally and today the Christmas Seal has won such a place in the Yuletide season that its returns have been the greatest factor in financing the battle against this disease.

BECOMING A WORLD POWER.

Admiral Tirpi, one of the most famous of old Germany's imperialistic leaders, said in an election speech that Germany at the beginning of this century was confronted with the necessity of developing from a European power to a world power, but that it failed to accomplish the change.

The famous admiral has a wrong conception of what constitutes a world power. He evidently thinks that result is achieved by military supremacy. On the contrary, Germany was a great world power in 1914 its power attained more by industrial efficiency than anything else. But it threw away the wonderful position it had gained in the world's commerce and industry.

The vicar of the future will be won by industrial supremacy. Even with all the load that Germany carries today, if her people would devote themselves to service to mankind, they would be a world power again in 20 years.

The Week Ender

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

HE CAME into the office Monday morning "littered" and heavy-eyed, making excuse for his absence. He had been home over the week-end and he said he had got back late, but had missed nothing important, of course. He could make up the time easily if only the boss would be reasonable.

He had had a marvelous time, he admitted, yawning wearily as he told me about it, but it had left him wrecked. He had intended to get up a little back work, but—well, there had been a dance, and a dinner party, and he had slept until noon Sunday, and there had been something doing until he started back, so, of course, there was no time for anything else.

He went out not exactly in a good humor, because I unreasonably could not get his point of view.

It is a growing custom, this spending the week-end at home or out of town, but it plays havoc with a man's work. There are, however, adequate reasons to justify the practice; the quite influence of the home and the home folks, the taking down of the screens for winter or putting them up in the spring, getting the teeth filled or pulled, or the tonsils in or out. There is always the emotional pull of the sweetheart. One would be cruel indeed to object to a man's visiting her occasionally. Often the home folks think it is a good thing for a son to try to get home week-ends.

"Are you going to the Michigan game?" I asked another. "No," was his reply. "I'd like to, tremendously, but a trip like that upsets me for two days and leaves me a mental junk heap for a week after I get back. I can't afford it. I rested this afternoon for two hours and then got up my back work."

The week-ender is usually not doing so well in his work, and not much interested in it. The explanation is simple. He has a double interest and does justice to neither of them. His week-ends give him pleasure, but he comes back to his duties tired, uninterested and bored.

Call Chickens Put in Cans.

Farm women in many Kentucky counties are canning their poultry culls, instead of selling them, according to reports of county home demonstration agents to the College of Agriculture extension division. Home economics specialists at the college say that this is an ideal way of disposing of culls, and at the same time providing a future meat supply.

The rising generation is said to be on its toes which is all right if it does not also get on other people's toes.

A foundation for the continuing of the work of Cecil Sharpe, who devoted his life to the preservation and revivification of the folk songs of England, has been established. He left a valuable library relating to old music and folklore which it is hoped will be made accessible to the public.

Bohemians fail to understand what gay artists and writers mean by "bohemian" as descriptive of a way of living. Real Bohemians say that the custom is due to the mistake of identifying Bohemians with gypsies.

HOMEMAKERS ORGANIZE IN ELEVEN COUNTIES.

Farm women have organized home makers' associations in 11 Kentucky counties, according to Miss Myrtle Weldon, state leader of home demonstration work for the College of Agriculture extension division. These are Ballard, Callaway, Graves, Henderson, McLean, Christian, Jefferson, Garrard, Oldham, Pulaski and McCracken counties. Women in Davies county plan to organize in December.

The purpose of the associations, according to Miss Weldon, is "to extend to homemakers the opportunity to study homemaking problems under trained leadership, to increase their skill, add to their information, develop their appreciation to the end that they may apply the contributions of science and art to the profession of homemaking, and more effectively contribute to the well being of their communities."

Members of associations study practical and scientific information regarding clothing, its selection, construction and care; millinery; food; its selection, production, preservation and nutrition; home decoration; home management; heating; lighting; water supply; kitchen improvement; time and labor saving; wise spending of the family income; health and sanitation, care of the sick, prevention of disease, invalid cookery, first aid and emergencies.

In addition, Miss Weldon emphasizes, the associations establish good fellowship, promote community pride and take homemaking out of the realm of drudgery and place it in its rightful sphere, as a dignified profession requiring skill, information and appreciation on the part of the homemaker.

In addition to home demonstration agents in the counties, the college maintains a staff of specialists who offer courses of study in various phases of homemaking. In many instances they train local leaders, who in turn, take the work in their local communities.

RED GROSS NEWS.

It should be borne in mind that the extension of time for the pre-emptive clause in Section 200 of the World War Veterans' Act ends Jan. 1, 1925, and that it is most urgent, therefore, that all claimants who may be shown to have had, prior to this date a menial condition, active tuberculosis, paralysis, agitis, encephalitis, lethargia, or amebic dysentery, receive an immediate physical examination from a Veterans' Bureau physician in order that there may be on file definite information regarding the physical condition of all World War men who have suffered from some of these conditions and who have not filed a claim for compensation under the U. S. Veterans' Bureau.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

Petersburg came out last Wednesday and beat us two games, the boy score was pretty close 18-16 but the girls were beaten ten points 16-6. We hope to be able to return their game with different scores.

We were all greatly disappointed because we had to go back to school on Friday and all the other schools got a holiday, but we will be out of school a day before they will.

Because of the bad weather Union canceled their basket ball games with us for last Friday.

NARROW ESCAPE

Dr. E. W. Duncan miraculously averted a fatal last Monday afternoon when his Ford capsized on the Dixie Highway near Stevie's Roadhouse.

When attempting to pass another machine in front of him the machine in front suddenly, and without warning, swerved directly into his path crowding him off the concrete and into a fence. His roadster was overturned causing considerable damage to it, and the doctor himself sustained a few bruises, though no serious ones.

ENTIRE CONTINENT ENTHUSED OVER INTERNATIONAL TESTS.

So many letters, telegrams and telephone calls reporting successes in having heard European broadcasting stations have been received by "Radio Broadcast," the magazine which sponsored the International Broadcast Tests, that the office facilities of the magazine have been so taxed with demands for information and verified reports that it will be several weeks before letters and telegrams can be acknowledged, according to an S. O. S. sent by Arthur H. Lynch, editor of that magazine.

The greatest appreciation of the newspapers and broadcast stations is expressed both by the radio fans and those who have worked to bring about these tests, for it was through the thorough cooperation of the press and the broadcasting stations that the tests have been so genuinely successful. The broadcasting stations kept their word and remained off the air during the North American quiet hours, thus permitting European stations to get their programs over the Atlantic with extraordinary success.

"In behalf of the American radio public I desire to thank the press and the broadcasting stations for this cooperation," said Mr. Lynch, "and I feel sure the radio fans will reiterate this expression. The International Radio Broadcasting tests of 1924 will always remain a memorable event in the history of the radio art. A great step toward international peace has thus been taken."

Christmas Seals.

With the annual campaign for the sale of Christmas Seals now on in Kentucky under the direction of the Kentucky Tuberculosis Association, interest is centering upon the ravages of the dread disease, both as it affects humans and the lower animals.

Tuberculosis is shown to be a prominent cause for losses in swine, according to a recent report of the meat inspection division of the U. S. Department of Agriculture. Of about 54,000,000 hogs in the United States Federally inspected during the year ended June 30, 1924, a total of 232,670 dressed hog carcasses were condemned for various causes. Nearly one half of this number were condemned because of tuberculosis infection. In addition to the 100,110 whole carcasses there were 1,099,253 parts of carcasses condemned because of tuberculosis.

This represents a great loss to the swine raisers of the country, which, according to specialists of the department of agriculture, can be prevented to a large extent. Following infected cattle in feed lots is said to be a chief means of swine becoming infected. Again tuberculosis has been shown to be an important cause of infection. Fowls that have died from tuberculosis, when fed to swine pass the disease on to swine.

A report of tuberculosis eradication division shows increasing economy in eradicating bovine tuberculosis. The average cost of a tuberculosis test was thirty cents. The previous year, 46 cents. This reduction in two years approximately one-third, was accomplished by confining activity to circumscribed areas.

Despite the decrease in cost of treatment, the losses to cattle, swine, chickens and other animals chiefly found on the farms mounts into high figures annually, most of which can be saved through prevention. Not only is this costly, but tuberculosis infection in such is dangerous to human lives.

A BIG SUCCESS

The Poultry and Corn Show which was held at Florence last week was pronounced a big success by the men who were responsible for its success.

The exhibits were exceptionally high class according to our county agents. The exhibits of poultry, corn, tobacco, potatoes, eggs, and fruit would be a credit to any northern Kentucky county. Besides that, the pie and cake display was outstanding both in quality and a number of exhibits. Miss Myrtle Weldon from the College of Agriculture, Lexington, who helped Mrs. Matson judge the displays, remarked that it was undoubtedly the best she had ever judged in this State and if Boone had a similar show next year she would like to come back again.

Mr. Carl Wach, Secretary of the Covington Industrial Club and a group of Covington business men visited the show on Tuesday evening and were amazed at the quality of farm produce from our county.

The show was a real credit to H. L. Tanner, Ira A. Long and the rest of the committee who sponsored it. At a meeting held last Saturday night the following officers were elected for next years show:

Chairman, E. G. Stephenson, Vice-Chairman, Benj. Paddock Secretary and Willie Drinkwater Assistant.

Treasurer, H. L. Tanner. Edgar Aylor, Ira A. Long Supt. of the Poultry Show with W. Raven, Edgar Aylor, Clyde Anderson, Roy Lucas as Assists.

L. W. Over Supt. of Corn Show and O. C. Hafer as Assists.

Mrs. Edgar Aylor Supt. of Culinary Department.

THE CHRISTMAS SPIRIT

There is a better thing than the observance of Christmas Day—and that is keeping Christmas.

The spirit of Christmas is so fine and so big, so generous, that we surely know what it should be.

The greatest joy in life is in contributing to the happiness of some other individual—to the boy or girl, or the neighbor and detritude.

A miser is the most pitiful object in the whole world, the most loveless and wretched of God's creatures. He has stifled the Creator's purpose in giving him life and has ceased to grow. While there are few misers, it is also true that slowly and surely there is a gradual awakening to the fact that Christmas means more than the giving of presents; that it means a fitness between the gift and the giver's mode of living; that we give with common sense and out of the fullness of our hearts.

The ideal Christmas should embody the cheer and good will of the English Yuletide with the charm of the German celebration and yet be thoroughly American in its application.

Let us give out of the fullness of our hearts appropriate and useful gifts to our immediate families, to our dearest and best friends. Christmas without toys would be very sad to the little folks and this part of the program should never be changed. We will remember our dozens or hundreds of relatives, friends and acquaintances with an appropriate message of good fellowship.

We will try to trim our lamp so that it will give less smoke and more light; to make a grave for ugly thoughts and a garden with an open gate for kindly feelings.

Remember that the blessed life which began in Bethlehem nineteen hundred years ago is the image of brightness and eternal love.

Then you can keep Christmas. Oh let's have Christmas every day—the gladness and the heartfelt mirth, God will toward men and peace on earth.

The simple joy of giving things. To gain the love the giving brings; The practicing of what we preach In word and deed, and thought and speech.

Oh, let's have Christmas every day—To bring the fellow creature cheer. We should adopt the better plan Of doing good when'er we can. But do it now, next Christmas may Not come at all—let's live to-day.

—Edwin C. Ranek.

RED CROSS IS URGING BETTER-HEALTH BATTLE

Tireless in Services Advancing Cause of Freedom from Human Suffering.

Not alone in preparations for emergencies, but in a tireless offensive battle for better health is the American Red Cross nurse maintaining in peace time the high tradition of her war service. As in war, the same self-sacrificing service for humanity goes on its quiet, effective way content in its accomplishment seeking no public acclaim. Enrolled in the Red Cross Nursing Service are 40,634 of these missionaries of health, nearly 1,000 carrying the message of a finer public health to as many communities and 1,100 teaching large classes in home hygiene and care of the sick. Exactly 100 Red Cross nurses are still on duty overseas, helping the struggle forward toward the high standard of American nurse efficiency in many countries.

In the Government services 3,117 enrolled Red Cross nurses are working with the Army, Navy, Public Health Service and the Veterans Bureau, while the entire active enrollment is maintained as a reserve for the Army Nurse Corps and available to the Navy in a national defense emergency. Nine hundred nurses were added to the roll the last year.

Red Cross nursing, however, has perhaps its finest expression out in the places laid waste by fire, flood and storm, and in the back reaches far from the centers of population. In every disaster the Red Cross nurse is first called for, first to respond, and the last to leave her post of duty among the suffering victims. In the isolated sections of Alaska, North Carolina, Virginia, Idaho, and among the bleak islands of Penobscott Bay, Me., her ministrations are making hard lives easier and working for a brighter future for the children. A part in the human drama of the time is increasingly important, although it is subdued by the very nature of her work.

The policy of the American Red Cross to establish under Chapter control public health nursing services in communities lacking such facilities has been justified and this pioneering work is everywhere endorsed by authorities who are quick to take it over as a proper municipal function and a duty of taxpayers.

Care of the Sick program has further penetrated into the schools as a definite part of curriculum. During the year 29,000 school pupils took this Red Cross course. Three telephone corporations adopted it and graduated 666 employee students.

As good health depends upon right eating the Red Cross Nutrition Service continued to promote individual and community health, particularly the health of mothers and children. This service reached nearly 150,000 persons during the year and found work to do for several thousand Red Cross volunteer workers.

Red Cross Fighting First Aid Battle To Conserve Life

Reliable records establish the fact that more than 75,000 accidental deaths occur every year in the United States. The records show that 206 American citizens are killed every day; that 38 of these deaths are due to automobiles, 35 to falls, 19 to drownings, 14 to burns.

Facing such distressing sacrifice of life is the First Aid Service of the American Red Cross, fighting through education and demonstration to instill a consciousness of safety in the public mind and teaching approved methods which assure that competent hands will care for injured persons until the arrival of doctors. Trained service in the first few minutes is vital in serious accidents and saves many precious lives.

One of the most encouraging signs of the past year is the record of the Red Cross First Aid Insurance Car No. 1 which traveled 9,700 miles along trunk lines, stopping at 137 places. The car's staff of surgeons gave 911 demonstrations to audiences composed of 42,150 railroad men, 71,000 high school and college students, 13,000 industrial workers, 2,000 members of clubs, and nearly 18,000 policemen, firemen, and other municipal employees, a total of 147,000.

Red Cross First Aid certificates were conferred upon 13,865 persons who took the course last year, an increase of 4,000 over 1923. Telephone, gas and electric companies, public service corporations and other large employers of the country adopted the Red Cross course, and their trainee constabulary everywhere were witnessed by huge crowds with as much interest as develops at popular athletic games.

In the industrial field the growth of First Aid practice to fight to reduce preventable accidents and unnecessary loss of life has received wide recognition. The promise of an unprecedented advance in this fine cause lies in the evidence of the great strides systematic instruction in First Aid has made throughout the country through the Red Cross Chapters and the work of the experts in this service under direction of the national organization.

Sign the American Red Cross roll this year for humanity's sake.

It is scarcely an exaggeration to say that many matters which agitate the public mind are not worth a thought in comparison with dietary questions to which a thought is seldom given.

SUMMERY DISHES

Now that the fresh fruit and berries are plentiful one may enjoy a variety of fruit combinations.

Pineapple Turnovers—Roll pastry thin and cut into four-inch squares. Drain the syrup from one cupful of grated pineapple. On the center of each square place a tablespoonful of the drained pineapple and one teaspoonful each of sugar and oil. Moisten the edges of the pastry and fold together in the form of triangles, pressing the edges firmly together. Fry until brown in deep fat. Drain on brown paper; sprinkle with powdered sugar and serve immediately.

Strawberry Pudding—Soften two tablespoonfuls of gelatin in one-half cupful of cold water; add one and one-half cupfuls of boiling water and stir until the gelatin is dissolved. Add one-half cupful of sugar, one and one-half cupfuls of strawberries, crushed, and a tablespoonful of lemon juice. Let stand in a cold place until the mixture looks creamy, then add two stiffly-beaten egg whites and pour the jelly into molds. Serve on squares of sponge cake with cream and sugar and garnish with whole berries.

Pineapple Sandwiches—Cut oblong slices of sponge cake about one-half inch thick. Put together in pairs with a layer of crushed pineapple between. Place on individual serving dishes, sprinkle with powdered sugar and decorate with quarters of blanched almonds, stuck into the cake. Serve with a cold custard sauce.

Frozen Fruit Salad—Cut six slices of pineapple into thin pieces; mix with two cupfuls of strawberries. Stir in one cupful of mayonnaise with one cupful of whipped cream. Fill baking powder boxes with the mixture; cover with greased paper and put on the covers. Blind the edges to keep out the salt, with a strip of cloth dipped in melted wax. Pack in a pail with two parts of ice to one of salad. Let stand three hours. Serve cut into slices with cream mayonnaise dressing.

CROSS ARMY 5,596,663

Children of 29,942 Schools Now Enrolled in Movement of Service to Humanity.

The American Junior Red Cross, which was organized as a children's auxiliary during war-time especially to help the young refugees from Europe, and to exemplify in peace-time the Red Cross ideal of service, has now a membership of 5,596,663 in the schools of the United States and the insular possessions.

This Junior movement gives opportunity for the children to share in Red Cross effort parallel to that of the parent organization. Juniors are therefore identified in varying degree with the health service, disaster relief work, salvage and other suitable activities of value to the operations of the Red Cross.

It is a valiant host marching on under its "I Serve" banner in the cause of happier childhood everywhere and particularly wherever the American flag flies. The enrollment embraces 29,942 schools and 147,484 school rooms, a gain over 1923 of 5,555 schools and 23,414 school rooms. The year's gain in membership was 749,402 children, or nearly 80,000 for each month of the school year.

The educational and social values of the Junior Red Cross movement is thus evidencing the firm and cordial endorsement of school authorities. The government has added the weight of recognition by extending the Junior Red Cross in the schools for American Indian children. The American Red Cross is also planning to develop the Junior program in 400 rural schools in isolated sections.

There is no abatement of the exchange of correspondence between schools in the United States and schools in the insular possessions and foreign lands. During the year the Junior Red Cross in part supported operations in twelve European countries. It is a potent influence for the cultivation of international goodwill and its example has been the means of stimulating the formation of Junior Red Cross societies in more than thirty countries.

Horse Markets Coming Back

Horse markets are coming back. As both farm and city are demanding more and better horses, better prices may ultimately result, according to the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation based on a study of the trend in the buying power of farm horses during the past 57 years.

Low prices probably will continue to discourage horse and mule production and cause a falling off in the equine population until average prices return, the Foundation believes. But already horse breeding operations have begun to expand in the districts possessing the kind of foundation stock capable of producing the sort of horses the market wants. Attractive prices are now being paid for all good, big sound shapely drafters coming to market and good horses of the wagon type weighing 1,400 to 1,600 pounds. Prices have advanced from the extreme depression of two years ago.

How soon the turning point will be reached on the rank and file of horses is uncertain. Previous cycles of horse and mule prices as shown by the accompanying chart have varied greatly in length. The first lasted eleven years from depression to depression, the second eighteen years and the present cycle is already twenty-seven years. It seems logical to believe that an upward turn in prices which will last for a decade or longer will start before long and that good horses and mules produced from matings in the next few years will get the benefit of that advance by the time they reach marketable age. Good horses are the exception on farms today. It is unthinkable that good farmers will be content with pligs for long.

It is condition and quality rather than weight that decide whether a steer is to be placed in the beef cattle classification. Within the class it is condition and quality that largely determine the amount of profit that goes to the shipper. Choice to prime steers bring from 70 cents to $5.75 per hundred weight over the common light stock, according to a study made of lightweight steers coming to the Chicago market by the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation.

The bulk of the shipments are classified under the grades of prime steers, 1,200 to 1,600 pounds; choice steers, 1,150 to 1,600 pounds; good steers, 1,150 to 1,600 pounds; medium steers, 1,100 to 1,400 pounds, and common rough steers, 900 to 1,200 pounds. These are the classifications of the United States Bureau of Markets.

Prime beef steers are the ideal type, combining exceptional breeding and thorough finishing. Short neck and short legs, smooth flesh and well-filled, bulging brackets are prerequisites. Prime beef steers are rare, even steers good enough to grade as choice are few. They show most of the characteristics of the prime grade, good breeding and long feeding, smooth flesh and thick fat. On the block the quality steer will show a good proportion of red meat covered with a modest amount of smooth white fat. The lean, while firm of texture, will be mellow to the touch. The carcass should carry down full to the hock, being highly marbled with bright lean of a fine grain.

Junior Farmers Need Club Leaders

That club leadership must be increased properly to train the boys and girls of the nation who decide to remain on farms and become the bulwark of American agriculture is shown in a survey of the club work of the junior farmers just completed by Benjamin H. Darrow, director of the boys' and girls' club work of the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation.

According to the report of the Foundation, based on a count by the Department of Agriculture, 722,408 projects were begun in 1923 by 408,074 boys and girls, a number which is less than 6 per cent of the farm youth of the nation of club age. Of these projects 429,746 were completed by 249,416 club members. Girls completing their work outnumber the boys three to two, there being 150,194 girls and 99,222 boys. The report also indicates that 55.9 per cent of the enrolled girls finished their projects, while only 52.9 per cent of the boys completed theirs. The high point reached in 1918, as shown by the accompanying chart, was due to the expansion of club work in connection with the slogan of the day: "Food will win the war." After the crisis was over there was retrenchment and club work suffered.

"Many of the 8,000,000 boys and girls engaged in club work hope to leave the farm," said Darrow, "but 80 per cent of them will remain in the country, experience has shown. All who stay on the farm should have the benefit of the inspiration and training club work affords. If we are to provide this for the junior farmers of the nation, we must rapidly increase the number of county club leaders."

Hamilton Grange Becomes Memorial

Hamilton Grange, the residence of Alexander Hamilton at the time he was killed in the duel with Aaron Burr, which has been given to the American Acenic and Historic Preservation society as a memorial to the first secretary of the treasury. The donor is anonymous.

(By Peter Keegan)

Special Correspondent of the RE-

CORDER

CONGRESS IS BACK at work after six months lay off, its principal job for the next three months being the approval of the Federal Budget for the next fiscal year beginning July 1, 1925. The Budget as submitted by President Coolidge provides for expenditures of $3,641,000,000 and it is planned by the Administration to curb Government expenses to such an extent that a surplus of nearly $375,000,000 will be realized during the year.

THE GOVERNMENT has complied completely with the terms of the Washington Naval Treaty now that the hull of the battleship Washington is resting at the bottom of the Atlantic off Cape Charles, Virginia. There was considerable mystery about the sinking of the vessel. While the battleship Texas was putting holes in the Armour of the Washington and Airplanes were bombarding the hull, official denial was made at the Navy Department that any shots had been fired at the doomed warship when news finally came that however, that the Washington had been destroyed. Secretary Wilbur had a difficult time explaining his previous denial.

LITTLE INTEREST IS being manifested in the Capital in the trial of Col. Charles R. Forbes, former Director of the U. S. Veterans Bureau, who is accused of conspiring to defraud the government. When a Senate committee was investigating the Veterans Bureau Forbes Pecadillos were the talk of the town but the capital forgets easily and is looking for new thrills, being willing to leave Forbes to the more or less tender mercies of the Chicago court. Perhaps two of the Senate investigating Committee which kept the country in an uproar last winter, are preparing to go at it again. The so-called "Daugherty Committee" will meet chiefly to prepare its report on the investigation of the Department of Justice but it will resume its inquiry if Senator Wheeler has his way. He is supposed by the Chairman of the Committee Senator Brookhart of Iowa who has been thrown out of the Republican party by the "Old Guard" and is now a "Man without a party." Senator Walsh of Montana the oil investigator, has announced that inquiry into government oil leases will be resumed.

SECRETARY HOOVER is being suggested for appointment as Secretary of State in the event that Mr. Hughes should decide to resign next spring. Hoover would like to get out of the Commerce Department as he feels that it has few opportunities. When he consented to become Secretary of Commerce in the Harding Cabinet, he had planned to have the shipping board and the government merchant marine under his jurisdiction but the plan never materialized.

PRESIDENT Coolidge is Washington's champion Jay-Walker. Despite all the safety first campaigns, the President narrowly escapes being hit every time he goes out walking and that is every day. At each street intersection, he keeps right on going never looking to the left or to the right, and the quick work of the secret service men who always accompany him has been the means of saving him from possible injury.

GOVERNMENT officials are hopeful of getting some money from France and Italy during the winter in payment of their big war debts. France owes four million and Italy half as much. The French are now supposed to get $350,000,000 a year from Germany under the Dawes plan and Secretary Mellon would like to see some of this money keep on moving across the Atlantic to help out in his tax reduction campaign. The debt question has been discussed with Mellon by Jules Jassard the retiring French Ambassador but he promised nothing definite.

It is astonishing how little money is available for war-torn veterans and how grudgingly that little is granted, while there seems to be plenty of money for military functions—money burned up or thrown away.

MRS. GRUNDY UP TO DATE

Mrs. Grundy has been having a lively time of late. She has had no time for rest since the secretary of the treasury has followed the instructions, of an act of congress to make public income tax returns.

The ingenuity and injustice of the law has become apparent. It was calculated to develop the prying tendencies of human nature and arouse hostility on the part of those who do not know the facts.

A man or a business may be misjudged by the amount of income tax they pay, and may be done incalculable harm through publication of returns.

The case is cited of two millionaires who paid very small amounts in income tax last year. The average person not knowing the reason for the small tax, would use snap judgment and conclude that they were cheating the government.

A matter of fact, each one of these men suffered heavy reverses last year and had to wipe off big losses, which left a small amount out of the year's business, and their returns in all probability were absolutely honest.

The theory of the legislation is thoroughly un-American. If it is to be the policy of the government to expose before the public eye, confidential matters relating to the business of those who pay income tax, it should be made to apply to every one.

Mrs. Grundy has a right to expect that if she is permitted to know the confidences of part of the business concerns of this country, she should have knowledge of all.

There is nothing about the law that will enable the government to collect from those who may be swindling the government by not filing any income tax return at all. If we must have publicity, why not compel everyone to make return under oath? Then Mrs. Grundy would have a gay time.

MANY CHANGES.

As far as we have been able to see and learn, a majority of the farmers in Boone seem to be in high glee over an opportunity to drop the raising of tobacco for a year and work at soil building and improving their land.

The year of 1925 will see a great effort upon the part of our farmers to grow enough corn, oats, cowpeas and other crops to enable them to feed more stock the winter of 1925 than has been done in the past and the present shortage of feeds and meats will make a paying investment to say nothing of the good to be done farm cleaning up the old thickets and fields.

We would like very much to see the farmers of Boone county take advantage of this great opportunity to devote their attention to soil building, farm improvement and diversified crops. Boone county is alive with opportunity, but the bosom of mother earth must be worked. Boone is one of the greatest truck growing fruit growing, poultry and stock raising counties in the world, and the future has a golden outlook, if the rising generation will work and educate themselves, no man who lives in the good old county of Boone need go hungry, or fail to prosper if he will work intelligently.

The good year of 1925 will witness quite a change in the routine program of living. Many have drifted through the year 1924 with little thought of the cost of the present or the value of laying up for tomorrow. It is a self evident fact that the majority of our folks are living too fast, for many have been stepping on the gas, facing probably a long cold winter for which little preparation has been made, with no tobacco sold and but little prospect of a sale, with money borrowed and all spent and more, with a cut-out crop for 1925, who can doubt that we are due a change and to some a sudden change.

SUNDAY SCHOOL BEFORE CHRISTMAS

About four weeks before Christmas, according to the old tradition, the Sunday school classes fill up. When a boy recalls the fact that a Christmas tree will be held on which he may perhaps harvest a gift, his ideas of religious education undergo a change.

Previously he had not felt much interest in Bible study. The thought of a new jackknife or base ball is alluring. The truants are welcomed back, and teachers would not have the heart to suggest that their conversion was too sudden to be rewarded by Christmas remembrance. Some of course find their enthusiasm waning about as soon as they have eaten Santa Claus's Sunday school candy. But there are others who reach the conclusion that Sunday school is a somewhat tolerable place. They might well decide that bad conduct in these classes should meet as firm handling at home as if they had been disciplined in a public school.

People who do not like getting muddy bills, can stop the same by paying cash.

The President's Message

ITALY AGAIN BUYS BURLEY TOBACCO FROM THE POOL.

Third Purchase by Government Regie in Field Where None Previously Had Been Sold—Hughes in Charge of European Markets

For the third time the Italian Regie has purchased Burley tobacco from the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association, announcement of another sale to the Italian government monopoly being made Thursday by President and General Manager James C. Stone, of the Burley Co-operative.

Although the amount sold to the Italian Regie was not large, in each case the sale has been in a field where Burley tobacco had not been previously used to any extent and the third sale is taken as an evidence that the Italian manufacturer has found that the use of Burley has stimulated demand for its cigarettes.

President Stone also announced the appointment of T. L. Hughes, until recently in charge of the tobacco section of the United States Department of Commerce, as representative in Europe of the Burley Association. Mr. Hughes was assigned by Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover to accompany the tobacco commission from the United States which visited Europe in the past year and at that time the tobacco co-operative leaders had opportunity to observe the fact that Mr. Hughes was known to practically all buyers of tobacco in Europe.

The appointment of Mr. Hughes follows action by the board of directors, taken at the October meeting, authorizing the president and sales manager to follow up the European trip by direct efforts to develop a larger market in that country for Burley tobacco and, after full consideration of the problem, it was deemed better to have the Burley Association's own representative in that field.

Mr. Hughes is one of the outstanding tobacco trade experts in the service of the Government and Mr. Stone expressed the opinion that the Burley co-operative is fortunate to be able to obtain his services in developing the European market for Burley, the increased use of which has resulted from the greatly increased sale of American cigarettes in Europe and the consequent necessity of the world meet the demand for these cigarettes by the use of Burley tobacco, their chief constituent.

A BOONE COUNTY BOY.

Special to the Recorder:

Lexington, Ky., Nov. 10.—Mr. John M. Rachal, son of Mr. W. M. Rachal, a merchant of Union, Ky., is a Sophomore at the University of Kentucky. He is in the college of Engineering and during his Freshman year distinguished himself by his high scholastic standing, making an average of 2.6 the first semester and 2.8 the second semester. This is a very high average as 3 is perfect.

Mr. Rachal is a graduate of the Union High School. There also he made a brilliant record, finishing in three years the course which takes the average student four years to complete. His standing for the three years was A. But even before entering high school Mr. Rachal made quite a name for himself by winning a medal which Congressman A. B. Rouse offered to the Boone county schools at large for the boy or girl in the eighth grade having the highest standing.

FARMERS' QUESTIONS ANSWERED BY KENTUCKY EXPERIMENT STATION

Question—I desire information about painting composition roofs which are in poor condition. Would it be worth while? How much paint would be required to cover one hundred square feet?

Answer—If the roof is well nailed and not badly torn, but just leaking in spots, the application of a good roofing paint would prove profitable. A durable composition asphalt paint of various colors for covering painted roofing can be purchased from any reliable paint company, which will furnish directions for applying it. The amount of paint required depends upon the condition of the roofing surface to be coated, but a gallon will cover approximately 100 square feet.—J. B. Ketchum, Experiment Station.

Question—What particular kind of baby food it to be recommended for a baby that must be artificially fed?

Answer—According to the best authorities, there is no substitute for milk. Cow's or goat's milk may be used. Do not use evaporated milk, condensed milk or any "proprietary food." These may lack one or more of the essential constituents of growth, or they may not contain them in the right proportion. Choose milk having a lot of content. Jersey and Guernsey milk is too rich. Holstein-Friesian is to be preferred. Milk must be modified according to the age of the baby. For the feeding formula consult the best baby physician in the community, and, if necessary, do not hesitate to go out of the community or expert advice.—Myrtle Weldon, state leader of home demonstration work.

HOME INTERESTS FIRST.

Another Christmas is near at hand and gift lists are being prepared for the shopping tour that everyone will make.

And when you buy, will you remember the claims of the home merchant and give him a chance to share in your trade?

We cannot expect to prosper as a community by dividing our patronage with business men who contribute nothing to the upbuilding of our local institutions.

It is to the best interest of those who buy, to trade at home, just as it is to the best interest of those who sell.

Unless we "pat each other on the back" nothing constructive can ever be accomplished and we will go backward instead of forward.

The logic of trading at home is unassailable. There is no other way of reasoning—if you spend your money away from home, you have no hope of ever jingling it in your pocket again, but if you keep your money in circulation at home, you may get the chance to use it again.

Our merchants prepare for Xmas with large and extensive stocks and endeavor to serve the people with this trading area as best they can. They should be patronized, not alone from the standpoint of home patriotism, but because they have Christmas merchandise of quality that no one will be ashamed to give.

It is some time a question hard to settle which is the worst in a community—an educated fool who lacks common, hard sense, or an ignorant fool who did not have sense enough to take an education, but thinks what he does not know is time wasted trying to find out. The Hall of Fame will never be crowded with either specimen.

Kentucky's present indebtedness is $11,489,293.07. The present taxes now being paid into the treasury will materially reduce this amount.

ALLIE W. GRANT

IS SUDDENLY STRICKEN — ALLIE W. GRANT, OPERATED ON IN CINCINNATI HOSPITAL

Allie W. Grant, of Petersburg, was suddenly stricken last week with a attack of appendicitis, and was rushed to Christ Hospital, Cincinnati, on Thursday, where a hurried operation was performed by Dr. C. A. Langdale.

The operation proved to be a very serious one, many unforeseen difficulties being encountered, as is sometimes the case in these operations. Word was received by his relatives on Saturday that his condition was very critical.

He was a veteran of the late World War, having served overseas with the American expeditionary forces.

Since the organization of Boone Post No. 4, of the American Legion, he has been instrumental in its success, having served one year as its commander.

The many friends and relatives were shocked and grieved last Monday, Dec. 8th, when the announcement came over the phone that Allie Grant had passed away at Christ Hospital, Cincinnati, where he was operated on for appendicitis on Thursday of last week.

Just a week ago last Monday he was in our office laughing and joking and seemed in best of health, and very few knew of his being ill, and his sudden taking away was a shock to his many friends in this part of the county.

He was a son of E. A. and Mary Smith Grant and was thirty-three years of age. He was born and spent his entire life in the vicinity of Petersburg, where he was known to every man, woman and child, many of them being kin to him.

Allie Grant was a most affable young man and numbered his friends by his acquaintances. He was a man of courtly bearing, quiet of manner, courteous, gentle, and sympathetic. The place Allie Grant held in the affections of his community were peculiarly his own. His friends were numerous, loyal and true, and his memory will live long with those who knew him best.

He is survived by his father, mother and one brother, and our sympathy goes out to them in their dark hour of bereavement, but we know that mere words can only help to heal the great sorrow, and we would point to him who is the only one to look for real comfort and consolation.

Funeral services were held at his home Wednesday, and were conducted by Rev. Campbell. Undertaker C. Scott Chambers had charge of the funeral arrangements.

SERIOUSLY INJURED.

FLORIAN HOLTON SERIOUSLY HURT IN UNFORTUNATE ACCIDENT

Saturday afternoon while operating a wheel-sawing outfit on the farm of E. G. Cox, one of his neighbors, Florian Holton, of near Lawrenceburg, Ky., was very seriously hurt. The belt used in propelling the saw suddenly broke, the loose end striking Mr. Holton in the head with such force that it knocked him unconscious, in which condition he remained for many hours.

Drs. Yelton, of Burlington, and Nunnally of Bullittsville, were immediately summoned, and although admitting that his condition is extremely serious, they are optimistic as to his recovery.

Mr. Holton is a farmer, and resides with his family on a portion of the estate of his father, the late Elijah Holton, and known as the Captain Terrill farm.

NEW GOSSIP LAW

The first conviction under what is known as the GOSSIP LAW of Kentucky took place last week in Owensboro, Ky. The 1924 Kentucky Legislature passed a law making it a crime subject, to a fine of from $10 to $100 for any person to report or communicate to any person a false rumor or report of a slanderous or harmful nature, or which may be detrimental to the character or standing of any person. It is no defense to say that the report had been told to you by another unless you give the name of that person and also that you investigate the report before you repeat it. This is a rather drastic statute against gossip.

Kentucky's tobacco production this year will be 103,765,000 pounds less than the 1923 crop, according to the forecast of the Department of Agriculture, made last week. Federal authorities estimate the total at 38,435,000 pounds grown on 491,000 acres, an average yield of 75 pounds tobacco production in Kentucky this year per acre.

Some heavy winter crops of corn, cane and potatoes are being raised around the state fairs.

CIRCUIT COURT.

Monday Judge Sainey Gaines convened the December term of the Boone Circuit Court. On the docket were 64 criminal, 13 common law and 60 Equity cases. Sheriff Home together with his deputies, Utz, Percival and Snyder were on hand to execute the orders of court. Hon. John J. Hove and B. H. Riley were representing the interest of the Commonwealth. During court the Circuit Clerk R. E. Heiskens is kept a busy man. The grand jury was empaneled and instructed by Judge Gaines, who called the attention of the jury to a number of criminal laws and asked them to investigate any and all violations in the county.

The petit juries were also impaneled and the business before the court was proceeded with.

Fines have been assessed against law violation at this term of court amounting to $800.00. There was also paid to the trustee of the jury fund, B. E. Berkshire, by County Judge N. E. Riddell $811.00, the amount of fines collected since the last term of this court. The larger part of these fines were for violating the liquor laws.

ANOTHER BIG SALE.

The Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association has sold approximately 50,000,000 pounds of tobacco, including between 16,000,000 and 17,000,000 pounds of the 1922 crop, to the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company, at prices which realize for members of the association about $14,250,000.

Work of delivering the purchase will start Monday. The sale includes all of the 1922 crop which the association held, and the remainder of the Reynolds purchase will be taken out of the 1923 redried tobacco.

Work will be pushed on the delivery of the 1922 crop, which will be taken first. As soon as the 1922 grades are delivered and calculations can be made, the proceeds of that portion of the sale will be paid to members of the association who are owners of the 1922 grades taken in this purchase.

Secretary H. Lee Earley said that it would take a month after the tobacco is delivered to make the calculations and write the checks to members.

The R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company was represented in the negotiations leading up to the big sale by Theodore H. Kirk, Vice President of the company, and by John E. Williams, also of Lexington. The purchase gives the Reynolds Company between 16,000,000 and 17,000,000 pounds of tobacco, the very highest grade that is ready for immediate manufacture, and the part of the 1923 crop taken in the transaction also is in first-class actual condition.

Mr. C. N. York and Mrs. Eulalia A. Sandford surprised their friends last Thursday. They obtained a license and went to Erlanger where they were married by Rev. Miller, they then went to Covington and took supper with Mr. York's sister. They returned to their home here where they are receiving their friends. Friday night they were entertained with an old fashioned chawnee. Their friends wish for them a life of happiness peace and prosperity.

Atty. D. E. Castleman and Hon. H. G. Rector, of Erlanger, were in Burlington on Wednesday.

BUDDY 4 OBEYING!

HARD BUT FAIR.

There is nothing very sensational as it would seem about the announcement of State Auditor W. H. Shanks that he will issue no new warrants for state highway construction until July 1, 1925.

The old, haphazard habit of issuing I. O. U's for what the state owes but has not funds to pay has had a long unfortunate career. It is not business-like.

The state has voted to go on the pay-as-you-go plan. To anticipate probable revenues in the future and issue warrants to pay the duly contacted debts of the state is unsafe and unsound.

If the state borrowed a specified sum and properly appropriated it, so that it could make the use of the money, pay for the interest, this would be an entirely different proposition from heedlessly contracting debts for which no provision for the payment is made.

In the report of the fiscal conditions of the state highway department recently made by accountants the amount of road warrants outstanding on June 30, 1924, was given as $4,872,519.75. In the anticipated revenue for the fiscal year from July 1, 1924 to July 1, 1925, it is estimated that the outstanding state warrants would amount to $8,568,561.20.

Declaring that each department is expected to keep expenditures within its revenue, Mr. Shanks says that he has given the order that no more new warrants for state highway construction will be issued until the end of the present fiscal year shows where the state stands. The shut down on this "easy way" of taking care of deficits causes some concern. The situation as now faced is serious. But the custom which has been checked was a bad one when it started and the wonder is that the practical business judgment of the commonwealth has not swung the executioner's axe into the warrant-issuing pastime long before this.

The state's expenditures must keep within the revenues and Kentucky must know, financially, how she stands.

As to the road department, which is sorely hit, and as to the people of Kentucky who are clamoring for roads, as to the cities which wish to see the through highways completed so that for outsiders this will no longer be considered a detour state and as to the farmer on the crossroads, they merit sympathy.

But issuing warrants, I. O. U's, nothing more or less—is no way for the state to do business. In order that income may tally with outgo, there must be a curtailment of construction.

It is hard but it's fair.—Lexington Herald.

State Engineer Jos. Boggs has resigned his position. From the reports in the press Mr. Boggs differs with the State Highway Commission as to the road building program. Mr. Boggs wants to complete the National Highways through the State for the benefit of the tourist travel and the state commission seems to have adopted a policy of building roads in different parts of the state so that the people of Kentucky can reach their markets. National Highways benefit the tourist as well as our home people but do not open our state to the different markets. The Highway Commissioner may be pursuing the correct course. A system of roads that benefit Kentuckians first, then the tourist.

In the Illinois Laying Contest being conducted at Murphysboro, Ill., Mrs. B. E. Aylor's pen of White Leghorns was the highest pen in the Mediterranean Class. Her fine hens laid 125 eggs during the month of November; 2 hens laid 26 eggs each, 2 hens 25 eggs each and one hen 24 eggs. Mrs. Aylor's flock is one of the best in the state, and she is very proud of the blue ribbons she received.

THE COUNTRY DOCTOR

An editorial bouquet is thrown at the feet of Dr. J. F. Peyton, of Stanford, by the Owensboro Messenger. The Messenger learned that Dr. Peyton had burned all his old accounts, aggregating $80,000, rather than leave them to embarrass some of his poorer patients after his death. The list was accumulated in sixty-five years of service in Lincoln county. The Messenger says:

"Probably few professional men do more work without compensation than the country doctor. Large fees can not be collected from patients like those collected by surgeons and specialists, who thus reimburse themselves for the work that must be done for a smaller compensation. The country doctor collects from those who are financially able to pay him, but he is compelled by custom to answer any call that comes to him at any hour of the day or night, whether he ever gets his pay or not."

"Such a practitioner was Dr. J. F. Peyton, of Stanford, Ky., who had practiced the healing art in that city for the past 65 years, except for the time he was a surgeon in the Union army in the war between the sections."

"It may be safely assumed that during all these years he had given his services to many persons who never thought to offer him a fee, and many others who promised to pay, but did not."

"A few days ago Dr. Peyton determined to wipe these accounts off the book. Consequently he made a bonfire and burned accounts amounting in the aggregate to $80,000. These fees, if collected, would have made him rich, as riches are counted."

"But wealth is not the only thing that brings happiness. Dr. Peyton relieved suffering, brought happiness to thousands who were despondent and discouraged, attended the bedside when a human being was brought into existence, and comforted the bereaved when the last call came to the suffering. He has therefore built up in the hearts of those who have come under his ministrations a feeling of love and respect which only time will eradicate, and which will even then be written in the great book of life as a perpetual record of the good deeds done in the flesh. This is his compensation for the obliteration of the record of the indebtedness of the community to him during his long life."—Lexington Herald.

RED AND GREEN LIGHTS ON TOP OF AERIAL TOWERS SERVE AS GUIDES TO AVIATORS IN NIGHT.

Night navigation is becoming less dangerous and the recent inauguration of the nocturnal service in the airplane mail division bespeaks well for the confidence of the government officials in the safety of the flyers. In order that aviators might have an additional guide while flying at night, Powell Crosley, Jr., has had red and green lights placed on the top of the aerial towers of his new five-kilowatt transmitting station at Harrison, Ohio. The red light is placed on the north tower while the green one is on top of the one to the south, separated by four hundred feet of the aerial wire.

This combination of red and green lights with their location has been brought to the attention of aviators' organizations in order that they might notify their members of the added guides while flying in the vicinity of the new W. L. W. broadcasting station.

Flood-lighting the towers at night makes them visible for several miles and they present an imposing sight as they rise 200 feet from the top of one of the highest knolls in that part of the country and serve as a guide to the town of Harrison.

Not only do these tower lights serve as a guide to the town of Harrison, but to other neighboring cities as well. The aviator flying southeast on a direct line from the red light to the green light will eventually strike Cincinnati. If he flies northwest along the same line, he will pass very close to Indianapolis.

Flying northeast between the two lights, perpendicular to the direction of the aerial, he will pass through Dayton, and flying southwest along this same line he will be going directly toward Louisville. Thus the tower of lights serve as valuable airline guideposts, giving the directions of the largest neighboring cities.

Aviators will no doubt find another use for the tower lights in judging their distance from the ground, as the towers are known to be 200 feet high.

Burley Association Will Begin Begin Receiving Tobacco Dec. 17.

The receiving plants of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association in this state will be open to receive the crops of members on and after

Wednesday, December 17th, 1924

Arrangements have been made to pay the usual cash advance to the members of the Association on the delivery of their crops.

Growers are asked to sort their tobacco carefully before bringing it to market and to KEEP THE GRADES TOGETHER WHEN LOADING IT ON WAGON OR TRUCK. This will save money to members by avoiding delay when unloading at receiving plant. Bring as much of your crop as you can—all of it, if possible—at one delivery.

TIMLEY - AGRICULTURAL NEWS.

By R. J. Matson, County Agent

AT THE INTERNATIONAL

Twelve hundred boys and girls from farms in 41 states attended the International Live Stock Exposition in Chicago last week. All were members of Jr. Agricultural Clubs and had won free trips by doing meritorious work along some line.

Last year a special building was dedicated to the boys and girls. This was built and equipped during the summer and was ready for their visit last week. They were treated royally on every hand. They visited the International Harvester Co., and saw how farm machinery was turned out, on Thursday, and the evening they marched into the International Amphitheater and staged a demonstration before President and Mrs. Coolidge. Friday they turned the beautiful North Shore of the Lake and visited the steel wire mills at Waukegan, where they saw fencing and rolls being made. Friday evening the Chicago Association of Commerce tendered a nice luncheon for the Juniors.

Our only regret is that Boone County could not be represented in that fine group. Our judging team at the State Fair came in fifth. We were separated from first place by the small margin of eighteen points. The Owen county team that won first was given a free trip to the International Lets get busy and send some Boone county boys and girls next year.

The Editor of the Chicago Drivers Journal writes: "It is an event of the lives, and a real education for them."

"They provide one of the most interesting and inspiring 'exhibits' at the International. See a thousand or more of them marching four abreast to the beat of drums, and then visualize what their being here means--the homes from which they come, the formation of their clubs the careful work extending over many weeks, the excitement of the local show, the winning, and finally this wonderful trip with so many things to eat. What do we see? On farms all over the land the training of boys and girls in productive enterprises. It's a training we didn't have in our day. It promises much for the future of agriculture and it is fitting that the winners among these youngsters should have a place in agriculture's greatest exposition."

KENTUCKY WINS

The University of Kentucky was awarded the championship in the fat weaver lamb class in the first scientifically reared flocks of the Agricultural Colleges, at the International Livestock Exposition, in Chicago last week.

A BOONE COUNTY FLOCK

The pen of White Leghorns which E. G. Stephenson, of Florence, entered in the International Egg Laying Contest, are meeting the mark. During the first week of the contest 10 pullets laid 22 eggs, second week 33 eggs and in the third week they laid 45. In competition with 62 pens of White Leghorns and many other breeds they now stand tied for fourth place. The highest pen laid 50 eggs. The contest is conducted by Michigan Agricultural College at East Lansing, Michigan.

FARMERS INTERESTED

I am glad to find so many farmers interested in obtaining the State Lime Pulver. This means that we will build up the soils of Boone Co. The first fundamental necessary to build up our soil is lime. It will neutralize the acid or sour condition of the soil and allow legumes to flourish. It will mean a larger acreage of alfalfa which is now a very profitable crop for Kentucky farmers.

H. F. McKinney, County Agent of Grant county, reports that: more than 4,000 acres of alfalfa were sown in that county last spring. He also predicts the average seeding of from eight to ten acres per farm in 1925. Grant county now has more acres of alfalfa, than 15 of the central Blue Grass counties taken together.

There is no reason why Boone county should not have a great increase acreage of this profitable legume.

Home-grown protein helps to make a prosperous dairyman. Legume hay and soy beans grown in silage corn supply it cheaply.

Butter prices have taken a drop. Now is the time the cow-owning work shows up. Only efficient cows can produce a profit when we reach the flush season of production, which always forces a decline in price.

UNLOAD NOW

Poultry breeders in the county are beginning to see signs of cold and roup among their fowls. Damp over crowded and poorly ventilated houses are responsible in many cases. Now is a good time to cull your flock down in numbers as the price before the holidays is always good. This is one season when the cold storage bird must take a back seat while the well fatted farm killed chicken beds the tables of the festive season.

After you have reduced your flock to where you can house them comfortably you will be able to ward off colds, to better advantage. Use blue stone in the drinking water at the rate of 10 ounces to ten gallons of water.

A good ration for egg production is as follows: Mash, 100 lbs., bran, 100 lbs., shorts, 200 lbs., corn meal 100 lbs., tankage. Scratch 100 lbs., oats with 200 lbs., corn. Feed 12 to 15 pounds of scratch per 100 hens per day thru the winter months and all the mash they care to eat. Use one-third of the scratch in the morning and two-thirds in the evening. Keep plenty of fresh water, lime stone or oyster shell available at all times. Sour skim milk or buttermilk will take the place of tankage and water can also be omitted from the ration.

Six good hens will make you more profit than several dozen poor producers or culls.

COLISEUM SHOW

Mr. J. W. Huey of Union, has prepared some excellent specimens of Barred Rocks for the Chicago Coliseum show. The birds are a credit to Mr. Huey as a breeder of good Barred Rocks, and to the county and state which they will represent. We wish them well and hope they bring back many ribbons to our county.

GOOD PRODUCTION

The White Wyandotte flock of R. & N. Chambers of Walton, laid 1322 eggs during the month of Nov. There are 220 hens and pullets in the flock. Miss Chambers won the Silver loving cup at Florence with the best Utility hen of the show in November.

MISS LUCY GAINES PASSES AWAY

Lucy Gaines, daughter of Oscar and Alberta Utz Gaines, was born September 14, 1869, near the home where she spent her greater and latter part of her life. One of the family of five children, Charles having preceded her to the grave several years ago. She is survived by two brothers William and Wilson, and sister Anna. Since the death of their parents these devoted sisters and brothers have lived together, sharing their joys and sorrows. Their home--known as an ideally peaceful and happy one, where strife and selfishness were unknown. None ever visited it without an ardent desire to return. Her character was pure and unselfish. Her life filled with deeds of charity and loving kindness. Not having been married, she built an enduring monument to her memory, and this world, of ours is better by her having passed thru. Two weeks previous to her death, she was stricken with paralysis. All that loving hands could do was done and her condition, seeming to improve, it was felt she might recover, until the morning of November 25, when a second stroke came, and her spirit passed into the Great Beyond as peacefully and quietly as she had lived. Twenty five years ago she united with the Universalist church of which she remained a consistent, faithful and loyal member until death. For she has only entered the Home above.

With the Master to finish her labor of love.

Funeral services were conducted Monday afternoon Dec. 1st at Hebron Lutheran church by Rev. Jno. Edwin Price, Universalist minister of W. H. Cincinnati, Ohio, assisted by Rev. J. W. Campbell, in the presence of a large concourse of relatives and friends, after which the remains were placed beside her father and mother in Hebron cemetery. Our hearts go out in deepest sympathy to the devoted sister and brothers, who mourn her loss. She will be sadly missed also, by a large circle of relatives and friends.

"Where the river of life flows soft and sweet,

Through the garden of God so fair,

He has taken our loved one--the broken link,

We shall find her waiting there."

CRYSTALLIZING SENTIMENT AGAINST THE CUT-OUT.

Although we believe that there will be a cut out in 1925, some of the leading newspapers in Kentucky have labored incessantly since the very inception of the movement to aid the farmers of the state in forming their opinion against the proposition, or in other words "crystallizing public sentiment against it," with the resultant effect that some farmers have fallen in line with that portion of the public whose opinion was formed with the aid of the anti-cut-out press.

The opponents of the cut-out employ two leading arguments against it, one of one of these they could have eliminated themselves had they either supported the movement, or remained silent altogether on this feature. The argument to which we have reference, is the one against lawlessness.

We are confident, and we believe justly so, that the leaders in the cut-out movement had no intention whatever of enforcing their plans by means of the whipping post, tar and feathers, or any other lawless means, but the newspapers of which we speak and the promoters of the loose leaf warehouses over the state have seized upon this angle of the situation and have deployed it with a more or less telling effect upon the public. Their idea is to convey the impression to the general public that those back of the "cut out" are "cut-throats," with the thought in mind that the cut out leaders, fearing the censure of the public in this respect, would give up the scheme as a bad job. That was one of the principal reasons for the anti-cut-out convention at Lexington.

If some of the loose leaf warehouses were "pulling suckers" in the tobacco patch instead of on the loose leaf floor, they could more readily see the logic in the cut-out, and the same argument might apply with equal aptitude to some of the editors.

RED CROSS YEAR'S COST $21,366,255

Nearly $12,000,000 Devoted to Helping Victims of Great Japanese Earthquake.

OVER 3,000 BUSY CHAPTERS

Aid to Disabled War Veterans Paramount and Reaches Nearly $4,000,000.

Washington.—More than $21,000,000 was the total of funds expended in all activities of the American Red Cross during the last fiscal year, ended June 30, says a statement issued by the National organization. This expenditure was almost one-sixth of the amount of money disbursed by the Red Cross in the war year, July, 1917, to June, 1918. Of this extraordinary sum $11,631,303 was America's contribution to the Red Cross for relief of the Japanese earthquake victims. This was increased to $11,765,803 by appropriations from general funds of the Red Cross, and it represented probably the largest spontaneous outpouring of beneficence of a single nation in the history of the world.

Over 3,000 active chapters expended during the year $4,869,000. The National organization disbursed $16,497,856, making the total $21,366,255—$11 for humanitarian work which reached practically around the world. In announcing the year's record of American Red Cross industry the executive officials at Washington emphasize the fact that the extensive and never-halting work of the Red Cross depends almost wholly upon the nationwide support of the organization from the memberships enrolled during the annual roll call which this year will be in progress from Nov. 11 to 27, when everyone is asked to join or renew their membership in the American Red Cross.

Soldier Service Paramount

Service, in behalf of the disabled veterans of the World War and their families is a paramount obligation of the Red Cross. The organization, through its chapters, is constantly in touch with this duty in 2,609 communities throughout the United States. The chapters alone during the year expended $2,000,000. The National organization expended $1,735,825—a total of $3,735,825 applied to assisting war sufferers toward recovery from disability and distress.

This work is constant in hospitals, sanitariums, camps, soldiers' homes, in the community. For example, in helping disabled men and women in places where they were transient residents $173,076 from national funds alone was required to help solve their problems. Every Red Cross service is ever at hand ready to meet the individual need of these men and women.

The enlisted men in the Regular Army, the Navy, and the Marine Corps, with their home ties, mean a never-ending Red Cross service which figures cannot fully interpret. In this work a total of $685,285 was applied in meeting an obligation under the Red Cross charter which has been fulfilled for over 20 years.

Domestic Operations Extensive

In the past year Red Cross operations were almost wholly confined to continental United States and the insular possessions. Relief work following disasters called for immediate activities in 152 places and a total of $787,603.87 was spent in this service alone. In 32 major disasters trained workers were kept at the work of rehabilitation for many months.

In carrying on the health activities a total of $444,886.66 from Red Cross national funds, and $408,000 from chapters' treasuries—approximately $1,252,886 in all—was applied, giving some idea of the extent of Red Cross service in the fields of public health, nursing, nutrition instruction, and spreading knowledge of personal hygiene and care of the sick in the home.

For advancing the cause of human safety, the First Aid instruction, locally by chapters and over extensive national territory by the Red Cross instruction car covering trunk line railroads, and in teaching water-safety and increasing the membership of the Red Cross Life-Saving Corps, the total cost was $288,234.71, of which $216,234.71 came out of national funds.

Army of Over 5,500,000

The Junior Red Cross in the schools—with over 5,500,000 in its "I Serve" ranks—was aided with $235,510.78 to which it is estimated the chapters added some $277,000—a total of $512,510.78.

In various other domestic activities the Red Cross spent $233,473.19, and the chapters in their numerous voluntary services expended an additional $1,048,000 during the year.

Foreign obligations, aside from Japan, were met with national funds as follows: Relief of refugees in Greece, $200,887.13; Junior Red Cross projects, $39,573.75; League of Red Cross Societies, $145,000; other in-sular and foreign work, $221,853.31. The American Red Cross budget for 1924-25 is $4,647,790.85, or $388,286.96 less than the budget for the year ended last June 30.

In good deeds for all peoples in time of distress the American Red Cross never rests. Help this work with your membership dollar—join on Armistice Day.

TRAGEDY

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

THERE are a good many tragedies in the real world today, as there are in books, and I have seen not a few of these. Of all those that I have seen I think the memory of Arnold, though that was not his real name, comes back to me most vividly and haunts me most often. Arnold's tragedy was a tragedy of drink.

There are a good many people drinking today, thoughtlessly, recklessly, because it is clever, or expensive, or illegal, or devilish, to do so, and not because they have an appetite for drink. Otherwise sensible people take the habit lightly, give a joke about it, college boys play with it as children play with fire, and middle-aged people take it to prove that they can afford the stuff. City officials wink at it and order the police to arrest no one unless it is absolutely impossible to do otherwise, but to get the fellows off the main streets. Few really do anything to help matters except to try to decide whether prohibition is a blessing or a crime.

I was called to Arnold's room one dull gray Saturday afternoon in winter. It was necessary that I come quickly, the messenger said. There were three or four fellows in the room when I entered, and the air was heavy with tobacco smoke and stifling with the odor of whisky. Gilbert, sitting crumpled up in the corner of the room with his head in his hands, looked up white-faced and terrified as I entered. No one spoke, but speech was unnecessary. On the bed, ghastly and horrible, lay Arnold, dead.

I got the story out of them brokenly. They were two or three agitated to talk coherently. Gilbert had furnished the whisky and they had spent the afternoon gambling and drinking. It was a lark only that was intended, but there was a good deal of the liquor, and they were all soon under its influence. Then suddenly as they were in the midst of their hilarity Arnold had pitched forward upon the table. They thought it a joke at first, but nothing that they could do would revive him; he was quite dead. Staggering, they carried him to the bed and sent for me.

I recall all the details of the inquest two days later—the mother of Arnold broken-hearted, Gilbert searching for some more compliments instead of giving you quick service. Swear at her, and she'll cut you off like lightning.

Breaks World Record

Capt. Joseph Jackson, United States marine corps, and a member of the Pan-American rifle team, broke a world record, scoring 100 consecutive cartons and 900 points, in the Pan-American master rifleman's match. His score beat by 4 cartons the record made by Captain Richard at Camp Perry in 1918. At a distance of 825 yards Captain Jackson placed 100 consecutive shots in a 10-inch circle, only 4 of the shots being out of the 12-inch circle.

"BLUESTOCKINGS"

Ladies who can discuss intelligently the latest topics are often known as "bluestockings." Roswell, in his "Life of Johnson," tells us about the "bluestocking" clubs which flourished in London. The literary lions of the day were frequently the guests of women who gathered to listen to their words of wisdom. A certain Mr. Sturges, a popular conversationalist of Johnson's day, was to these affairs the brilliant blue stockings from which the clubs derived their name.

The authors of dictionaries have not so far protested against the cross word puzzle fad.

Be curt and disrespectful to your mother-in-law and she'll stand up to everybody she knows. Be nice to her and she will decide to extend her week's visit.

Try to get a taxicab on a rainy evening and you'll spend the night on the streets. Take a walk with your girl on a pleasant afternoon and squadrons of them will follow you along the avenue.

Graceful Negligees in Cheerful Colors

When corduroy, in the supple, lustrous, lightweight qualities, entered the field of negligees, it filled a long-felt want. It is an ideal material, in every respect, for making these pretty garments (of which so much is required), and it has established itself permanently in the mode.

One of the new corduroy negligees is shown in the picture, in henna color, with a silky sheen. There is quite a range in colors to choose from and corduroy is beautiful in the fashionable rose, purple, brown, blue, red, fuchsia and russet tones. Sometimes these negligees are lined in matching shade of this silk or mercerized cotton, but often they are unlined. Besides being durable they will stand washing.

WOMEN AS OFFICEHOLDERS

Now that the tumult and shouting and smoke of battle have died away, it is interesting to note what an important part women have played in the drama; not only in voting and campaigning, but also in winning elective office. In twenty-two of these United States women entered the competition for State offices in eleven, women were nominated for Congress. This much has been accomplished within a brief four years toward recognizing the capabilities of the former stay-at-homes. Two women have won Governorships, at least thirty-eight women have been returned to the State Legislatures, while another was elected Secretary of State. To be sure, a great many of those who ran for office did not win—but there is significance in the fact that so many were nominated and that here and there they did win.

One curious fact is that women generally do not support women. Those who were elected were put in by men's votes. As a rule the two major parties never nominate a woman only when there is no chance for their party to win, and occasionally when there is no chance for her to lose.

Women took great strides in politics from 1920 to 1924. The next four years will be even more important to them, and every one interested in national affairs will be watching the developments.

The symptoms, treatment, and cure of Tuberculosis are subjects which the Kentucky Tuberculosis Association is devoting considerable attention in its campaign against the dread disease which it conducts every day in the year. This campaign is made possible through the annual sale of Christmas seals which are now being sold in every community in Kentucky under the auspices of the State Association and its various women's organizations.

According to the state association symptoms of tuberculosis are readily distinguishable and certain of these are indications of a "lung disease," the pulmonary form of the disease being the most prevalent. These symptoms include a cough which persists for several weeks, hoarseness, fever, rapid pulse, chills, night sweats, loss of strength, weight and appetite, frequent attacks of indigestion and spitting of blood. As soon as one of these symptoms appears, the patient should call in a physician or go to the nearest clinic without delay.

Tuberculosis is a prevalent, a curable disease. It can be cured if it is taken in time. The earlier the diagnosis, the better the chance for cure. The cure consists of the restoration and healing of the tissues destroyed by the tubercle bacillus. This is brought about by the patient being kept at rest in the fresh air and by feeding him wholesome and nourishing food. If tuberculosis is discovered in time, the combination of fresh air, rest, good food, together with a correct medical attitude, all under proper supervision, will cure the disease.

ANNUAL MEETING OF STATE FARM BUREAU DEC. 17-19.

One of the main features on the program for the Annual Meeting of the Kentucky Farm Bureau Federation to be held in Louisville on Thursday and Friday, Dec. 18th and 19th, in the Auditorium of the Hotel Henry Watterson, Louisville, will be an address and round-table discussion on the newly established Kentucky Farm Bureau Cooperative Purchasing Association.

Taxation, Live Stock, Organization, and other matters equally vital and important to farmers also occupy a prominent place on the program.

"Indications point to a record attendance at the meeting," said A. R. Long, Secretary. "Every farmer is invited and welcome to take part in all discussions, whether a Farm Bureau member or not. The Federation desires the cooperation of everybody in helping to solve the problems of the farmers of Kentucky."

"Be not arrogant because of that which thou knowest; deal with the ignorant as with the learned; for the barriers of art are not closed, nor artist being in possession of the perfection to which he should aspire."—From the Precepts of Ptah-Hotep, the oldest book yet discovered.

Here's an Unusual Golden Wedding

Fifty years ago John U. Lloyd witnessed a double wedding of brothers and sisters which furnished the basis of his most popular work, "Stringtown on the Pike." A few days ago Mr. Lloyd hurried to Cincinnati to meet these same brothers and sisters, now observing their golden anniversary. Above, at the left, are shown Mr. and Mrs. Albert C. Souther. At the right are Mr. and Mrs. Frank Moulter. They are perhaps the only brothers and sisters in the United States to observe their golden wedding anniversary at the same time.

NOT EVEN THE election caused as much stir in Washington as President Coolidge's trip to Chicago as an ordinary passenger in an ordinary Pullman car on a train following a regular schedule. There are many who agree with the President in feeling that he was a wise economy and a valuable lesson to the whole country, while others maintain that it was undignified for the President to travel except in a private car, and that the country expects its Chief Executive to do things a little more elaborately than the ordinary citizen. The President, however, is well pleased with his "experiments" in reducing the expense of his office and there are indications that part of the $25,000 allotted him for traveling expenses will be turned back to the Treasury. Mr. Coolidge is just as ready to practice economy as he is to preach it.

THE SUPREME COURT will be presented with a real tangle when it comes to rule in the cases involving the publication of income tax returns. The Government has obtained indictments in New York, Baltimore, and Kansas City against newspapers which published the returns, alleging that they have violated the law, while, at the same time, the Treasury is maintaining in the District of Columbia that it has the right to make the returns public and that the Constitution is not thereby violated. It is obvious that the Government cannot be right in both cases, but it up to the Supreme Court to determine which position is tenable. In the meantime, Congress has under consideration a recommendation from the President to repeal the publicity provision of the 1924 revenue law.

SEPTEMBER OF NEXT year is now looked upon by Administration leaders in Congress as the best time for holding the first session of the 69th Congress should an extraordinary session be deemed advisable. By that time, the Treasury will be able to give authoritative information as to the results of the new tax law and will be able to make definite recommendations as to further tax reductions. Everybody agrees that it would be useless for the Administration to bring forward any new tax program in the current session. There is not even certainty that the 1925-26 appropriation bills can be passed before March 4.

All the talk during the presidential campaign of a possible deadlock in the electoral college has resulted in proposed legislation providing for presidential succession in the event that an inaugural day should come around without a duly qualified occupant for the White House. The present law only provides for succession in the event of the death or removal of the President or Vice-President, the members of the Cabinet being designated, in order of rank, to fill the Presidency.

THE TEAPOT DOME exposure has had one good result, at least. Secretary of the Interior Work is planning the creation of a Federal Oil Commission to draft plans to assure a permanent oil supply for the Navy. The Commission would comprise the Secretaries of Navy, War and Commerce, taking oil problems away from the Interior Department. As all battleships and other war vessels will be oil-burning in the future, the preserving of the nation's oil supply has become a pressing Government problem.

MRS. MARY T. NORTON, who will represent New Jersey in the House of Representatives in the next Congress, will be asked to leave her hat in her office when she formally occupies her seat. One of the House's standing rules was shattered when Mrs. Norton paid her future colleagues a visit the other day. She wore her hat on the floor of the House, something that has always been prohibited in the American Congress. Mrs. Norton will be the only woman in the 69th Congress.

MOVERS ON THE MOVE

In a few days movers will be on the move. It is reported that Geo. Shinkle will move from the Hanna farm to J. R. Eddins farm in Locust Grove neighborhood, and that Walter Arnold will move from Mrs.

GIFTS FOR CHILDREN

Christmas is pre-eminently a children's day, and if it were not for the joy of making them happy, the holiday could never keep its present appeal. The choice of gifts for these youngsters, however, should not be merely a chance to give them a little temporary pleasure. It is an opportunity for the people of Boone county, if rightly handled, to interest them in useful activities.

Boys and girls who are inactive and shy, may be induced to mingle with others by giving them games or equipment for outdoor sports. Those who have seemingly no taste for good books, may be helped to a better appreciation by a nicely illustrated copy of some classic they ought to know.

Those who show interest in practical things, can be helped to develop their talent by sets of tools. The Christmas money that helps a boy or girl develop some latent ability is one of the best family investments of the year.

WHAT CHRISTMAS MEANS

It was not until 400 years after the birth of Christ that the anniversary was first observed. Festivities gradually became associated with the day, and the giving of gifts became its dominant spirit and feature, forming the axis of history around which all Christendom centers.

Christmas is a day of prophecy and hope. "Peace on earth, good will toward men," was not proclaimed with racial or provincial narrowness—it was a message committed to all the people of this world.

There are many who contribute toward the exalting of our vision at the Christmas season. It is the season of kind thoughts, kind words, kind acts. It is the season when childhood is enthroned, and the lesson the Christ taught. It is the season of giving, and our thoughts toward the gifts bestowed.

It is toward the "gift" of God to men. It is the season of beauty—in our stores and homes, and we try to make our homes more beautiful. Bewildering and ominous social and racial problems and perils press upon the world, and the only solution and final adjustment seems to be along the lines laid down by the Prince of Peace. While we enjoy a partial attainment we live in expectation of this glad realization.

XMAS ENTERTAINMENT.

A Christmas entertainment will be given at the school house Tuesday p. m., Dec. 23, at two o'clock. The program is under the direction of Mrs. C. M. Hook and the proceeds will go for the benefit of the P. T. A. Each room has pledged a donation to the building fund and Mrs. Hook's room plans to make part of its pledge through the entertainment, and solicits the support of all who are interested in our building project.

The program consists of special music by the male quartet, Christmas Carols by the H. S. girls, a humorous recitation by Kathryn Arvin and a play, "Miss Poinsett," by the 7th and 8th grades. Admission 10c and 20c.

A business session of the P. T. A. will follow the program.

RIISING ABOVE PHYSICAL DEFECTS

Mrs. Warren Harding, wife of the late president, set a splendid example of ability to rise above physical defects, in spite of the same. Mrs. Harding was really an invalid when she entered the White House. The majority of women would have held themselves in retirement, and would not have attempted the duties that go with that conspicuous position.

But Mrs. Harding knew that if she could maintain the customary activity expected of the first lady in the land, it would be a great help to her husband. So she went ahead just as if she had been a well woman. With rare self-forgetfulness, she ignored her own serious troubles while she did gracious acts for others. Few people suspected the strain she must have been bearing. Florence Harding has taught us a lesson that we need.

GROWERS PLEASED.

Tobacco growers of Boone county are much pleased at the recent sales made by the Burley Association, and it is rumored that another sale is nearing completion whereby more than 100,000,000 pounds will be taken at the Association prices. The Burley warehouses opened their doors on the 17th for the receipt of the stripped crops and grading started at once. The work of stripping is going on all over the county and the crop, while not as heavy in weight, is a better quality than a year ago. With the recent

OLD BOONE CO. BOYS.

In remitting for past and future subscriptions to the Recorder, B. B. Stephens, a former well known Boone county citizen, but who for many years has made his home in the "Show Me" State, writes the following from Huntington, Mo.:

"I thought we farmers would all be in it if it did not change soon, but we are still on the turf and not much change either, so I guess we will just continue to ride along on passes."

Was sorry to hear of Clev. Hankins and Lucy Gainer's death, but, if we stop and think we are, all of us young folks, getting old, do not realize it. As I heard a fellow say the other day and a farmer too, that he could tell the farmers what was the matter with them, and when asked what it was, he said: The farmers are all broke and don't know it. And I thought he was pretty near right. Give my regards to all the boys. I hope to be back in Boone one of these days before long."

The following was received from L. W. Stephens, a former Boone-co. citizen, but now of Lexington, Ky.: "Sir: You will find enclosed post money order for $1.50 for the Recorder for another year. I noticed the names of several aged people of Boone county in a recent issue, but you failed to have my mother's name, Mrs. T. J. Stephens. She was 91 the 3rd day of June, 1924. Wishing you a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year." If Mr. Stephens will notice, the names we published were citizens of Burlington and immediate vicinity.

COMMUNITY GIVING

Giving has become a community activity in the United States. In almost every American town today there is community machinery of some sort for meeting the cries for help that come from neighbors or from the utmost ends of the earth. Since 1910 we have collected and distributed for the aid of European and Oriental peoples nearly four hundred millions of dollars—more than $400 each for every man, woman and child in this country, outside of our charitable and public institutions. This does not include food, clothing and medicines. Is it any wonder that the Star and Stripes stand for something worth while in all parts of the World?

BAZAAR AND SALE

The Parent-Teachers' Association of the Hebron Consolidated School will hold a Bazaar and Baked Goods Sale in the school building, Hebron, Ky., Friday evening, Dec. 19, at 7 o'clock p. m. All are urged to be present. Any donations will be acceptable.

NEW POST-OFFICES.

The following is from last week's Falmouth Outlook.

A bill providing the erection of new federal buildings in thirteen Kentucky cities has been introduced in Congress by Senator Duncan U. Fletcher, of Florida, chairman of the senate committee on public buildings and grounds.

Falmouth is included in this list, for a $60,000 structure. A site for the federal building was purchased by the government several years ago, through the efforts of Congressman Arthur B. Rouse, but the actual building was held up on account of the war, which diverted into other channels funds available for public buildings.

Among the other Kentucky cities included in Senator Fletcher's bill are the following: Elizabethtown, $75,000; Harrodsburg, $85,000; Hodgenville, $65,000; Pikeville, $75,000; Prestonsburg, $60,000; Shelbyville, $100,000.

Work on these new buildings will begin July 1, 1925, if plans of Senator Fletcher are carried out. It is to Congressmen Arthur B. Rouse, of the Sixth District that Falmouth owes her credit for her proposed new federal building. Congressman Rouse has been working for ten years to secure the building on the site which he succeeded in having the government purchase, and there hasn't been a single session of Congress during these years but that he has brought up the matter. Heretofore, the government has been handicapped for funds, but now it seems practically assured that Falmouth will get the funds necessary for the erection of a new postoffice.

TO TRAINING SCHOOL.

Charles Powell, 17 years old, who was arrested and lodged in Burlington jail, last September, for breaking into and robbing the Walton postoffice of $3 and afterwards transferred to Covington by Federal officers and who at the last term of the Federal court to serve three years at the National Training School, on Brandon Road near Washington, D. C., was taken to that place Thursday morning by Emmett Orr, Deputy United States Marshall.

SEVEN YEARS AGO.

About this time seven years ago the weather turned suddenly and severely cold and the Ohio river froze over in one night's time and remained in that condition several weeks. The country was enveloped in a deep snow, and there was distress and suffering. When the thaw came nearly all the large steamers on the river were wrecked. The river rose so rapidly and the ice came with such force that cables were snapped like twine strings.

Merchant

HAS BIG DAY IN BURLINGTON SATURDAY—STORE IS OVER CROWDED

Some people believe it and some do not, though the preponderance is on the side of those who believe it. What?—It pays to advertise?—Some believe it and some don't—but more people believe it in Burlington than ever since Saturday.

D. R. Blythe, local merchant, believed it, and he reaped his reward. He wanted to give away a half barrel of flour, and a few other things, as an inducement to customers, so he told his customers about it through these columns and the rest was easy.

He gave a half barrel of Telephone flour to the purchaser who purchased the largest single bill of goods for cash, and to the individual who guessed nearest the number of beans in a pint jar, one dozen cans of canned goods. One fifty-cent purchase entitled the purchaser to a guess.

Chas. L. Kelly, of Waterloo, gained the half barrel of flour, with a purchase of $32.65; Mrs. Cad Sullivan second, $18.93 and Chas. S. E. Birkle third $17.93. Alfred H. Jones guessed within three beans of the correct number in the jar, and received the canned goods. A pure food demonstration was held in connection with the sale by representatives of Heinz, Strictman and the E. R. Webster Coffee Co., of Cincinnati. These men were also present and their day.

Why sure it pays—and the only way to find out, is to reap the benefit yourself.

Ford Coupe

ABANDONED ON DIXIE HIGHWAY—DISCOVERED BY DEPUTY SHERIFF.

A late model Ford Coupe was found on the Dixie Highway in Florence one day last week by Deputy Sheriff Utz.

The driver had abandoned the machine when he ran out of gas and had taken the bus for Cincinnati before anyone had noticed the incident. The machine was in good condition, with new cord tires, but the license plates had been removed. A letter was found in the machine from a prisoner in a county jail some where in Central Kentucky as a part of a Lexington newspaper was also found.

No report has been had in the local sheriff's office on the stolen car at this writing, although the sheriff and deputies are making efforts to locate the owner.

BIG REVENUE INCREASE.

According to a statement issued by the State Tax Commission, at Frankfort, revenue from collection of 1924 taxes were estimated at $12,698,928, an approximate $2,000,000 increase over last year, to be placed in the various State funds on June 30, 1925, end of the present fiscal year.

The State tax rate upon real estate was lowered 25 per cent by the provisions of the Nelson tax law, and instead of increasing the State taxes of farmers in this state, as has been repeatedly asserted, the State taxes of those engaged in farming have been materially decreased, the commission declared, "and agricultural lands have received the direct benefit of the decrease in the state rate. The State taxes derived from real estate for 1924 will be $1,098,506.93 less than State taxes from real estate in 1923."

Hebron High School Notes

The best Chapel program of the year was given last Monday morning by the pupils of Miss Riemann's room. It was a very varied program and showed great preparation.

The intermediate rooms are busy preparing a program for Christmas. From all reports this program will be the best ever.

The Girl Reserves will give a party at the high school on the afternoon of December 19th.

A committee appointed by the Parent-Teachers Association met and cleaned the basement of the school house last Saturday.

Don't forget the bazaar and baked Goods Sale to be held in the Hebron High School auditorium Friday evening, consisting of a check. Plenty of fun and entertainment.

LORILLARDS TAKES

1,750,000 POUNDS POOLED LEAF

Another Good-Sized Purchase of 1923 Red-dried Tobacco in the Hands of Association Made And Still Other Trades Are Expected Soon

Sale of 1,750,000 pounds of Burley tobacco to the P. Lorillard Tobacco Company was announced by the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association offices at Lexington, Ky. The sale was negotiated by President James C. Stone, for the Burley Co-operative, Major A. H. Shinkle of Louisville, head of the Lorillard company's leaf department in Kentucky, representing the company. Several other sales were reported pending, some of which are likely to be concluded at any time.

The Lorillard sale is the second sale of any magnitude for some time, the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company having taken Dec. 6, fifty million pounds, including all the association's holdings of the 1922 crop. The Lorillard purchase is of the 1923 red-dried tobacco, which is the only tobacco the association has on hand, or will have until Dec. 15, when the Lexington receiving plant opens for the delivery of the 1924 crop.

About a million pounds of tobacco of members has been registered for delivery this week at the Lexington receiving plants.

AFRAID TO GO HOME

IN THE DARK.

Ransom Ryle, of Raccoon Ridge, was in Burlington, last Friday afternoon, the first time since the frost nipped the pumpkin vines. When "Rany" comes to town he has so much business to attend to and so many friends to meet and talk with, that on his recent visit he was detained until Old Sol had disappeared behind the western horizon, eating a shadow of darkness over mother earth before he realized it. There being no "moonshine" in sight, he was afraid to go home in the dark, so he went to a store and purchased a lantern and had it filled with oil and lit, but when he drove out with Old Hobbin and the shay, he left the lantern sitting on the street and did not miss it until he reached home. A messenger was sent back post-haste after the missing light. This item was furnished the Recorder at the Bureau of Information.

The time has gone by when the country boy could be made contented at home merely by the traditional exercises in the woods.

F. C. IS R.
WORST N-E-M-E.

CHRISTMAS IS COMING

Christmas is coming around again—that blessed day when all refresh themselves with the friendships they have made; Christmas, when the drops of life sink and only the best in folks shines forth.

"I have always thought of Christmas time, when it has come around, as a good time, a kind, forgiving, charitable, pleasant time, the only time I know of in the long calendar of the year, when men and women seem by one content to open their shut-up hearts freely. And, therefore, though it has never put a scrap of gold or silver in my pocket, I believe that it has done me good, and will do me good; and I say, God bless it."

And as it did Dickens good, it has done countless other millions of Christian lands good; it has brought out the best in men and women because it has aroused in their breasts a desire to serve.

For, after all, the laziest Xmas is the one that you make for someone else; for the little child whose faith in Santa Claus has never been shaken.

Of course, there are always some grumps who grump about Christmas. They do not get the Christmas spirit because they do not realize that it comes from within; that it is the thing they give and not what they receive that makes Christmas. Christmas and its joys are in the hands of little children and the grownup folks who bind their souls to that indefinable, mysterious something that lifts man above the beasts.

And Santa Claus is a part of that spiritual side of us; Santa Claus—with his reindeer, his sleigh, bells, his glistening eyes and snow-white whiskers that we almost saw in our childhood—who never failed to conquer all obstacles of ice and snow and roofs and chimneys—and no chimneys at all.

If you have caught the vision of Christmas—that giving, not getting, is the secret of true happiness, share some of your material prosperity with unfortunates who have not been blessed so richly as you.

THE GAME OF BUSINESS COMPETITION

There are many people in business who always attribute their troubles to some existing condition. Before the recent election, many people attributed business ill success to the political uncertainties. Now that the election has passed, many of these folks will lay their failures to some other cause, or to most anything except their own lack of push.

There are something over 1,100,000 retail business firms in this country. A field so enormous is one in which there is a good chance for success, provided one shows something more than ordinary enterprise.

There are always a good many of these concerns that are reaching out with any special determination for new trade. The existence of many such concerns makes an opportunity for all who will make a determined effort to obtain business by advertising and other sales campaigns.

Advertising can not rescue a concern that is doing poor work. If its service is below the average or its prices above the average, the quality of goods, the firm should not be encouraged to advertise, because it is fairly sure to make a failure.

But if a concern is giving at least average service, then the principal obstacle in its way is usually its own lack of advertising sales campaign, by which it shall make known the value of its service to the public. No matter how good it is doing, its service does not count, unless the public realizes how good work it is doing.

As a usual thing, the concerns that advertise are giving better than average service; because their push draws a large volume of trade, which enables a firm to do business at a minimum of cost, and give something more than the ordinary value for a dollar.

TRADING EDUCATION FOR SPENDING MONEY

A noted educator declared the other day, that many young girls become so envious of the silk stockings and other pretty things worn by young women of a little greater age, that they quit school prematurely early, in order to earn spending money with which to buy these things right off. They can not wait for the things they covet.

Many boys have quit school to earn spending money to take these same girls around to expensive shows and treats. Fully is not confined to either sex. The young folks who give up the solid benefits of education for temporary satisfactions, many of which are gone in a night, are making a very poor trade and show little bargaining ability in their dealings with the world.

KENTUCKY SHEEP WIN MANY PRIZES

Twenty-three Kentucky Experiment Station sheep won 29 prizes, including 16 championships and firsts, at the recent International Live Stock Exposition in Chicago. In competition with many noted flocks in the United States and Canada, the Kentucky exhibit captured a large number of top awards, and was one of the sensations of the great show.

A Kentucky lamb came within a shade of winning the grand championship; in fact many sheepmen considered this Experiment Station lamb as good as the lamb that was given the top place. The Kentucky lamb won the reserve grand championship. In addition to winning the reserve grand championship of the show, the Kentucky flock contained the champion Suffolk lamb, and the reserve champion Cheviott lamb and yearling Hampshire.

First prizes won by the Experiment Station flock include grade lamb, yearling Hampshire, pen of three Hampshire lambs, pen of three Suffolk lambs, pen of three Cheviott lambs, and Suffolk and Cheviott lambs.

In the Hampshire show, the Kentucky flock won first on yearlings and pen of three lambs. It also won second, third and fifth on lambs, being defeated for first place by a lamb which was reserve grand champion of the Pacific International Live Stock Show in Portland, Ore.

On Southdowns Kentucky won fifth on a lamb and second on a pen of three lambs. The first prize pen came from Canada.

The Kentucky flock almost swept the slate clean in the Cheviott show, winning first, second, third and 4th on lambs, third and fourth on yearlings, and first on pens. A large number of special prizes were won by the Kentucky flock.

The sheep work at the Experiment Station is in immediate charge of Prof. L. J. Horlacher in the animal husbandry group, of which Prof. E. S. Good is head. The flock was fitted by Harold Barber, shepherd at the station.

DRY LAW ENFORCEMENT

The continued reports that the wets in congress are encouraged and propose to make a concentrated drive for modification of the Volstead law, makes the liquor question a live issue.

Leaders of the Volstead law defenders are prepared for the battle of public sentiment, which is liable to be turned away if the continued propaganda is spread about the lax enforcement of the dry laws.

People in reaching a conclusion are very likely to be influenced by the stories of liquor smuggling and alleged prevalence of drinking, especially among young people.

Few will give enough consideration to the other side of the question. Many will not recall that as a nation we have been dealing with this problem only four years, whereas the legalized liquor industry flourished for the preceding 143 years of the nation's life.

If we should grant that up to the present time, prohibition has been a failure, to do away with it now would not be a fair test of the principle.

A high standard for prohibition law enforcement has been set from the very first, due to the tendency of those opposed to prohibition to parade before the public eye every infraction of the law.

Laws always have been broken and doubtless will be. No law is enforced one hundred per cent. Murder is punishable by death in some states, yet murders are committed.

In spite of the weaknesses, it is easy to demonstrate that prohibition has brought about pronounced public betterment and has proved of unquestioned economic value to the nation.

TALK TO YOUR LEGISLATORS

Many legislators will need no more than the recent election day suggestions that the country wants no hair-raising, throat-cutting legislation. The tremendous rebuke of realism has changed many a legislative ambition overnight.

Nowhere would it be out of place for business organizations, Boards of Trade, granges, and individuals to call their legislators into friendly counsel. Most legislators sincerely want to serve their people; it is usually where the people refuse to take an interest in public affairs that they go off on their own personal tangents, wool-gathering in the maze of unbalanced speculation as to what is "right."

A little commonsense now, like the proverbial stitch in time saves nine, might eliminate the nine unprofitable laws to every one that is really needed.

SLEEPING OUTDOORS FOR HEALTH

Have you all the energy you want? That is, are you able to do all the things you want to do in the way of work and play? Or, do you merely sigh when you see someone else climb to success, or get fun out of life, and say "Well, if I did that, I'd be in a hospital in no time."

Whether you are the one who makes others sigh with envy or whether you sigh with envy at others, this message is meant for you. Energy, strength, pep, whatever you wish to call it, comes only with good health. If you have as much good health as you need, be thankful, but also beware of losing it—the greatest of all gifts. On the other hand, if you have not perfect health you can begin today to attain it.

This is not a patent medicine endorsement you are reading. But the remedy for listlessness and lack of "pep" which are recommended to you as one of the oldest and greatest in the world. Better still, it is free. Best of all, from the standpoint of convenience, is that it works while you sleep.

Fresh air is the name on the label. Directions, take out-doors at night. If you are accustomed to sleeping in a warm room with the window open six inches, the mere thought of spending a cold night on a porch will probably cover you with goose flesh. But thousands of people have slept outdoors before you in every kind of temperature and climate. Tuberculosis patients, in fact, fight and conquer this disease that way.

There is no healthier energizer than fresh air. For many years scientist experimented to find out what constitutes good air, and they have learned that it is a combination of movability, humidity and coolness.

Your body needs all the fresh air you can give it. No one who works indoors all day and takes his recreation indoors in the evening inhales anywhere near enough of it. Consequently, the body becomes a breeding place for influenza, pneumonia and tuberculosis germs. Pure air fortifies it against their onslaughts and tones up the entire system.

Once upon a time, as the bedtime story teller puts it, people thought that night air was bad for the human body. Nowadays any doctor will tell you that the air after sundown is just as good as that of sunrise. If anything, it is purer, because there is less dust in it.

No bedroom, no matter how well ventilated, contains as much good air as a roof, a porch, or a backyard. Do not be afraid of lying awake all night with chattering teeth, for it is quite possible to sleep out doors comfortably.

There is an office here in your State where you can get expert advice in regard to the supplies you need for healthful sleeping. It is the Kentucky Tuberculosis Association, 532 W. Main St., Louisville, Ky. They are experts in health and they know that a nation of outdoor sleepers is stronger and happier than one that spends its nights behind closed windows.

Buy the Christmas Seals that help finance your State Tuberculosis Association, Kentucky's quota is $60,000.

RADIO LIARS

Progress has its handicaps. There's the radio liar, for example.

He is a creature of environment, a victim of circumstances, but he exists, and he has become such an offender of common decency, that a procedure had to be developed to squelch him.

The radio liar has had all of the natural advantages that the fisherman liar possesses, with the additional one that he never had to prove what he said.

He could boast to his friends next day that he got station WXYZ two or three thousand miles away and they couldn't call him a liar. Neither could they dare him to prove it.

But from now on he will have to prove it. Radio stations are issuing engraved stamps bearing their call numbers.

If the radio liar says he had a given station on the air, tell him to write the station for an enclosing ten cents, and if he convinces the station that he heard something on their program, one will be mailed to him.

Exit the radio liar. From now on, make him eat his words, if he can't produce the evidence.

Representative J. W. Langley is seriously ill at a Washington hotel from what his physician described as a recurrence of the cerebral trouble the Kentuckian suffered last spring following his trial and conviction at Covington on charges growing out of a liquor scandal.

THE KNICKER FAD

Professor Shaw of New York university warns men to avoid knickerbockers or democracy will go to the bows.

His logic is that a man may wear knickers with propriety on the golf links or while hunting, but that they are taboo any other time; that if a man puts on overalls, he is dressed for labor; if he dons a sack suit, he means business, and if he appears in abbreviated breeches, it is evident he means to play or pose.

However true this may be, democracy is not in any grave danger of extinction by the knickerbocker fad. It might seem serious in New York City, where those who play and pose are prominent, but out in the wilds of America outside New York, we have nothing to fear.

If a man has plump legs and a nice assortment of stockings of many hues, and enjoys wearing short breeches, let him wear them. He doesn't do it; long out in the "open spaces."

If our ideals of government are not deeply enough grounded to withstand the knicker fad then we deserve to go back to the age of class distinctions when a man who worked was not regarded a gentleman.

ARE FARMERS REALLY GOING IN THE HOLE?

Are farmers really losing money? Is it a fact that farming no longer pays? Is it true that skilled tradesmen in cities are getting big wages, merchants making good profits, professional men prosperous, and about every one else happy but farmers? Is there no way of getting at the real facts?

"Most farmers say that they are going in the hole pretty fast," says T. R. Bryant, assistant director of the extension division of the Kentucky College of Agriculture, which is planning a system of practical bookkeeping for farmers. "Some other people say that farmers have it pretty easy, with plenty of rich milk and chickens, and with no house rent to pay."

"The fact is that neither the farmer nor his critic knows exactly how the farmer is coming out, because no record of his transactions is being kept. If farming is a business then how can it expect to succeed as a business and keep no records, a thing that every other business finds necessary?"

The college is trying to stimulate farmers to keep accounts. With money furnished by the Farmer's Home Journal of Louisville, the extension division of the college, proposes to hold an accounting contest next year, beginning March 1. The first prize will be $100 with nine other prizes. The college will furnish the account books, and aid the farmers in keeping accurate records of their transactions.

Not many people would go into a store in Boone county and buy anything with their eyes shut, but a lot of them have done the same thing in buying stuff from a catalog description.

Next Thursday is Christmas.

Atty. S. W. Tolin spent Monday in Frankfort.

E. S. Ryle and daughter were visiting here Sunday.

Mrs. G. W. Tolin is visiting her brother at Benton Harbor, Mich.

Not much coming and going the latter part of last week after court adjourned.

Miss Hazel Marie Clore spent last Friday night and Saturday with Miss Irene Kirkpatrick.

Jerry Fowler and wife, of near Hebron, spent Sunday with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Fowler.

The Recorder sent to a relative or friend will make a Christmas gift that will be appreciated. Try it.

Claimed to be much waste of money at Christmas, but the kid element have not so far joined in this complaint.

Married men are beginning to reconcile themselves to the prospect of wearing Christmas neckties selected by their wives.

The farmer looks forward to the end of the hunting season so that he can go from the house to the barn in safety.

The children may not like the toys you are buying for Christmas, but anyway they will have the fun of smashing them.

W. P. Beemon, wife and daughter, Miss Myrtle, of Pleasant Valley neighborhood, spent Sunday with L. C. Weaver and wife.

Burlington Masonic Lodge No. 254, will meet Saturday Dec. 27th, at 2 p. m., for the purpose of electing officers for the year 1925.

The Dixie Light Company is now furnishing light to the Baptist church. The change in the lightning system was made last Saturday.

Being told that money should be put into circulation, many people are taking it out of the banks and putting it into the hands of sellers of worthless stocks.

The Essex Coach that will be given in the Recorder subscription campaign will be on exhibition at the B. B. Hume garage in Covington, Ky., just as soon as it has been received from the factory.

The financial condition of the State of Kentucky is such that Gov. Fields should carefully consider the question of calling the Legislature in special session. Road work should not stop and the state finances should be thoroughly investigated.

Gov. William J. Fields today appointed Curran Pope, Louisville, as a member of the State Board of Charities and Corrections for four years, to succeed Robert H. Winn, Winchester, resigned. Mrs. Herbert Mengel, Louisville, was reappointed to the Kentucky Library Commission for a four-year term. Mrs. Mengel has been chairman of the commission for three years.

Falling Tree

CATCHES BOY BENEATH IT—SERIOUSLY THOUGH NOT FATALY HURT

Clifford Coyle, son of Geo. Coyle, of near Devons, was seriously hurt last Thursday afternoon about 1:30 o'clock when a falling tree pinned him to the ground.

Young Coyle was assisting in the felling of a tree for fire-wood, and in falling the body of the tree struck the back of his head, knocking him down and burying his face in the mud. Had the ground been frozen he would unquestionably have been killed. That portion of the tree which struck his head was 1 1/2 inches in diameter.

Sheriff B. B. Hume, uncle of the injured boy reports that he will in all probability recover, though in a critical condition.

Three doctors, Rouse, Slater and Sayre, were called in consultation.

B. H. S. NOTES.

Our basket ball team closed the season with eight victories and only one defeat. We feel proud of our boys and hope they will do as well in foot ball and base ball.

We have organized two foot ball teams at school, just to play in the school. Alexander, Yelton is captain of one and Albert Kirkpatrick the other.

We get out for the holidays next Tuesday p. m., Dec. 23, and don't have to go back until Jan. 1, 1925, the following Thursday week.

Several of the pupils were, absent last week on account of colds.

CARD OF THANKS

We take this means of thanking each and every one who was so kind to us and came to our assistance in the hour of our sore trial in the death of our beloved one James Albie Grant. Their many kindly deeds and comforting and consoling words will, never, be forgotten, and have in measure lightened the burden so suddenly cast upon us at the same time we recognize that the call of Him who doeth all things for the best, has been answered by our loved one.

Father, Mother and Brother.

BONDS RET'ED

The Boone County Electric Service Company retired two one hundred dollar bonds last week. Each bond bears a serial number, and these numbers were placed in a hat and drawn therefrom by a disinterested party. The numbers drawn were 68 and 90, belonging to Mrs. Carrie P. Riddell, of Burlington, and Hebron Deposit Bank respectively. This custom will be followed at the end of each fiscal year until the bonds are all retired.

SURPRISE SHOWER

Mr. and Mrs. C. N. York were tendered a surprise in the form of a shower of useful presents last Monday evening at their home.

That Mr. and Mrs. York are popular folks was very evident according to the number of gifts they received for which they extend thanks to their friends.

NOTICE

A meeting of all members of Burlington Lodge 109, K. of P. will be held next Saturday at 7 p. m. All members should be present. Important business to be transacted.

NOTICE

MRS. B. E. AYLOR, Secretary.

Rev. Carter, of Petersburg, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Gordon and daughter Miss Jessie, and Miss Sadie Riemann of Hebron, were the delightful dinner guests Sunday, of Mrs. Nellie M. Markland and son Graham.

A Kalamazoo college professor declares that American girls are all that could be desired from the viewpoint of beauty, but that does not prove that they can cook muffins.

The college students will soon be home for the holidays, but of course they won't be able to tell us anything about their lessons in Latin and psychology.

President Coolidge did not deliver his message to Congress in person, but anyway the Congressmen heard the voters speak.

Geo. Allen, of Newport, who died from burns received when a water tank exploded, was buried at Bellevue, Tuesday.

Mrs. Estelle Starcher reports that some one took a can of her cream and she knows the guilty party.

Mrs. Lorena Cropper is visiting her son, Dr. Raymond Cropper and wife, at Winchester, Ky.

Circuit Court adjourned Thursday of last week.

Wholesome Neglect

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

OUR neighbor across the street, who was the mother of nine children, all of whom were a credit to themselves and to the community, used to say when asked how she succeeded in rearing her family so successfully, that there was nothing better for children than a good dose of neglect.

I have wondered some times if the fact that youngest sons and only children have so little independence and initiative is not because they have never been left alone. The host of parents and grandparents and aunts and uncles which incessantly hovers around makes any moments of heavy neglect impossible. The child is never given a chance to think for himself or to work himself out of a difficult corner.

A student with whom I talked only a short time ago assured me that he thought the best service I had ever done him during the four years of his undergraduate course was to leave him alone, to refrain from giving him advice when he knew I wanted to do so, and when there was evident reason for it, to keep from calling him to account for his wrongdoing when he knew that I was aware of what he had done and disapproved of it. If I had reproved him he would have argued; as I did not he changed his conduct.

It is a difficult lesson for parents and teachers and organization officers to learn, but it is often true, nevertheless, that the best way to reform children is not to notice them. The best way to teach young people a lesson is to set them an example and say nothing, the best way to impress children is not to lay down so many rules and to preach less. I have often felt that the reason some fellows do better than others is because like the old lady's children, they have been given a dose of neglect—they have been allowed to work out their own salvation.

When we know that someone will coddle us and wait on us and run after us and think for us—when someone is always at hand to bear our sorrows and carry our burdens and pull us back from danger we grow to expect it. I have seen a child who could not pack a bag or wash a dish or do a job of handiwork if they were going on a journey; I know young men who cannot get up in the morning without being called; I know boys who never get out the books unless they are told. If our education is worth anything it ought to teach us to be independent.

Perhaps we need a little more neglect.

A car load of equipment of the very latest type for the new WLW broadcasting station of The Crosley Radio Corporation is being installed at Harrison, Ohio, under the direct supervision of H. S. Price, radio engineer of the Western Electric Co. Mr. Price was in the development group and saw the new five-kilowatt outfit grow from blue prints to the finished product at the factory in Philadelphia.

Work of completing the installation of the new broadcasting station should be completed before Christmas and tests made by that time. Every thing is being done to speed the work along but the inaugural program will not be announced until reports have been received that the tests are successful. It is not the intention of Powell Crosley, Jr., to sacrifice quality for speed and Mr. Price will remain at the WLW station and studio exclusively.

Congress has begun its final session in a cheerful mood, and the country also feels cheerful that it is getting through.

COUNTY COURT CLERK

We are authorized to announce
NEWTON SULLIVAN, JR.
 as a candidate for County Court
 Clerk of Boone county, subject to the action of the Democratic Primary Election, August 1st, 1925.

Many politicians speak disrespectfully of "newspaper talk," but not during the period immediately preceding an election.

Will be an eclipse of the sun January 24, but folks who behave themselves need not fear the world is coming to an end.

If, by any chance, you want to know how explorers feel when ice-bound, just tell a woman she should have her hair dyed because gray hair makes her look older.

Many of the speculators who put the stock market "up" because prices were too low, will soon, having sold their stocks, be putting it down because they are too high.

Observation of several gangs of workmen seen recently has suggested that it is not necessary to worry for fear that the American people are injuring themselves by too much haste.

When five people are trying to get the attention of one store clerk in December, they might think of the date back in November when two clerks were trying to sell one customer.

Over 4,000 boys and girls of the Evanston, Ill., public schools have a balance in the school savings fund of $75,025 saved since Sept., 1923.
 A large part of their savings have also been invested in bonds.

Charles W. Bryan, governor of Nebraska, asserts that 13 cents a gallon is a fair retail price for gas-oiline and that 15 and 16 cents is robbery. The state supply station is furnishing it at 13 cents. The city of Lincoln is taking preliminary steps to go into the retail business.

The publication of a long list of federal income taxpayers in Des Moines, Iowa, has resulted in a "taxing" investigation by a force of government officers. It is claimed that bank deposits of nearly $2,000, 000 are involved and that 150 persons may be charged with illegal returns and possibly bootlegging.

More than 20,000 boys and girls in Minnesota have been building a foundation for substantial agriculture prosperity. There are 200 boys and girls' clubs in that state, representing that number of communities, whose members are engaged in raising high grade stock, growing grains and vegetables and learning breadmaking, dressmaking and canning.

There are more than 1,000,000 women engaged as farmers in the United States, approximately 20 per cent of whom are owners and managers of their own farms, specializing in dairying, truck gardening, poultry, fruit, flowers etc. In addition to this there are 2,000,000 women engaged in business of whom only 2 per cent are owners, managers, officers, foremen or overseers.

The Ford Motor Company is building an electric locomotive for the Toledo & Ironton railroad which will be the largest and most powerful in the world. It is 117 feet long, 10 wide and 15 high, and weighs 340 tons. It will have 16 pairs of driving wheels each actuated by a 250 horsepower motor and will draw a train of 150 coal laden cars at an average speed of 17 miles per hour.

Over 3,500,000 children in the rural districts of this nation are enrolled in the 174,947 one-teacher schools. This problem demands the best attention of educational leaders and of the taxpayers who support the schools. On the other hand cities are struggling with the problem of how to provide seats for each pupil. Back of both problems is that of the necessity for trained and competent teachers.

During the year 1923 the states of Illinois, Pennsylvania, Michigan,
 New York, Indiana and Ohio completed 27,803,107 square yards of concrete roads. During 1924 the same states completed 33,659,956 square yards. The constantly increasing volume of heavy fast-moving traffic demands a permanent type of road free from excessive maintenance tax and concrete seems to answer the purpose.

The French debt to the United States amounts to over $4,000,000, 000 of which $728,000,000 is backed by the French government. The French government has offered a guarantee of the World War Debt Commission to agree on some proposition to cancel the back interest, or reduce the principal as an inducement for France, and Italy to refund and pay their debts. The group of international bankers, who heretofore contended that the debt should be cancelled, now express the hope that if Germany pays as provided in the Dawes plan, then France has no excuse for not paying. But if Germany fails they say it would be impossible for France to live up to any agreement that might be made. In other words they want a conditional funding agreement.

The Night Before Christmas

IT WAS the night before Christmas, when all through the house
 Not a creature was stirring,
 not even a mouse;
 The stockings were hung by the chimney with care,
 In hopes that St. Nicholas soon would be there;
 The children were nestled
 all snug in their beds,
 While visions of sugarplums danced in their heads.

AND filled all the stockings;
 then turned with a jerk,
 And laying his finger aside of his nose,
 And giving a nod, up the chimney he rose;
 He sprang to his sleigh, to his team gave a whistle,
 And away they all flew like the down of a thistle.
 But I heard him exclaim, ere he drove out of sight,
 "Happy Christmas to all, and to all a good night!"

To complete the triumvirate of great flags to drape above the crypt of Woodrow Wilson, the historic flag carried at the head of the first contingent of American troops to parade in London after the entry of the United States into the World War has been placed above the tomb. It touches the national flag that was placed above the tomb when the commander-in-chief of America's World War forces was laid to rest in Bethlehem chapel at Washington, and the colors of George Washington Post of The American Legion, placed above the crypt on Armistice Day. Woodrow Wilson was a member of George Washington Post of the Legion, the first post to be enshrined in the organization.

The latest flag to be placed above the tomb was carried by American engineer troops overseas and through the war. When they paraded in London in the summer of 1917, the flag was saluted by King George and its bearers were described as the first foreign soldiers to march in the British capital since 1688.

THRILLS FOR SPEEDERS

Whether it is actually put into practice or not, we can not vouch, but a plan of dealing with speeders reported from a California town was much to commend it.

As a punishment for reckless driving, the offender is forced to take a ride in an airplane, piloted by an expert, who shoots through space at terrific speed, with variations in the way of dips, tail spins and a few loops. This treatment is said to be very effective in taking the speed mania out of the culprit and causing him to dread a second "sentence."

Automobiles are not a rule, particularly courageous. Generally they are just plain fools who do not realize the danger to which they subject themselves and others.
 The treatment described above seems quite appropriate.—Ex.

Take Care of Eggs—Now that cold weather has arrived carefully collect the eggs and store them in a suitable place. Eggs should be held at a temperature of 50 to 60 degrees Fahrenheit. The storage house should be free from odors and not too dry. Make a practice of shipping your eggs regularly.

ORDERING AN OFFENSIVE

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
 Dean of Man, University of Illinois.

"MY LEFT is giving way," Marshal Foch wrote when defensive matters were in a bad way with him, and defeat seemed imminent.
 "My right is falling back," consequently I am ordering a general offensive, a decisive attack by the center." In short, when he seemed about to fall he chose as most opportune time to make the decisive attack.

It is not infrequent in the last half of the ninth inning with two men out and the score tied that some one knocks a home run that wins the game.
 It was in the last five minutes of play of the best football game I ever saw that Fletcher kicked the goal that won the western championship.

No game is really lost until it is played out. Every man at one time or another, in intellectual as well as physical matters, finds himself with both wings pretty well out of commission, but that is no reason why, without a struggle, he should give himself over to defeat. It is the time to make the attack by the center, to hit the enemy a staggering blow in the solar plexus.

Murphy slouched into my office and dropped in a heap into the chair in front of my desk. I could see that both wings were pretty well damaged.
 "Well?" I inquired with gentle sympathy.

"I'd like to withdraw," he said.
 "What's the matter?" I asked.
 "Well, I've cut out of Spanish—can't get it at all—and I'm not doing so well in the rest of the subjects, so I'm going to pull out now, and get a new start next semester."

His wings were broken perhaps, but there was no thought of a general offensive on his part. He was ready to retreat, ready to give up, ready to quit, when a strong offensive would have won the battle for him.

It takes courage to keep up the fight when failure stares one in the face but there is no such thing as defeat to the man who believes in himself and who is willing to work.

FOR THE UNEXPECTED GUEST

After a few experiences of an influx of unexpected guests with but little in the larder, the wise housewife will forewarn any more of such unpleasant occurrences by providing for just such emergencies.

It is a good idea to have a few easily prepared recipes with all materials in reserve, as one is apt to forget the most important detail in the flutter of preparation.

An emergency shelf with cans, bottles, jars and glasses of good things, besides pickles, relishes and preserves from the fruit closet will tide over almost any occasion.

Potatoes are always with us and a dish of creamed potatoes with cold meat, salmon, tongue or chicken may all be easily served from a can. Olives, pickles, jelly or marmalade always help out a meal.

When the main dish is well in hand, salad materials may be gathered. The dessert may be simple—fruit, nuts and raisins or dates and figs, or a quickly prepared hot dessert like shortcake, steamed cherry pudding, or if the pastry is ready in the ice chest, a pie may be quickly made.

Plain Cake.—Take three level tablespoonfuls of butter, add one cupful of sugar, one-half cupful of milk, two well-beaten eggs, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder added to one and three-fourths cupfuls of flour. Flavor as liked, beat well and bake in a square tin.

Cherry Pudding.—Take one cupful of flour, one-fourth teaspoonful of salt, one teaspoonful of baking powder, adding enough milk to make a drop batter.
 Butter five small cups, drop in a spoonful of the batter and two tablespoonfuls of canned cherries, juice and all; then another spoonful of batter.

Place the cups in a pan with hot water surrounding them, cover closely and steam fifteen minutes. Use care in having water enough, but not enough to boil over into the cups.
 Serve turned out of the mold with cream and sugar for dessert.

Germany is returning to normalcy. Bandits killed eight people in a raid on a villa.

It's a terrible blow to the faith in Santa Claus, but still worse to lose faith in men.

Another little fault of our times is the lack of detour signs just this side of trouble.

If Father does the proper amount of hinting, he may get a new necktie for Christmas.

People who elect a man to congress and then make sport of him put the laugh on themselves.

People who object to the heavy silver dollars will find plenty of folks who will be willing to take them.

One trouble with the twentieth century digestion is that every time most organizations meet they have to eat.

SENATOR NORRIS ON TAX PUBLICITY

Senator Norris, of Nebraska, is opposed to repealing the publicity law relative to income taxes, and gives his reasons in the following statement, which will appeal to business men generally: "Publicity of tax returns is neither unjust nor a hardship. I know of no instance where such publicity has injured either the public or the person who pays the taxes. Furthermore, publicity will increase rather than decrease revenue, and tax authorities will sustain me in this statement. It is the dishonest taxpayer who has to be watched. The honest man or woman has nothing to fear from publicity. Keep the returns secret and the dishonest taxpayer has every inducement to take advantage of the Government. Keep the returns public and he will think twice before making a false return."

"We never passed a revenue law that did not have its defects, which in proof is the fact that each succeeding Congress is generally called upon to act upon some amendment or amendments intended to cure as far as possible these defects. This is another argument in favor of publicity. Keep the returns secret, as under the old law, and even Congress cannot get the information it should have if it is to legislate intelligently in correcting the law."

"Have you ever heard of anybody urging that the tax returns of the State and County assessors should be locked up and kept secret from the public? In every part of our country taxation is a public business and there is nowhere a demand that it be secret. If it is right in the states why not also in the national sense? 'I am of those who believe all Government business should be conducted in public. Nothing is more necessary, for in the end secrecy means just one thing, and that is corruption.'"

TRANSIENT FARM WORKERS

The Russell Sage Foundation shows in a recent report that there are about 3,000,000 farm workers who are subject to seasonal fluctuations of labor, and the necessity of moving around from one place to another in order to find employment. The farmer is compelled to depend upon strangers about whose working qualities he often knows very little, and who in many cases prove unsatisfactory.

And a great army of transient workers are forced to drift around from place to place, never getting any chance to settle down. Many of them never have families, or if they get married they may soon desert their wives. Such a condition must tend to discontent, and a good many of these men may get habits of idleness and take to vagrant ways.

It is a difficult problem, because farm work is irregular. A farmer naturally does not want to hire a worker for a whole year, if he needs his services only through a few months of weeks.

It is undesirable to have this great group of unattached workers drifting about the country with no settled residence. It ought to help matters, if farmers could depend more on college and other students who should help them through harvest and cultivating periods.

Every time a farmer makes some deal with a farm hand by which that man can settle down in one place, he does a good stroke of work for the country. Many farmers solve the problem by letting these men occupy little homes, and giving them a chance to cultivate gardens and raise poultry and hogs, by which they can tide over those periods of the year when farm work is dull. They are better off that way than they are rotting around the country. But there needs to be some nation wide plan for giving occupation to a great number of men who at present have nothing to do through the winter. The railroads could help by giving low rates of fare to localities where workers are needed.

A GIRL WORTH WHILE

Miss Annie Menuskin of Chattanooga recently wrote 300 letters on her typewriter without making a mistake. She has also taken as high as fifty words a minute from dictation direct to the machine. That's a pretty good record, isn't it?

But the most interesting part of the story is that she is totally blind. She was educated in the Nashville School for the Blind, where she finished the high school course at the age of 18, and besides her skill as typist she is an accomplished pianist.

After finishing a business course, she found difficulty in securing a position, because no one believed that she could do the work under the handicap of blindness. But she would not be thwarted in her determination to succeed and she has now been for several years a public stenographer in a leading hotel, where she is kept busy.

Whenever we who are in full possession of our faculties are disposed to whine about the unkindness of fate, we ought to think of what this little blind girl has accomplished—and be ashamed of ourselves.

Feed and House Cows—Not only are pastures short, but the frosted grass contains little nourishment. Cows in milk should be put on winter rations now and kept housed on cold days. Milk pail results will show that 1. pay—

TURN ME OVER

A WORTHY CREED

Although it has been widely published, "The American's Creed," adopted by Congress in 1919, is not as well known to the citizens of the country as it should be.

This creed was selected through a contest open to all Americans, for the purpose of securing "the best summary of the political faith of America." The author of the successful manuscript was Wm. Tyler Page, a descendant of President Tyler.

The phrases composing it are taken from the Preamble and the Constitution of the United States, the Declaration of Independence, the Oath of Allegiance and from utterances of distinguished patriots, all woven together into a complete and lofty sentiment, as follows:

The American's Creed

I believe in the United States of America as a Government of the people, by the people, for the people; whose just powers are derived from the consent of the governed; a democracy in a republic; a sovereign Nation of free sovereign States; a perfect union, one and inseparable; established upon principles of freedom, equality, justice and humanity for which we can patriots sacrifice their lives and fortunes.

I therefore believe it is my duty to my country to love it; to support its Constitution; to obey its laws; to respect its flag, and to defend it against all enemies.

Some Garden Hints—Before the ground freezes hard is the time to clean out the hotbed pit, repair the framework, if necessary, and cover with boards for the winter. Everything then will be ready to place the stable fertilizer in the pit in March. Store the sash under cover during the winter. Also secure enough soil for the hotbed and place under protection so that it will be in good physical condition next spring.

In a three-cent cake of yeast, it has been estimated that there are twenty-two times as many yeast cells as there are people in the entire world.

Sherman Peeno and wife are rejoicing over a little son born Dec. 7.
Frank Hood and wife called on Sherman Peeno and wife, Sunday eve.

Thursday Dec. 11, 1924, Mrs. Lena Armstrong entered into her eternal rest. The news that Mrs. Armstrong had passed on was a shock to this community. She was brought home from Ludlow on Friday evening and died the next Thursday at 8 a. m. She had taken a cold and pneumonia developed. Mrs. Armstrong (nee Kelph) was born in Laurel, Clermont county, Ohio, 75 years ago and was married to Sylvester Armstrong in her young girlhood, and they lived together until last November a year ago when her husband died. They both joined the Methodist church in early life and now they have met and seen the loved Savior "face to face" as she loved to say. She was a devoted mother, leaves one brother who lives in Kansas, and several nieces and nephews to mourn her loss. Quite a large number of her relatives and friends attended the funeral services which were held at her home here. The services were conducted by Rev. Bunyan, of Latonia. She was buried by the side of her husband in the cemetery here.

SCHOOL CRITICISM

If the most good is to be derived from school visits of parents and other patrons, the school should have the benefit of any suggestions or criticism that they may have to offer. The public schools are a co-operative enterprise, and to obtain the best results, we should all be thinking and working on plans for their improvement.

It might seem presumptuous for one who has not been in a school building since he graduated to offer a criticism of school teacher or executive, but since school authorities always have an expression of sentiment regarding conduct of the schools, patrons may feel free to say what they wish.

The Parent-teachers association will offer a good outlet for such expressions, and every well-wisher of the schools is hoping that a renewed interest will be taken in this organization. It can be made a forum for discussion of school problems in an intelligent way, with the entire elimination of personalities, and with only one aim—school betterment. And in offering criticism, school patrons should not do so in the spirit of finding fault, because such methods will not build up, but will tear down the school morale. Criticism given only with the best interests of the schools in mind will be of some value.

THE TIDE WILL TURN

Social philosophers frequently express the opinion that the present abnormal growth of cities will have to stop. They show how irrational it is for people to be concentrated so largely in the great centers of population, since all the necessities of existence become so very costly under such conditions. The producer of manufactured goods finds that he has to pay higher prices in order to get people to remain in such an expensive location. A small manufacturer located in a country town ought to have an advantage over production in such circumstances, since his employees can work or considerably less pay, and yet be better off. Sooner or later this drift to the cities will be counteracted by the increasing success of rural industries.

By applying 375 pounds of all phosphate fertilizer on an acre, Myatt Allen, a Carlisle county farmer, increased his cotton yield from 750 pounds to 1,800 pounds per acre, according to County Agent I. C. Pace. The cotton on the fertilized land also matured earlier and yielded more at the first picking.

UNIVERSAL DRAFT

Government authorities and various patriotic organizations are working on plans for a universal draft law, whereby capital, material and labor, as well as fighting men, may be pressed into service in the event of war.

The grave injustice of compelling the able-bodied men of the nation to serve on the battlefield for a dollar a day, while other citizens grow rich through excessive war profits, has been demonstrated to every right thinking person.

If the money power and big business know that war means sacrifice for these interests, as well as for the men at the front, we will find their influence directed towards peace.

In other words, it should be so that no person can possibly make money out of war. And if there is no money to be made out of war, there will be less war.

We trust that we may never have to engage in another armed conflict, but if this can not be avoided, then everyone should share the hardships and the losses which war brings.

The proposed plan for drafting all the resources of the nation for its defense should have the hearty support of all citizens.

A CHILD'S PILGRIMAGE

Eighteen hundred Iowa and Missouri school children paid homage recently at the tomb of Lincoln in Springfield, Ill. They were borne to the Illinois city in forty-three steel coaches with funds raised by the Shenandoah, Iowa, Kiwanis club.

When the boys and girls boarded the train for the trip, they probably looked upon the occasion as a joyous "lark." But before they reached home, they had learned a lesson that could not have been taught in any other way.

A visit to the tomb of Lincoln leaves an indelible impression upon the mind of a child that will ever be a part of its store of memories.

It would be a fine contribution to national patriotism if every school child in America could visit the last resting place of the Emancipator and in the silence of the tomb pledge themselves to a life of devotion to the ideals that he did not live to see realized.

The life of Lincoln can not be stressed too much in the public schools. It teaches the lesson every child needs to learn—rugged personal honesty and a sacrificial spirit that puts the good of all above self.

THE PUZZLES OF EXPERIENCE.

A Pennsylvanian told his text the other night in a cross word puzzle and placed upon the black board, and the audience were told that they must solve the puzzle before the pastor could preach his sermon.

It is much that way in human affairs. Our experience is one long succession of puzzles. Many people say they can make neither head nor tail of the contradictory events which occur to them, and they are bewildered by difficult experiences to the meaning of which they can find no clue. The world and their part in it are incomprehensible to millions of folks.

Yet our part in the world was not meant to be an insoluble puzzle. We need to open our hearts to helpful influences, to read good books and newspapers, seek inspiration from religion and earnest leaders, and busy ourselves in useful service. People who do those things usually find the puzzles of experience soluble.

CHRISTMAS TREES

Many people feel that land owners and farmers are doing a very foolish thing to remove each year a vast quantity of young trees for Christmas use for a small price, when if left for a period of years they would become a wealth bearing forest.

Yet the Christmas tree has a certain message to our homes. It brings the loveliness of the forest into the dwellings of our crowded towns, and suggests the joy of this beautiful world to people who are carrying burdens of care. It makes the children think of picnic times out in the woodlands, and it adds a distinct note to happiness.

Anything so much desired for a useful purpose should be provided somehow. If the forest owners are cutting down too many of these little trees, they should sow seeds over their hillside, so that in a few years they would get all the little evergreens the country will ask for.

Precinct Committee Meet

Democratic precinct committee men selected at the precinct meetings Dec. 6th, met at Burlington on Saturday, Dec. 13th, and formed the Democratic organization for the next four years.

G. W. Tolin, retiring chairman, called the meeting to order, and was succeeded by B. F. Stansifer, of Walton, Secretary of the permanent organization. Resolutions were adopted endorsing the Lexington Herald as the daily newspaper which might fulfill the needs of the Boone County Democrats, who have no Democratic daily paper.

A motion was made and seconded that a solicitor be placed in the field for this paper as soon as practicable, after which the meeting adjourned.

LEGION NOTES

Indianapolis, Ind. — Throughout the land the spirit of Christmas pervades The American Legion.

To the end that thousands of sick and lonely men and women who sacrificed their health in the World War may have a happy Christmas, posts and departments of the Legion plan to remember their disabled comrades.

In foreign lands many disabled veterans lie confined in hospitals, wondering what the folks back home are doing and if they are remembered. The Legion Department of Massachusetts, will find these men and bring to them messages of cheer and gifts from home.

In a study of the retail meat business the United States Department of Agriculture found that of the average consumer's dollar received by the retailer the meat costs 78.6 cents the retailer's expenses were 19.7 cents, and the profit was 1.7 cents. When a reasonable wage is allowed for the proprietor of the business it is hardly possible to show a profit on a yearly volume of sales of less than $14,000 the department found in its survey.

Less than one half of the corn crop in the Corn Belt States reached maturity before the first killing frost this year, according to reports received by the United States Department of Agriculture. Usually about 91 per cent of the crop reaches maturity by that time compared with 48 per cent this year.

"DAY BY DAY"

At Hebron Theater next Saturday night, Dec. 20, Gloria Swanson will present "Day by Day," and on Xmas night, Dec. 25th, Marian Davies will present "When Knighthood was in Flower." Comedy—"A Cold Reception."

Christmas day being a holiday there will be no rural mail delivery. Those having Christmas packages to mail should get them to the post office early in order to insure their delivery before Christmas.

Not merely is agriculture said to be getting on its feet, but some of the politicians have learned from personal contact that those same feet are somewhat heavy and powerful.

SMALL-TOP PAIL IS BEST FOR DAIRYING

That the small-top milk pail is a distinct aid in producing clean milk is proved by the large amount of hair and dirt that collects on the cover of such a pail during milking, points out F. C. Burton, professor of dairy industry at the college of agriculture at New Brunswick, N. J.

This accumulation will take place on the hood of the pail even when the cow's body, udder and teats are comparatively clean. Without the protection of the hood, this material would fall directly into the milk.

The influence of the small-top pail on the number of bacteria that fall into milk at milking time has been shown by experiment to be as follows: When the cows were dirty and only sterilized utensils used, an open pail gave milk containing 88,000 bacteria in every 25 drops of milk, while a covered pail under the same conditions gave milk containing only 24,000 bacteria in that quantity of milk. It has been said that the hooded pail can generally be expected to keep out at least 60 per cent of the dirt and bacteria that would otherwise fall into the milk.

The more dirt there is on a cow the more important it is to use a small-top pail. In selecting such a pail one should consider the ease of cleaning, the ease of use and the smallness of the opening. All seams in the pail should be soldered flush to make cleaning easy. The interior should be free from angles and inaccessible crevices which harbor bacteria and render cleaning difficult. Some dairymen object to milking into a small-top pail, claiming it is too difficult. With a little practice, however, one can readily become accustomed to its use. The benefit to be derived from this modern pail is well worth the effort.

Keep Milk Pails Clean by Using False Bottom

After trying in vain to keep the bottom of the milkpail free from the mire of the barnyard, a false bottom was devised as shown in the drawing. A round piece, 3/4-inch larger in diameter than the bottom of the pail, was cut from an apple-box side (any similar lumber would do, of course). To this were nailed three lath cleats, across the grain. The middle cleat was allowed to extend 1 1/2 inches beyond either edge of the board, and to these extensions were nailed two 1/4-inch blocks cut from one-inch lumber. To one of these blocks was fastened a spring trouser-guard such as is used in riding a bicycle. The spring was held solidly in place with a lath wedge. Two small lath uprights nailed to the sides completed the job. The spring holds the false bottom firmly in place. —Popular Science Monthly.

Skim Milk Fed Calf Must

Have Supply of Water

Calves need water even though they are being raised on skim milk. Because milk is largely made up of water is no reason for not giving a calf an opportunity to drink.

It is not a good practice to water a calf immediately after it has had its feed of skim milk and is pretty well filled up. The middle of the day is a better time.

After a calf is two weeks old, it should get a little water each day. On very hot summer days large amounts of water in the middle of the day may be followed by bad results. On these days it is better to water them during the forenoon and afternoon when they are out in the hot sun during the day. Then it is not advisable to let them overdrink. A small amount, a half bucketful or so at a time, and often, is far better than giving all at one time.

If the calves have access to fresh water at all times, time and work is saved. However, it is a poor policy to let the calves drink from a stagnant pool. This water supply has caused intestinal trouble and frequently poisoning.

Feed for Young Calf

Milk should be fed until the calf is six months old. By this time it should be eating all the feed it will clean up nicely. It is important that the feeding be continued while the milk is being gradually tapered off and, when the calf is weaned, it should be allowed to stop gradually. It is a mistake to stop the milk and then to give a large amount of grain at once. This will cause a "grain shock" and may result in the calf's death.

ROAD BUILDING

SENATOR SAYS, SPEND MONEY ON HIGHWAYS

"We have provided ourselves with the motor vehicle rolling stock at a cost of many billions of dollars and we must now provide the tracks upon which to operate it," said Thomas Sterling, United States senator from South Dakota and chairman of the senate committee on post offices and post roads, in making a plea for the continuation of federal aid in a recent address.

After outlining the need for a federal appropriation of $100,000,000 a year for ten years and a like appropriation from the states if the system of 170,000 miles of federal aid highways is to be completed within ten years, Senator Sterling stated that he could not say just what congress would do.

"When it is known that the wholesale value of automobiles and trucks manufactured last year amounted to over $2,500,000,000 and that the whole sale value of tires manufactured amounted to $780,000,000 and that we spent over $1,000,000,000 for automobile parts and accessories, exclusive of tires," said Senator Sterling, "it does not sound unreasonable to propose that we should spend at least $100,000,000 a year from the federal treasury and an equal amount by the states in order to complete our federal highway system within a reasonable length of time."

"We must not forget that the good roads built under this system serve even a higher use than that of the tourist or of the visitor or those on pleasure bent. We must think of the commercial and economic advantages of a system of good roads, of what they mean to the farmer, who, on such roads and by means of the motortruck, finds it easy and a great saving of time and expense to transport not only his grain, but his hogs and sheep or cattle to market. Another consideration is the enhanced value of his land due to the good road at his door or nearby. One of our great economic and commercial problems is that of bringing the market and the producer closer together."

Transportation Is Big Factor to All Farmers

The form and highway transport are closely bound together. The transportation of his product is a most important factor in the success of the farmer, for all the produce of the farm must travel first over the highway. It has been said the requirements of a good farmer are:

1. The ability to make a comfortable living from the land.
2. To rear a family carefully and well.
3. To be of good service to the community.
4. To leave the farm more productive than when he took it.

Every one of these requirements is affected by highway transportation. Take the first: "The ability to make a comfortable living from the land."

Tax on Motor Vehicles to Aid Better Highways

Owners of motor vehicles pay to the federal government in taxes each year more than double the amount spent by the government on account of federal aid highway and forest road construction, together with all administrative outlays, according to Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, who has charge of the administration of the highway funds.

Since 1917 the government has been collecting a tax on the selling price of motor vehicles, tires and automobile accessories, and also a tax on the use of passenger automobiles for hire. On June 30, last year, $580,012,021 had been collected from these sources. Expenditure on highways by the government in that time totaled $264,782,216, or 45 per cent of the amount taken in.

Good Roads Hints

The roads built by the Romans in Europe still are in use and in many places their foundations have required little or no repair in from 1,000 to 2,000 years. Watling street, which runs straight up through England, from London to the Wall, still exists.

Good transportation has given the farmer's children the same educational opportunities as the city child, and for entertainment father, mother and the children can go to the county seat on good roads to see Charlie, Doug or Mary in their new picture and see the same show that those on Broadway are enjoying.

White traffic lines are to be built into the center of concrete roads on grades and curves in Pennsylvania. Highway engineers, instead of painting white lines each season, will build a four-inch strip of white cement.

Paved roads have made possible the development of rural express routes in many parts of the United States where motor trucks make regular scheduled trips, picking up the otherwise produce small quantity produce which the farmer places on his roadside platform.

"And that other child, not on the hearth—he would not forget it; he would see that it was well provided for. That was a father's duty."—Silas Marner.

Just now we have with us many who say it is the father's duty to see that his children are well provided for, but that it is the state's duty. They would have the state take over the care of the children, as was done in ancient Greece, and leave the parents unhampered, to go about their work or play as they wish.

One thing these people overlook is the fact that the same Greek state which took the children from their parents and reared them, carefully selected the ones that were to live. Delicate and ailing babies were left out in some deserted spot where they would speedily die of exposure. Only the strong and healthy were allowed to live.

Unless some such artificial means of selection is employed, then the only means we have of securing the survival of the fit is to hold each father responsible for the support of his own children. The fact is that each father must support his own children, then the strongest, ablest, most intelligent fathers will be the ones who can provide for the most children, and so will have the greatest number of children reach adult life.

Just now we are living in a period when neither natural selection nor artificial selection is allowed to operate. We have in every community organizations that spend much money and more energy in trying to keep alive every baby born in that community—whether crippled, diseased or feeble-minded. We now gauge our civilization by our infant death rate—the lower the rate the more civilized we consider ourselves—as if it were a more humane thing to nurse a suffering weakling to adult life, where he must take his crippled place in life's battle, rather than to let him die during his infancy.

When natural selection is not allowed to operate by making every father responsible for the support of his children, and when the state has no sort of artificial selection such as that employed in ancient Greece, the quality of the population is bound to be lowered—so say the biologists. They say the results of our present policy are already very evident. The University of Oregon, for example, made a state-wide survey of mental defectives a few years ago, and found that out of a population of 783,000 more than 75,000 were dependent, delinquent or feeble-minded—all unable to work and a constant strain on the finances, health and morality of the state. There is no reason to suppose that the older states are any better off than this state, which is still so close to pioneer conditions.

D. B. Carson

D. B. Carson, commissioner of the bureau of navigation, in whose bureau is the federal radio office, championing the interests of radio amateurs, recommends that they have "a few narrow and experimental channels below 100 meters to encourage further development." In his report to Secretary Hoover, Carson stresses the phenomenal growth of radio as well as the necessity of having a bureau to insure the proper use of the radio waves.

Pretty Negligees Arrive in Many Styles

Just before Christmas the annual new crops of negligees make their appearance in the shops. They are of many kinds, ranging all the way from the little breakfast jacket, pretty, brief and frivolous, to rather gorgeous affairs of satin or velvet in long negligees. With them appear boudoir and breakfast caps—these are belongings that make an enticing appeal as Christmas gifts.

A light and silky cotton corduroy, in many rich and cheerful colors, has proven itself to be about the best medium for negligees that are at once practical and handsome. They are cut on graceful lines, and the easiest things to slip on in the morning. One of them, in henna-colored corduroy, is shown here. Sometimes a lining to match, of mercerized and silky-looking cotton material, is used, but as often they are unlined.

Merry Christmas

CHRISTMAS is a day of cheer because we make it so. We bestow gifts upon those who are dear to us by ties of blood or friendship, we contribute to the happiness of children and turn kindly thoughts upon the unfortunate. Each year sees a greater tendency to assist these latter with something more substantial than thoughts. In all parts of America, and we assume that the same is true of other portions of the civilized world, there is manifested an increasing desire to help.

Few communities, towns or cities lack organized efforts for the carrying of real Christmas cheer to every destitute family, every hungry wayfarer, and especially to every child of poverty; that the latter, at least, may not regard the day, its symbols and promises as things of empty significance. This is in accordance with the teachings of Him for whom the day was named, and evidences the growth of spirituality in the world.

How little we know of how well off we are! How we magnify the trivial things of life! How prone we are to forget the securities and liberties of American citizenship! How hard it is to realize that the elements of true happiness lie within ourselves and not within what we possess. But we are beginning to know, and the spirit of Christmas is an important element in our teaching. Right sentiments soon crystallize into actions. The phrase, "Merry Christmas," upon all lips is an incentive to make it merry, hence the season becomes a time to forget strife and gloom and to spread peace and joy.

Is the old-fashioned Christmas passing? If so, a better one is taking its place. Modern arrangements may have done away with the yule log, but we still have the holly and the evergreen. They are but symbols. The tender emotions in our hearts count for much more. We can blend our voices and attune our souls to full jubilee on this festive occasion, which commemorates the most important announcement of all time, that of the religion of peace and love. Merry Christmas!

OLD CLOTHES

There is one way in which we can perform many kindly acts of charity, and that is by the careful distribution of their old clothes. Winter is the time when the demand for clothing becomes more urgent.

There are always many struggling families that are greatly helped by such a gift. The slightly shabby suit, or dress that seems to one family to be too far gone, may with a little mending and freshening be just the thing for some other people who are not particular. There are plenty of people who are not too proud to wear old fashions. The people who put judgment and sympathy into the disposition of this material are rewarded by many grateful thoughts.

"EVERGREEN PARTIES"

Many people can think back to some little country village, and recall how in the days preceding Xmas it was a fixed custom to go out into wild tracts, for evergreen material with which to decorate their churches. Theoretically this was purely a job of community service, but marriageable young folks were often looking for other things than laurel or holly or whatever stuff grew in their district.

Today many churches buy such material ready made. If you asked the young crowd to go out and get that stuff, they would plead about a dozen engagements. In many cases the land where these pretty things once grew is now all cut up into building lots, or the owners forbid trespassing.

In many country churches the same pretty old custom still prevails. Young people are fortunate when they can find pleasure in these simple outdoor activities, and not have to depend so much on artificial entertainment.

JAMES W. HUEY WINS

The outlook for poultry growers for the new year is rosy, according to word reaching here from the Midwest Poultry Show held in Chicago last week. The price of eggs looms as the big factor and the Cow, Sow and Hen program sponsored by the Blue Valley Creamery Institute of Chicago is bringing about a new appreciation of diversification on the average farm.

James W. Huey, of Union, took first place in Light Barred Rock pullets and hens, third place in Light Barred Rock hens and pullets, fifth in Dark Barred Rock Cocks and hens and pullets, seventh in Dark Barred Rock hens.

MERRY CHRISTMAS AND HAPPY NEW YEAR.

We have passed through another cycle of time and during this Holiday season we have the coming of a New Year, which we hope will be filled with joy and prosperity for all. The Historian has recorded on the pages of the past what we have done, for good and otherwise. For 1925 let the pages of history be as pure and white as the new fallen snow, and when we have reached the Holiday season of 1925 we may look back and be happy and contented with our part in the past. Remember those who are less fortunate than you and do some charitable act that will assist in making for them enjoy the spirit of the season. We close our years work wishing one and all a Happy Christmas and a Prosperous New Year.

The next issue of the RECORDER will be mailed to you Jan. 7th, 1925. Correspondents and advertisers will please take notice.

THE CHRISTMAS CARD CUSTOM

Whoever thought up the idea of greeting cards which should carry friendly sentiments from one home to another for Christmas and other festivals, had an idea that struck a popular note. This custom has become so general that the postoffice does an enormous business each year carrying those pretty messages. It is hard on the postmen, but it keeps up many friendships.

Some people may speak lightly of these greetings. But when you get to wondering if your friends have forgotten you, and if they aren't ever going to take any notice of you again, it's a mighty nice feeling to receive a pretty card with some warm expression of sentiment, telling how much they think of you.

Many of these cards are an artistic triumph, with clever drawings that express the Christmas spirit, while the words of poets and philosophers are searched for graceful thoughts that will revive old ties and make them seem full of meaning again.

Special Correspondent of the RECORDER

WITH ONLY TWO months left to do real work, Congress is shoving all private bills and unimportant legislation aside so that there will be nothing to prevent action on the appropriation bills which are the chief task of the current short session. Following a Christmas recess, both houses will mark time until after the first of the year and will then set to work on the actual work of legislation. Some progress has been made already, but most of it has consisted in cleaning up matters left over from the session.

IN APPROPRIATION of more than a hundred million dollars for the Navy Department was one of the left-overs that have been disposed of by the passage of a bill providing money to bring the National Academy of Science up to the strength authorized and fixed by the Washington Armament conference. Despite the President's expressed desire to cut heavily into the naval appropriations, Secretary Wilbur is hammering away at Congress for money—and with considerable success.

AFTER A LAPSE of a quarter of a century, breakfasts are becoming a la mode again as social affairs. Mr. Coolidge started it with his breakfasts to members of Congress, a number of which are still to be held. Only the Republicans are invited, or rather only the regular Republicans, as Senators LaFollette, Brookhart, Frazier and Ladd have failed to be asked to have ham and eggs at the White House. The President has run through the list of his political friends at the Capital and is now entertaining the Republican members of the House of Representatives at these early morning functions.

WHENEVER A QUESTION of saving money comes up on Capital Hill Senator Borah, who succeeded Lodge as chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, comes to the front as the Administration leader. On questions of governmental economy President Coolidge and Senator Borah stand on common ground. Borah had his first chance to come to the aid of the President when an agreement was asked for a vote to override the Mr. Coolidge's veto of the bill to add some sixty millions of dollars to the pay of postal employees. Borah objected and no agreement was possible. The relations between Borah and the White House are becoming more and more friendly—so much so, in fact, that it is not improbable that the Idaho Senator would be President Coolidge's choice for Administration leader in the 65th Congress next year.

THE TREASURY is complacent, but the Senate is all piled up over the attitude of British officials toward the negotiations between France and the United States for the payment of the four billion dollar French debt. The trouble is that reports have gotten out that the American Debt Liquidation Commission is likely to give a better term to France than those accorded Great Britain. The new London Government, therefore, has served notice that it will expect from the United States the same treatment that we give France in funding her debt. The negotiations between the United States and France, however, are in a state of suspense, but the present in emotional exchanges are little more than the blowing of hot steam, though they may develop in something serious.

MANY KENTUCKY COWS PROFITABLE

Lexington, Ky. — Twenty-eight Kentucky cows on official test made the honor list during November, according to Prof. J. J. Houser of the dairy division of the University of Kentucky. Each of these 28 cows produced three pounds or more of butterfat in two days.

The six-year old Jersey cow Jolly's Dewdrop, owned by Harry Harkins, Covington, led the list, with a production of 116 pounds of milk and 5.35 pounds of butterfat in two days. A Holstein-Friesian owned by Clark & Smith, Long Run, produced 120 pounds of milk and 5.34 pounds of butterfat in two days. The only other cow to produce more than five pounds of butterfat was a Holstein-Friesian owned by R. M. Barker, Carrollton.

A special fund of $500.00 in cash has been set aside to be distributed in the form of salaries among active non-prize winners on a 10 percent basis. Any candidate who remains active through the campaign, making a regular report, but fails to win one of the big prizes offered, will participate in this commission feature. Think of it! One-tenth of every subscription you collect goes into your pocket if you fail to win a prize. This arrangement assures compensation to all candidates, and means there will be no loss in this race! Could anything be fairer or more liberal than this?

COUNTY COURT CLERK

We are authorized to announce
NEWTON SULLIVAN, JR.
 as a candidate for County Court
 Clerk of Boone county, subject to the action of the Democratic Primary Election, August 1st, 1925.

Not merely is a sucker born every minute, but in many cases they are twins.

Some people claim that the real labor problem now is inducing the laborers to labor.

Cal prefers a simple inauguration, but it is to be feared he will have to put on his plug hat.

The girls used to aim to be shrinking violets, but now they are expanding sunflowers.

A man must be getting old when he is glad he doesn't resemble the fellow in the collar ad.

When Nature undertakes to produce a real fool, she generally does a one hundred per cent job.

The kids who get a Christmas drum will be able to make a noise in the world at least once.

Claimed that every voter should go to the polls, but many are refusing to go only to the barber poles.

Formerly they used to extol the breadwinner of the family, but it takes a cakewinder to satisfy people.

Fearful that some college students get acquainted with their bootlegers before they meet the professors.

It is customary to rub out the price mark on Christmas gifts except when the same is unusually large.

The report of increased income among the farmers will set the fake stock salesmen headed for the rural districts.

The girls are urged to learn to cook, and up to now the bachelors have held 'no meetings' to offer objections.

Talk is said to be cheap, owing probably to the fact that the supply thereof is so much greater than the demand.

Some people who marry for money, not merely get that, but they find they have also married a bill for alimony.

A New York banker made his first after dinner speech at the age of 25. He ought to be old enough to know better.

A Federal examiner was inspecting the Burlington postoffice and rural routes on Tuesday and Wednesday of last week.

While the little girls are enjoying their Christmas play things, the big ones are having fun with the older kind of toys called beaux.

Realizing how much the old folks enjoy music, the kids will do their best to satisfy them with songs on their Christmas tin horns.

It may be appropriate to have our dollars in the form of silver coins, now, as so many people look at them as small change.

The Angola goat breeders recently met in Texas, but the proceedings failed to inform us who got the po-licians' goats in the recent election.

The school pupils can usually learn a lesson in a day, but many of the politicians have not yet feared the one given them on November 4th.

The boys are urged to wake up and make a place for themselves in the community, but all many of them seem to want is a place to sleep in.

There have been 14,000 violations of the dry law in Washington within a year, which suggests that some of the politicians may be enjoying themselves.

Successful business concerns don't spend much time causing their competitors. They are more likely to be planning advertising campaigns to get the business.

Claimed many people watch the clock instead of putting their heart into their work, but probably they are merely investigating to see if the clock isn't slow.

A flat-footed girl was chosen as the healthiest girl in America at the International Livestock Exposition, and her flat feet were probably not from going to dances.

From the way some people have gone about their Christmas gift purchases, they can't expect they are going to get them delivered until some time after New Year's.

The brotherhood of man may be ridiculed by the pessimist, but the epitaphs of those who do something to bring it nearer will endure long or that, some of those who have died.

"WILD CAT" STOCKS

A newspaper cartoon pictures an immense black cat, representing "Wild Cat stocks" sniffing the delightful aroma coming from smoke stacks and tall buildings in the background, representing the business revival and stock market boom.

It is a warning that is worth heeding. Salesmen who peddle the worthless stock thrive best when prosperity comes in and people have money. Easy money is the urge that leads people on to easier money, until they finally "bite" and are dragged under.

Pertinent promoters behind prison bars and thousands upon thousands of failures are the evidence that remains of the orgy of fake stock promotion and buying during the flush times following the war.

Some fake stock salesmen are caught, but never with the goods.
 Korte, the $2,000,000 Chicago swindler is in prison but those he duped will not get back forty per cent of what they "invested".
 Ponzi, the Boston investment faker, has served his term in the penitentiary, but the credulous who believed him lost their savings. Numbers of other stock crooks are in prison, and behind them is a trail of broken hearts, crushed ambitions and ruined lives.

People should profit from the lessons these major swindlers have taught, but all too few of them do because it is one of the weaknesses of human nature to want to get something for nothing.

The logical thing, then, is for the state to protect those who need protection against the wiles of the "wild cat stock" promoter.
 Better business bureaus in forty-two states are endeavoring to protect the public against fraudulent and doubtful investment proposals.
 They need the backing of a good "blue sky" law that is cloudless.

MOTORISTS' EYESIGHT

Automobile accidents have been increasing at the rate of $500 a year and in some quarters there has been active legislation woy gawkwofag active agitation to compel by law, the examination of the vision of every driver of an automobile.

The results that might be obtained from such legislation are doubtful. Those who are sponsoring laws in each state of this character, admit that in five states where the eyesight of applicants for drivers' licenses are tested, the methods used in enforcing and interpreting the laws make them ineffective.

If this is the result of such legislation in five states, what assurance is there that it will not be the same in every other state?

Drivers of automobiles are already surrounded with such a multiplicity of laws that they are never quite sure, when they leave home, how many statutes will be broken before they return.

Every law tacked on a few feet, all of which increases the expense of operating an automobile, and one requiring a vision test for drivers would be no exception in this respect.

Every law-abiding automobile driver welcomes laws that will curb speeding, prevent operation of machines by intoxicated people and keep down to the minimum practices that endanger the lives of others, but laws of doubtful value are harmful because they increase the disrespect for all law.

"DEADBEATS"

Only fifty persons in every ten thousand are "deadbeats," if a study of two million automobile purchases made on the installment plan, last year may be taken as a criterion.

The report was made by sixteen hundred finance corporations engaged in handling automobile "paper," for a convention of automobile purchase financiers.

It leaves the impression that Mr.
 Average Citizen is honest, and then jars us with the following:
 "Perhaps the reason for this is not so much the innate honesty of the buyer. Usually he is maintaining some sort of a social front and will pay rather than lose his prestige. If he is in business he must be known as a cash customer."

That spoils the effect of the deductions. In other words, those who buy automobiles on the installment plan find honesty is the best policy in order to retain their social standing.

Such reasoning is about as near the mark as to reason that they met their installments in order to derive the pleasure that their automobiles afforded them.

Many different causes figured in the lives of the people who manifested honesty by paying for their cars, and no doubt what the report chooses to call "innate honesty" beheld a high average among all the other reasons.

The average person is honest, else business could not be conducted along the lines that it is in America.

Governor Fields should give careful consideration to the financial condition in which we find the state and as to the advisability of calling the Legislature in special session for the purpose of enacting such laws as may be necessary to relieve the situation. A special session of the Legislature could be of inestimable benefit for the state but if the members should work for their individual and political benefit nothing would materialize for the good of Kentucky.

Let us briefly review the cut-out situation since the inter-state meeting held in Lexington, Nov. 15th. As you know the anti-cut-out meeting was held in Lexington, November 22nd. This meeting was largely made up and dominated by loose leaf warehouse men, speculators, independent growers, and a few disgruntled members of the association. That meeting helped the cut out movement rather than hurt it, as is evidenced by the communications which have come to our office from all over the district.

From the very start the aim of the cut out organization has been to decrease the enormous surplus of Burley tobacco which you know to exist. The recent sale of R. J. Reynolds Co., and P. Lorillard has not in any way decreased the surplus and therefore cannot affect the movement. No grower of Burley tobacco can hope to receive a fair and reasonable price for his product while this enormous surplus exists. The cut out organization stands firm on the action taken by the delegates at our inter-state convention.

We wish to quote from an article published recently in "News Herald," of Owenton, Ky., as follows: "There are some interesting developments in the Cut-Out movement which deserve attention."

"Since the inter-state meeting at Lexington on the 15th, when more than 1,000 representatives of tobacco growers voted almost unanimously for a cut-out, the antics have also held their meeting."

"Compare the two gatherings. The cut-out meetings were long and largely advertised. Weeks before, under a call of organized growers in this state, nearly every county—in fact most of the large producing counties—held mass conventions, properly advertised, for the purpose of considering the cut-out movement."

"By large majorities, amounting in many instances to almost unanimous votes, these counties went on record favoring the cut-out. The representatives met in Lexington. A call of the counties was had. Forty-one large producing counties voted yes, three large counties were not represented, and only two or three counties wanted a reduced acreage."

"With this showing, the convention decides to hold the inter-state meeting on the 15th. At this meeting, representatives of all tobacco growers from five states gathered. Great care was again taken to get the sentiment from the counties."

"The forty-one counties in Kentucky were again called. Not one changed its vote. Two of the three remaining large counties added their votes in favor and several border counties joined the movement."

"Ohio, Missouri, Indiana and Central Tennessee pledged their support."

"A week later the Anti-Cut-Outers held their meeting. Notwithstanding the studied and favorable reports of this meeting given by the city press, some very notable and important facts are conspicuous for their absence."

"No mention was made of a call of the counties. If no call were made, why not? How many counties were represented at that meeting? Apparently nobody knows. How were the representatives selected, and who selected them?"

"The Burley belt covers a large territory. Is it any wonder, then, that 1500 men, possibly 1,000 of whom were more interested in other lines of business than farming, should organize a movement which, if it succeeds, might hurt a few private enterprises for a year? Were these men competent to view the situation from the standpoint of the farmer? In conclusion let us state that the cut-out movement was started to save the growers, not loose leaf and hoghead warehouses. Neither was it ever hoped or deemed possible to enlist as its friends the selfish element among the growers who represent, fortunately a small minority."

Let us further quote from a letter received from Mr. A. F. Sanders of Garrard county, which was the only county who opposed the cut-out at our meeting:

Mr. Chas. Land, Lexington, Ky.
"Dear Sir:

"This is to let you know that since the meeting of the Anti-Cut-Out people on last Saturday, a great many of those who were on the side of those desiring to raise tobacco have realized they have played into the hands of the independents. And sentiment has changed and I believe within 30 days fully 75 per cent of the growers here in this county will be for the cut-out."

A. F. Sanders.

Mr. John Brose, delegate from Brown county, Ohio to the inter-state convention has written us. Quotations from his letter are as follows:

"Dear Mr. Land:
"Am sending you a report of our cut-out meeting, we held at Georgetown on Saturday, December 6th. We had the court room full of enthusiastic growers, all strong for the cut-out."

"Tell the boys over there Brown county is going strong for the cut-out."

John Brose.

FARM ACCOUNT BOOK READY FOR NEXT YEAR

Farm Account Book for next year, a Farm Account Book for next year, prepared by the extension division of the College of Agriculture, is now ready for distribution, according to Prof. W. D. Nicholls, head of the department of farm economics. The book has 40 pages, and provides for inventories of lands, buildings, live stock, equipment and the like, receipts and expenses during the year, and a summary at the end of the year. Approximately 1,000 copies were used by farmers this year.

The book is a practical farm account book, reduced to a simple concise form, suited to the needs of the average farmer, according to Prof. Nicholls. It represents years of painstaking work on the part of the College of Agriculture, and is considered one of the best practical farm account books in existence.

W. S. Harkness, a southern Kentucky farmer, recently wrote to Mr. Nicholls as follows: "I have been using the Kentucky Farm Account Book for two years. It is one of the most valuable things I use in connection with my farm and dairy. At a glance—and that is about all the busy farmer has for bookkeeping—I can tell how my expenses are running, as compared with previous years; also how much my expenditures have been for any one item. It cuts out the guess-work; therefore a farmer knows what he is doing."

The account book may be obtained for ten cents in stamps from the College of Agriculture, Extension Division.

The world may be upside down, but no one has fallen off, according to late reports.

COMPLIMENTS OF THE SEASON

The New Year places within our hands a book with 365 clean, white pages.

What will we write thereon? The book is ours to make or to mar. Will we write words and deeds of wisdom, or will we write such words and deeds of folly that the angels will mercifully blot them out with their tears. What will we do with the year 1925?

Is your ship anchored, swinging lazily with the tide? Are you drifting with the tide? Or have you weighed anchor, set sail and are you at the helm, steering your ship toward a goal?

God has given you your talents, your abilities, to help yourself and your fellowman. And some day you will be called upon to render back to him who gave those talents with usury. Do not waste your energies but devote your God-given powers to being good, doing good and making the world better for having lived in it.

Moment by moment, day by day we build, and when we stand on the threshold of a new year we always pause and look back to see what kind of a structure we build with the days, what we wrote in the volume of life.

Notwithstanding the storms and vicissitudes, enemies and prejudices that inevitably gather about either a vigorous ambitious, aggressive individual or newspaper, the Recorder enters this new year with nothing but red blood in its veins with one of the most complete and comfortable newspaper homes in the country, owing no man an obligation nor a dollar, bowing the knee to no individual and wearing the yoke of no party faction, with a following patronage and power in this community that we hope to increase through worthy effort. With these reasons for rejoicing we extend best wishes for a "Happy New Year."

"A Happy New Year to You." May this day mark the beginning of a new era of health and prosperity and happiness, and the experience of a fading past inspire to renewed energy and effort and success.

May destiny smile upon you and shape anticipation into realization of your fondest hopes. So, courage dear friends, and the compliments of the season.

FORMING MENTAL HABITS IN CHILDREN

Mental habits are formed in the same way that physical habits are formed. Parents and teachers give great care to children in helping them form good physical habits but they are often neglectful of the mental habits which these children may be developing. Upon the mental habits formed during childhood future success in dealing with other people and the happiness of life may depend. In adult life people are met each day with whom it is difficult to get along—they are queer, irritable, selfish and untrustworthy. These people were not born this way, the foundations for personalities of this type were laid in childhood. Parents wish their children to be normal in their physical development, but often times do not realize that failure to train children in proper mental habits cause twisted and warped and odd personalities to develop.

In helping children to develop healthy mental habits parents must have one fundamental principle—to permit the child as much freedom of expression as possible. Children should not be nagged, they should be allowed to find expression for themselves in their play, their work and in their contact with other members of the family. If this expression is unwise or unsafe or interferes with the rights of others it should be directed in such a manner that the child's energy will be wisely expended, but this should be done without repressing him. Parents who gain control over children by breaking their spirit are unworthy parents.

Do not frighten children, for frights in childhood often bring serious consequences. Do not shame children before others. Children who are humiliated, embarrassed or made painfully self-conscious retain the memory of this in after years. Parents and teachers often create in the minds of children the feeling of inferiority by comparison. The feeling of inferiority if acquired in childhood will do lasting harm.

Washington, D. C.—Disabled veterans having claims before the Veterans Bureau are advised by bureau officials that under recent legislation governing operations of the bureau, no claim agent, except the recognized representatives of The American Legion, the Red Cross and such other organizations as shall be approved by the director, shall be recognized in the presentation of adjudication of claims.

It has been pointed out to Veterans Bureau officials that numerous unofficial organizations have sprung up throughout the country announcing their intent and function as that of assisting disabled veterans to win their claim through the bureau's monetary consideration. The Red Cross and other recognized organizations which assist the disabled in their compensation are so gratuitously, at the time being the attorney in fact for the bureau.
